Blankets at J. J. Sheehy's are sold at such prices that customers may be seen coming out of the store every day with armsful of bargains in the above mentioned goods. See advertisement in this issue.

An Important Purchase.

It is stated that the Grand Trunk Company have recently made the purchase of the old Cobourg and Peterborough railroad from Mr. Pearce, who was in negotiation with the committee of the new railway through Northumberland for its purchase.

St. Patrick's Day and the Irish Problem.

Mr. J.J. Curran, M.P. for Montreal centre, will deliver an address in the Opera House, Peterborough, under the auspices of the Peterborough Branch of the Irish National League, upon the subject of the "Irish Problem," on Monday evening, March 18th, St. Patrick's Day falling on a Sunday this year.

The Opera House.

Mr. Chas. F. Verner and his company presented the patriotic Irish play "Shamus O'Brien" at the opera house Friday night to a large audience. He fully sustained his reputation and realized all that was expected of him from the complimentary notices published. The company is a good one with a strong "star" in Mr. Verner.

In Aid of the Protestant Home.

The lecture of the day. Mr. E. Carswell of Oshawa, will deliver one of his most popular lectures in the Opera House, Peterborough, on Tuesday night, Feb. 26th. Doors open at 7.30 chair to be taken at 8 o'clock. Admission 10 cents. Everybody come. 4d44

Retiring from Business.

Owing to ill health we regret to say that Mr. John Braden is compelled to retire from the grocery business. By reference to his advertisement, the public will learn that he is selling his entire stock of the very freshest groceries, canned goods and provisions at cost. His sale will only last for two weeks. Everything must go as he is giving up immediate possession of his premises.

Lacrosse Trophy.

Mr. C. J. Phelan, Secretary of the Riverside Lacrosse club, has received the championship banner won by the club last season. It is a rich, pretty and tasty trophy, of red and blue silk with golden trimmings, and has inscribed on it "C. L. A. North Eastern District Champions." The banner will be exhibited at Sanderson's jewelry store. The trophy is held subject to recall by the association.

Sunday Drinking.

Sunday night a stranger in town got drunk and became involved in a fracas at an hotel, and was badly cut on the head with a broken bottle. The disturbance was quelled by the police and the injured man arrested and looked after. Dr. Clarke was summoned and stitched up the wound. At the police court this morning he was allowed to go on promising to appear to-morrow. It is probable other parties will be implicated and the hotelkeeper charged with a breach of the Scott Act.

He was Sat Upon.

A good story is told of how Mr. Carswell, who lectures in the opera house to-morrow nigh, was effectively "sat upon" by a woman. One day last week just after the heavy storm he was travelling in a stage near Kingston, and the vehicle was upset by a huge billow of "the beautiful." Among the passengers was a very large woman, whose 260 pounds of humanity landed fairly upon Mr. Carswell in the pitch-out. The latter disappeared from sight, but after the woman had been extricated from the snow by the stage driver a glimpse of Mr. Carswell's legs was caught protruding from the snow. He was pulled out nearly suffocated, and after he got himself into shape again they all enjoyed a hearty laugh.

Hymeneal.

On Tuesday evening, Feb. 19th, a pleasant event occurred at the residence of Mr. J. Anderson, Ashburnham, being the marriage of his daughter, Maggie, to Mr. Byron Decker, of Otonabee. The Rev. Mr. Bell performed the ceremony. The bride was becomingly attired in a cream colored dress and was assisted by her sister Minnie, and a little niece of the groom's from Toronto. The groom was supported by Mr. D. H. Bennett of Otonabee and Master Charlie Anderson, brother of the bride. The bride was the recipient of many handsome and costly presents. After the sumptuous wedding supper the happy couple drove to the residence of Mr. Decker, Sr., Otonabee, where the purpose spending their honeymoon, after which they intend taking up their residence in the Northwest. We extend to Mr. and Mrs. Decker our hearty congratulations.

Trotting Horse Sold.

Mr. W. S. Park, of Hatton, Bishopton, Scotland, during a visit to Ontario last fall, took a fancy to Canadian trotting horses and since his return has instructed his agent, Mr. R. D. Dundas, of "The Lowlands," Clydesdale Stock Farm, Springville, seven miles from Peterborough to purchase one for him. His wishes have been carried out this week, Mr. Dundas having bought the "green" horse "Sergeant" from Mr. John McKague, Cobourg. "Sergeant" trotted here in the races last week, in the "green" and 2.50 classes, winning the green race in three straight heats, and the 2.50 in the 3rd, 4th and 5th heats, in 2.31, 2.32 and 2.32. Sergeant is sired by "Tariff" (2.20½), is half-brother to the celebrated stallion, "Tariff Junior" (2.29½). Sergeant" trotted here in the races last owned by Mr. James Beatty, Cobourg. Mr. Beatty claims Sergeant to be the fastest green horse in Canada for the handling he has had, having only been driven four different times by him and never by anyone else before coming to Peterborough.

Literary Notes.

The Canada Presbyterian marks the commencement of its eighteenth volume by an enlargement that must make this old established journal more than ever welcome to thousands of readers. The large addition to its size, and the high character of its Correspondence, Editorials and Contributed Articles can not fail to add to the Presbyterian's already wide circulation and greatly extend its influence for good. "Knoxonian's" racy and able article, published every week, is alone worth the yearly subscription, which, notwithstanding the increase in size, remains at its old price, $2.00 per annum. The offer of a "Peerless" Bible as a premium to the getters up of a club, should be the means of enlisting a host of willing workers all over the country. Send to the Presbyterian Printing and Publishing Co., 5 Jordan Street, Toronto, for free specimen copy and circular.

Church Chimes.

The Methodist churches are preparing for the advent of Messrs. Crossley and Hunter. Wednesday night the usual prayer meetings will be held, and Thursday night a union prayer meeting will be held in the George street church and Friday evening in the Charlotte street church.

In the Presbyterian and Methodist churches yesterday some of Crossley and Hunter's anthems were sung by the choirs.

Rev. Mr. Warren, of St. Luke's, preached in St. John's Church Sunday night, and Rev. Mr. Davidson, of St. John's, took the services in St. Luke's.

An adjourned meeting of the Evangelical Alliance will be held this evening. All parties wishing to join are requested to attend.

News Nuggets.

—The Orillia News-Letter says that Clancy's "Little Jim" is a ringer, being Dick Wright (3.19½).

—Otonabee lodge Oddfellows have a little friendly "convernat" this evening, open to members of the Order only.

—Mr. Hooper, of Smith, lost a valuable horse on Saturday last by inflammation. The animal was worth $150.

—A meeting of the town council is called for to-night to ratify the high license by-law.

—The third annual convention of the Canadian Lacrosse Association will be held at Niagara Falls, Ont., on Tuesday, April 16th, 1889.

Police Court.

SATURDAY Feb. 23rd.

Peter Phelan was fined $2 and costs for being drunk. He was arrested at three o'clock this morning by P. C. McGinty.

Thos. Trennum was arrested yesterday on a charge of stealing wood from the corporation yard. Mr. A. Hall, chairman of the charity committee, was complainant. The prisoner admitted taking the wood but said he had the mayor's premission. Mr. Stevenson said that Trennum had asked him for some wood and he had told him he might have some, thinking Trennum would go to his own yard for it. The latter however took the wood from the corporation yard. As there appeared to have been a mistake the prisoner was discharged.

Comments on Canada.

Harper's Monthly for March

Will contain "Comments on Canada," by Charles Dudley Warner, accompanied by a striking portrait of the Right Hon. Sir John A. Macdonald; will appear in Harper's Magazine for March, 1889, which will be published February 21st. This article describes the topography, climate, system of government of the Dominion and of the provinces, and the political issues; and the author gives his views on the Canadian sentiment towards England, on the French Canadian element, on retaliation and commercial reciprocity, annexation and independence, and the future of the Dominion. Mr. Warner is an accurate and sympathetic observer, and his conclusions will, doubtless, command the attention which they deserve. This number also contains beautifully illustrated articles on the Institute of France; Vienna; Norway and its People; William M. Chase, Painter, etc., etc. Leave your order at the Peterborough Bookstore, J. R. Stratton (late A. L. Davis & Co.)

Personal.

The numerous friends of Mr. Louis Leplante, will learn with deep regret, of the serious illness of his wife. Mrs. Leplante is a very amiable and estimable lady and the many friends of herself and husband sympathize with them in their affliction. This afternoon Mrs. Leplante's improved condition leads to the hope of her ultimate recovery.

The Albuquerque, New Mexico, Morning Democrat has the following in reference to Mr. F. H. Lithgow, brother of Mr. R. H. Lithgow, town:—Mr. F. H. Lithgow, who has charge of our dispensing department, is a graduate of the Ontario College of Pharmacy, and has had a long and varied experience both in Canada and the United States.

Ashburnham Brevities.

The ball which Mr. H. Calcutt gave on Thursday night was in every particular a success. The town hall was comfortably filled with a company of invited friends. The music was furnished by Professor Doucet. The dancing was kept up until a late hour and a very enjoyable night was spent. It would be a rarity to have any event a failure with which Mr. Calcutt was connected.

The secretary-treasurer of the school board has laid in a stock of wood at the school for next year.

The tax collector is evidently going to make the taxes come in earlier this year than usual. He has another sale of chattels advertised for taxes.

The children's concert which is to take place in St. Luke's this evening promises to be a very interesting one.

At the close of the regular exercises Friday afternoon the pupils of the Ashburnham public school presented Mr. J. J. Rooney, Principal of the school, with the following address and six handsome volumes of poems as a memento of their regard for him. Mr. Rooney leaves the school on Monday to enter the Peterborough Business College, having formed a partnership with Mr. Bean. Mr. Rooney made an appropriate and feeling reply to the address.

TO MR. J. J. ROONEY:—

DEAR TEACHER,—We, the pupils of the Ashburnham public school, have learned with deep regret that you are about to sever the relationship which, for the past four years, has existed between us as teacher and scholars. During that time you have proved yourself a faithful and earnest teacher; and we feel that, owing to your patient and unwearied efforts, our school has not only sustained its good reputation but has made real progress. We hope you will accept these volumes of poems as a slight mark of our appreciation and regard for you and as a memento of this occasion.

In the new sphere of labor upon which you are about to enter, we feel sure that the same energy, patience and courtesy, which have characterized you in the past, cannot fail to win success in the future. We are glad to know that, although you will be no longer with us a teacher, you are not removing from the village, and that we may still have the pleasure of meeting you and of knowing that you take an interest in our welfare.

We are your affectionate pupils, (signed on behalf of the school):

Edna Throop,	Hodder Wilson,
Jennie Lipsett,	Samuel Adams,
Minnie Hamilton,	Rollie Glover,
Lizzie Noyes,	Fred Milliken.

A Peterborough Orator.

Mr. J. H. Long's Address in Toronto.

Mr. J. H. Long was one of the speakers who addressed an immense Imperial Federation meeting in Toronto on Saturday. As a speaker, he made an excellent impression, even those who do not subscribe wholly to his views, admitting as much. Summarizing his address, the Globe says:—

The first speaker of the evening was Mr. J. H. Long, of Peterborough. He is a man of medium height, with a pale face and blonde side whiskers. His voice is rich and musical, his actions impulsive, and his oratory feverish. If his object was to inflame the hearts of the audience with the fire of patriotism, he succeeded. Calm enough were his first sentences, pointing out the three destinies that lie before the Canadian people, namely, Annexation, Independence or Imperial Federation. The first he dismissed with contempt; the second was impossible with a hostile, not a friendly, nation to the south; the third was the proper path. Then he warmed up as he compared Canada's progress and her institutions with those of the United States. His speech was illuminated by metaphor and garnished by rhetorical bouquets that, reflected and scattered through the hall, and prepared the minds of the auditors for the sympathetic reception of argumentative discourse. The night was bitter cold, and Mr. Long's task seemed to be to inundate the auditors with a flood of animal spirits, and as human beings must be warmed before they can do any work well, so his exuberance, like a good stove in a cold house, answered a good purpose.

The necessities of Imperial Federation, he said, were:—(1) A scheme of Imperial defence; (2) a council to deal with great Imperial questions; (3) a scheme of emigration so that the surplus population of the Mother Land might people the forests and prairies of her Colonies; (4) a clear understanding with Great Britain as to the questions that shall be her concern and what shall be ours; (5) promotion of Imperial trade and preferential arrangements; (6) dissemination in the Empire of information relative to its different portions; (7) preservation of local autonomy; and lastly, and most important of all, the cultivation of a spirit of loyalty, to keep the lustre of the Empire untarnished and its glory undimmed. He concluded his address with a peroration, during which he called upon Canadians to perform their task of keeping the old flag floating on this northern part of the hemisphere. And when they were asked to haul it down and trample it underfoot from heart and lips should spring their indignant protest. When Mr. Long sat down the applause was loud and continued.

A Jubilee Match—The Governor General's Trophy Contest—Games To-morrow.

Keene and Port Perry are playing a match on the curling rink this afternoon for a Jubilee medal.

Skips T. P. Attrill and Judge Weller take a rink each to Campbellford to-morrow to meet Belleville and Campbellford in friendly strife.

An effort is being made to have the Lindsay-Peterborough match for the Governor General's medal played at home without putting both clubs to the expense and loss of time in going to Ottawa. Next Friday has been named by the Governor-General as the only day upon which he is at liberty to entertain the curlers, but it has been found inconvenient for the clubs to play on that date, as Skip Flavelle, of Lindsay, leaves for Winnipeg this week. Permission has been given to play the match at home, but here another difficulty has arisen. Lindsay wants Peterborough to go there, but the latter decline to be tempted to play upon bad ice and upon conditions which would ensure their defeat. They in turn offered the Lindsay men neutral ice (the centre ice used for skating) if they will play here, but the Lindsay curlers refuse the proposition and say they will go to Ottawa before they will play in Peterborough. Their action savors somewhat of bluff and pigheadedness. They know their own crooked ice perfectly and the Peterborough curlers would be defeated before they could learn its eccentricities; while Peterborough can offer them perfectly neutral ice where the match could be played upon equal terms. The Peterborough curlers will not be "bluffed," and if necessary will go to Ottawa, but they hope to arrive at some amicable arrangement to-night or to-morrow. They are willing to play at Bobcaygeon, Keene or anywhere in the district—except at Lindsay.

North Smith.

Notwithstanding the stormy weather and bad roads this part of the township is all astir with revival meetings, socials and tea meeting entertainments and once in a great while a wedding. Yet it is very difficult to get old hardened sinners to take any interest in the matter of saving their own souls; they seem to be very much like Felix of St. Paul's time except the trembling. Yet we find quite a number of our Indian men and women of Chemong village yielding to the truth. At Selwyn Rev. Messrs. Johnston and Coons have just begun special services but the weather has been very much against the work so far. The meeting at Chemong will close for a part of next week to allow the Indians of that village to have their annual tea meeting which will take place on Thursday evening, 28th.

When the roads get a little better I will try and get out and give you something of more importance.—CON.

Otonabee.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Otonabee council met February 18th, 1889, all the members present. On motion, the fee for ball or dance in Town Hall was reduced to $4 00. The clerk was instructed to write to Philip W. Rinkhirst, requesting him to attend next meeting of council to endeavor to come to an agreement with regard to concession line fence opposite his lot. Michael Crowley requested a survey to be made to define the north half of the allowance of road between lots 11 and 12 in the east half of 17 con., which he is to receive by resolution in 1887 in lieu of 18 feet for road, given by him across the north end of the southeast quarter of lot 13, con. 17; the Reeve was instructed to get survey made. P. Fitzgerald request ed the council to open and establish a road around O'Brien's hill on lot 27, con. 8. Messrs. Anderson and Johnston were appointed to see David Knox about right of way for said proposed road; on motion, lot 29, con. 9, was put into road Division No. 55. Samuel Sargent received $4.00 to assist S. McNair. The Treasurer's accounts was finally audited by council. The Clerk was instructed to prepare a by-law to repeal by-laws No. 536 and 537. The Treasurer was ordered to pay the following sums, Auditors, each $2.00; R. McIntyre, account town hall, $2.08; J. M. Drummond, salary, postage, etc., $151.11; the personal property tax on west half of east quarter lot 28, con. 9, was refunded.

Council adjourned till 18th March.

AT THE GERMAN CAPITAL.

Bismarck Weary of Colonial Complications—The Samoan Matter.

BERLIN, Feb. 23.—Prince Bismarck yesterday gave a dinner to the members of the Lower House of the Prussian Diet, and during the serving of coffee complained of the heavy labors created for him by what he termed the "so-called colonies." It was impossible, the Chancellor said, to allow trivial disputes to introduce any discordant element in Germany's relations with the great friendly powers, as the slightest disturbance of the harmony prevailing between the Imperial Government and foreign states might have most prejudicial effects upon German commercial and business relations.

Prince Bismarck is said to have been greatly annoyed at the Consul's proposals to annex Samoa, and The Vossische Zeitung's question as to what would be thought of a Consul who telegraphed a proposal to annex Zurich or Luxemburg is believed to be identical with the opinion of the Chancellor. In explanation of the reported ordering of a German squadron to Samoa, The National Zeitung observes that the impending punishment of Mataafa will have no effect upon Germany's relations with England and America, the right of Germany to intervene in the matter not being contested in any quarter. The report must, however, be received with reserve. The squadron, is provisioned for Port Said, in order, probably, to be in readiness to proceed to East Africa, or to await the development of affairs. It may at least be assumed that the squadron will only go to Samoa in the event of the American Government proving exacting or unreasonable.

Prince Bismarck's desire to avoid colonial troubles is due in a large measure to the uncertainty of European politics, especially those of France. The Tirard Cabinet is regarded as simply a short respite before the inevitable struggle.

THE COLD WAVE.

Various New England Cities Report Extremely Low Temperatures.

BOSTON, Mass, Feb. 24.—Very cold weather is reported to-day from various points in New England. At Marlow, N. H., the thermometer registered 36° below zero at 6 a.m. At Concord, N.H., 20 below; at Montpelier, Vt., 26 below. Chatham, Mass., reports Chatham Bay frozen from Harding's Beach to Monomoy.

Prof. Bell Banqueted.

NEW YORK, Feb. 23.—Professor Robert Bell of the Dominion Geological Survey was entertained at a dinner party at the Hotel Brunswick this evening by Mr. Erastus Wiman and prominent Canadians. The guests included Andrew Carnegie, Sir Roderick Cameron, Mr. Leckie of Spring Hill Mines, N. S., Jackson Wallace, George Iles, the editors of The Engineering and Mining Journal and Iron Age and the President of the American Mining Institute.

Mr. Wiman in proposing the health of Professor Bell said he desired to show to his American friends what style of man it was in whom he and others were relying for their information regarding the enormous riches which Canada possessed in her mineral deposits. Professor Bell, perhaps more than any one else, knew what was under the earth throughout the greater half of the continent, and to bring him before the American public and let them understand his intelligence and reliability was a great pleasure. He congratulated the professor upon his services to his native country and expressed great gratification at the opportunity afforded to show him some attention.

Professor Bell replied in fitting terms, especially referring to the increasing interest which was being manifested throughout the United States in the vast mineral resources of Canada.

CLEVELAND'S
SUPERIOR
THE PUREST AND BEST

Is made only of strictly pure grape cream of tartar, strictly pure bicarbonate of soda, and a small portion of flour as a preservative, nothing else whatever, and is warranted entirely free from alum, ammonia, phosphates, lime, and all the adulterants frequently found in baking powders. The character of materials used, their purity, and the nicety of their combination, render Cleveland's superior baking powder the most healthful and most economical in use, and it always affords wholesome, nutritious, and delicious food.

It is recommended for purity, healthfulness and efficacy by Government and State chemists, chemists of Boards of Health, and professors in institutions of learning throughout the country.

Thirty Years Paying Rent in Peterborough.

I frequently hear statements akin to above, followed by remarks of deep regret for having missed many golden opportunities of buying whole lots at a price they would now have to pay for one foot of the same land. Buying property in Peterborough is the safest kind of a safe and profitable investment. I have at present cheap homes, medium class homes and a few exceedingly fine Residences and grounds some of which were built for home comforts, regardless of cost. Uncontrollable circumstances have now caused those to be offered for immediate sale much under value. I commence at $475, for good house and large lot. I can suit any reasonable buyer. I have also good value in Market Gardens and Farms.

TURNBULL'S

The Flood of the Season's French and English Printed Calicoes is rolling in—white capped and aglow phosphorescent, color play. How the Priscellas of the past would joy to see them? Pretty as you have seen them, they were never so handsome before. Persian designs, leaves, buds, flowers, polka, dots, plain stripes, scrabbles and scrawls, angles and tangles. More than 300 different styles, small figures, large figures, and mourning designs, better printing was never done 'exquisite.' If you don't want to buy, don't pass the window or come in. Prices range from 6 to 15 cents.

The trouble with low grade Marseilles Bed Spreads has been loose threads at the back—lace, all right, but you didn't like the fiddle-string arrangement at the back, needn't. Here are $2.50 Marseilles Bed Spreads, full size and handsome patterns, with backs firm and well finished. Look at this honey-comb quilt for $1, which needs no apology for either size or weight.

Flannelettes—what are they? Are they all-wool? No they are mostly cotton, finished to imitate a Flannel, and especially adapted for childrens' dresses and ladies' wrappers. They consist of Cream Grounds, with pink, blue and cardinal Stripes, blue and white, pink and cream, pink and blue, and pink, cream and grey, some 18 patterns in all—the best quality being only 12½ cents a yard.

Opened out this week, a line of Linen Tablings, the maker of which is noted the world over. They are specially suited for every day wear—the warp is well twisted and they wash and iron well.

Before you hear from us again, I will have visited the wholesale markets where I will be on the look-out for Bargains for my Customers.

TOPICS FROM THE CAPITAL

WHAT THE DOMINION LAWMAKERS DID YESTERDAY.

A Question of Legislative Jurisdiction—Petition For and Against Adam Brown's Cruelty to Animals Act.

OTTAWA, Feb. 25.—The House divided yesterday on the third reading of Mr. Shanly's bill to incorporate the Alberta Railway and Coal Company. This is Sir Alexander Galt's company and is destined to develop the coal fields of the Lethbridge district. Mr. Watson of Marquette wanted a clause inserted providing that the maximum rate of coal freights should not exceed one cent per ton per mile. The House defeated the amendment by a vote of 97 to 49 and the bill was read a third time. So was Mr. Mara's bill respecting the Kootenay and Athabasca Railway Company, a British Columbia enterprise.

Col. Amyot, in a speech occupying four hours, charged that the Quebec Voltigeurs were badly used after they were called out to suppress the rebellion. The Minister of Militia in reply said the regiment was as well treated as any other.

On the second reading of a private bill respecting Queen's College, Kingston, Mr. Mills of Bothwell raised the question of jurisdiction. The bill was in the line of amending an act passed by the Dominion Parliament conferring certain additional powers in the election of trustees for Queen's beyond those given by its Royal Charter. Mr. Mills said that it being a question of education was within the purview of the Ontario Assembly.

Mr. Kirkpatrick said Queen's was a seat of learning with Dominion ramifications and influences and was therefore not confined in its operations to the province. Sir John Macdonald remarked that if this Parliament had the power to pass a former act pertaining to Queen's it had the power to amend it. He recommended that the bill be read a second time pro forma and that after the Private Bills Committee had dealt with it, the question of jurisdiction could be dealt with by the House. This was agreed to after considerable discussion.

Mr. Mulock, when the bill authorizing the Ontario Loan and Debenture Company to consolidate its borrowing powers and to issue debenture stock was called up, said that it would be a good thing if the Government would introduce some general legislation dealing with loan companies. He called the attention of the House to the necessities which led up to the banking act, which was put upon the statute book to avoid the necessity of banks having to come down to Parliament for these special acts.

Sir John Macdonald said the suggestion was a good one, but he could not promise any such general measure this session.

Owing to the absence of Mr. Somerville, who has charge of the bill, the bill was allowed to stand till Wednesday.

Several other private bills were advanced a step.

Seven petitions were presented to the House yesterday, principally from Montreal, Hamilton and Toronto, against Adam Brown's anti-cruelty to animals bill. Petitions in favor were also presented. It is pretty certain that the bill will be slaughtered in committee of the whole.

The House adjourned at 11.50.

To Codify the Timber Laws.

OTTAWA, Feb. 26.—The Minister of Inland Revenue will move the House into committee on Wednesday on his resolution in favor of assimilating and codifying the laws of the different provinces relating to the inspection, culling and measurement of timber and lumber. The resolution provides for the payment of inspectors at the rate of $10 per day and not exceeding $300 in any one year to each inspector, and of an annual salary not exceeding $3000 to each chief inspector; that the manufacturer of timber or lumber shall pay to the Crown an annual registration fee of $2 if his annual output is less than 1,000,000 feet board measure and of $10 when such output is greater, and in addition one-fifth of a cent for each thousand feet board measure, one-tenth of a cent for each car of 40 cubic feet of square timber; that as respects the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec out of the sum so paid and any moneys granted by Parliament the Governor-in-Council may grant annuities not exceeding $200 to such cullers as are now in receipt of a like annuity or who are discharged.

In State Quo.

OTTAWA, Feb. 25.—In the Senate to-day Judge Gowan of Barrie made a long address on a motion of which he had given notice on Friday enquiring whether the Government intended to submit to Parliament a measure for the abolition of the grand jury system and substituting some other and more suitable system of public prosecution. The leader of the Government admitted that there were many abuses in connection with the present system and that they had given it attention, but at present no change would be advised or made.

The Great American Hog.

OTTAWA, Feb. 25.—The tariff tappers continue to throng the Capital. To-day it was the pork packers. Mr. F. W. Fearman, the well-known pork man of Hamilton, had a talk with the Ministers of Finance and Customs to-day. He was accompanied by a dozen members. Mr. Fearman presented a petition which is said to have been signed by 1600 farmers in Ontario praying that the duties on mess pork be made 2 cents less per pound all round. At present the duties vary from 1 to 2 cents. Increased duties are also asked on lard with a view of keeping out the alleged adulterated article from the United States. The lard increase will be actively and energetically opposed by a deputation that is yet to arrive. The great American hog and his products are therefore to be made the object of some lively opposition on this side of the line.

CAPITAL GOSSIP.

A School of Cavalry to Be Established in Toronto this Year.

OTTAWA, Feb. 25.—The Labor Commissioners handed over their report to the Government to-day and it is expected that it will be presented to Parliament some day this week. The occupation of the Commissioners at $10 per day and expenses is, so to speak, about gone.

The Minister of Militia said to-day that the Government would establish a School of Cavalry at Toronto this year, and that a sum for that purpose had been put in the estimates.

Dr. Ferguson is down for a resolution on Wednesday that the Government ought to perpetuate in a suitable way the memory of the men who were slain at Lundy's Lane. It will be remembered that Col. Oliver of Toronto has already reported in favor of a monument at the scene of the famous battlefield near Drummondville.

Hotel Fire in Buffalo.

BUFFALO, Feb. 26.—Early yesterday morning fire broke out in a two-and-a-half-story frame building occupied as a hotel on Broadway. It was dreadfully cold and the building went like powder. The inmates, some fifteen in number, were gotten out with difficulty but lost all their personal effects and were mostly clothed very scantily. Quite a few suffered from light burns but most of the suffering was caused by extreme cold. The loss was $5000.

Winnipeg Wire Whispers.

WINNIPEG, Feb. 22.—It is reported that the Local Government intend wiping out the $4,500,000 guarantee act for the Hudson's Bay Railway and giving a cash bonus of $2000 per mile for the 397 estimated miles, which includes the trunk line to the northern boundary and the necessary branches.

TERRIBLE DISASTER IN A PENNSYLVANIA TOWN.

Several Kegs of Powder Explode in a Spoke Factory at Plymouth and Two Girls and One Man are Killed.

PLYMOUTH, Pa., Feb. 25.—A terrible disaster occurred here to-day, by which ten girls and one man were killed. Back of the Gaylord shaft stood the factory of John Powell, in which were manufactured spokes used by the miners in loosening coal in the mines. The factory employed 184 girls, ranging from 12 to 20 years, and several male workmen. While the majority of the girls were home eating dinner the people were startled by a deafening explosion. They rushed terror stricken to the doors and windows and saw clouds of smoke ascending from the factory. Soon a large crowd had gathered around it and women began wringing their hands as men tarried away when the charred body of a young girl was seen in one of the rooms and the fact became known that at least twenty persons were in the building at the time of the explosion eating their lunch.

The scene was fraught with terror as the girls, some bleeding, others grasping for fresh air, rushed to the windows and screamed frantically for help. A dozen miners from the adjoining colliery arrived and rushed towards the building, but as soon as they stepped near the door another terrific explosion took place and the entire building collapsed, burying in the ruins those who had stood crying for assistance. The brave men, when the smoke and flying debris had settled, rushed among the ruins, and one by one the bodies were found and taken out charred beyond recognition, bleeding and mangled. As mothers recognized some familiar token or piece of dress by which they could tell their loved ones, the scene was heartrending. The bodies, as fast as taken out, were removed to an undertaker's. Their features were so badly mutilated that they were scarcely recognizable.

The killed so far as known are: Kate Jones aged 18, Maggie Lynch 21, Hettie Jones 16, Gladdie Reese 15, Mary Wallers 17, Maggie Richards 27, Mary A. Lake 17, Ruth Powell 19, Esther Powell 23, Jessie Connell 16, George S. Reese, engineer, 40.

John Powell, the proprietor, was badly injured. Business here is at a standstill and the community is plunged in gloom. Several kegs of powder caused the explosion, but how they were exploded is a mystery.

MANITOBA'S FINANCES.

Treasurer Jones' Budget Speech—Proposed Public Institutions.

WINNIPEG, Feb. 25.—In the Legislature to-day Treasurer Jones made his budget speech. The estimated ordinary revenue is $558,925, which includes $435,595 subsidy, $36,000 for liquor licenses, and $18,000 for land title receipts. Besides this there are $720,000 for the purchase of the Red River, Valley Road and $400,000 for the Portage extension. In addition to this there was $235,192 interest due, making the total revenue $1,933,458 from railways.

The estimated expenditure is $673,406, which includes $30,000 for the erection of buildings for land titles office, $30,000 for the erection of a deaf and dumb institute, and $6000 for its maintenance, $20,000 for the erection of a reformatory and home for incurables. In other matters the estimates are about the same as last year.

The criminal libel suit against Barrows was to-day postponed till Wednesday.

Anthrax has broken out near Lethbridge.

Ambitious City Notes.

HAMILTON, Feb. 25.—At the Police Court this morning, John Taylor was committed for trial on the charge of stabbing Charles Gamet, on Sept. 23 last.

This morning Dr. Oille, president of the Niagara Central Railway, and two of the directors, met the railway committee of the city council to discuss the prospects of bringing the road into Hamilton. The conference lasted two hours and was without definite result.

Charles Kelk, the young man who pleaded guilty to four charges of larceny the other day, was this morning sentenced to three months in jail.

James Gilshrie and Dennis Kelly were this morning committed for trial on the charge of stabbing Joe Bryan and Billy McCallum in a row in the Arcade saloon last Monday night.

The loss by the fire in Young Bros.' factory on Sunday morning is about $1000.

A Smash-up at Mt. Forest.

MOUNT FOREST, Feb. 25.—A smash-up on the Teeswater branch of the Canadian Pacific railway occurred at this point at 2 o'clock on Sunday morning, owing to the heavy snowstorm. The train from the east consisting of two engines, van, and first and second coaches had orders to cross the plow and two engines here. The rails had apparently spread at the switches, allowing the tender to jump the track, the two engines breaking loose. The baggage car struck the tank, damaging it, and the coaches following, left the rails and scattered all over the place. The two engines which broke loose kept on, and ran for a mile and a quarter at a great speed, and finally struck in a snow drift. The plow from Teeswater with two engines ran into them, completely wrecking the four engines, and knocking the plow into kindling wood. Fortunately no lives were lost.

THANKS FOR DELIVERANCE.

MOUNT FOREST, Feb. 24.—Before the singing of the closing hymn at St. Paul's church to-night the congregation rose in response to the invitation of Rev. Edwin Redcliffe and sang the Doxology as a token of thankfulness to Almighty God for the preservation of passengers and trainmen from death and serious injury in the accident of this (early) morning on the C. P. R. The men engaged in working on the two wrecks are having a hard time, as the weather is bitterly cold.

Grist Mill Burnt at Milton.

MILTON, Feb. 25.—At about 10.30 on Saturday night fire was discovered in the steam grist mill, a large frame building. The fire had got such headway that it was impossible to do more than keep it from the adjacent frame buildings, with which the mill was nearly surrounded. The mill was owned by John Shaw of Toronto, was leased and run by C. K. Stewart, who had lately got in new machinery and made other important improvements. Estimated loss $7000, insured for $3000.

Nevin's Bad Beating.

TECUMSEH, Feb. 25.—Wm. Nevin, living a mile and a-half west of Tecumseh, was returning home from Windsor on Saturday night, the worse of liquor. He was overtaken by some party or parties unknown to him and beaten in a most fearful manner, receiving several scalp wounds, which may prove fatal. Nevin was found lying on the track of the Grand Trunk Railway Sunday morning, and was picked up by Conductor George Smith of a freight train bound west, who took him to his home.

Two Fatalities at Montreal.

MONTREAL, Feb. 25.—A servant named Elizabeth Williams, aged 26, was cooking at the stove this morning when her dress caught fire and before she could be rescued she was burned to death.

While Narcisse Lemaire was working in an excavation in a brickyard in Parthenay street this morning, the earth caved in and he was suffocated.

The Ice Bridge at Windsor.

WINDSOR, Feb. 26.—Crossing the river on the ice was possible yesterday for the first time this winter. The ferry boats are still having great trouble in crossing. The car ferry Lansdowne yesterday gave up the attempt to reach the Wabash slip and the cars of that company were transported around the city. The Michigan Central boats have a strip of clear water and are not having any difficulty.

Two Children Burnt to Death.

BATTLE CREEK, Feb. 26.—The House of Ernest Youngs at Ransom, six miles from this city, burned at noon yesterday. Two children, a boy and a girl 4 and 5 years of age respectively, perished in the flames. Mr. Youngs was in this city and Mrs. Youngs at a neighbor's when the fire broke out.

MR. MORLEY'S COMPLAINT

THE ADMINISTRATION IN IRELAND CONDEMNED.

The Member for Newcastle Speaks on His Amendment to the Address in Reply to the Queen's Speech.

LONDON, Feb. 25.—In the House of Commons this afternoon Mr. Sexton gave notice that he would introduce a bill to amend the laws relating to contempt of court. [Cheers.]

Mr. Morley moved the adoption of his amendment to the address in reply to the Queen's speech condemning the administration in Ireland as harsh, unjust and oppressive and asking that measures to content the Irish and re-establish a feal union of Great Britain and Ireland be adopted. In supporting his motion Mr. Morley asked why, if the condition of Ireland was better as claimed by the Government, proceedings against Irish members of the House of Commons were more frequent. These proceedings, to him, seemed a sign of alarm and dismay instead of confidence. Mr. Morley strongly condemned the singular lack of prudence, foresight and care shown by the administration in Ireland during the last few months. The arrest of Father McFadden at Gweedore, he said, was marked by every bad quality that could accompany a judicial act. It was worthy of the worst exploit of the ruffian judge in Scotland who, a century ago, said, "Give me a prisoner and I'll find the law." Mr. Morley referred at length to the recent arrests in Ireland and ridiculed the idea of arresting men for such offences as cheering William O'Brien, etc. Referring to the imprisoned members of Parliament he urged that while their offences were limited to speaking and writing treason they should be treated as first-class misdemeanors. [Cheers.] The time was swiftly coming when an irresistible appeal would ascend from the nation asking Her Majesty to recur to the sense of the people as that they might decide the great issues now dividing the Government and the Opposition. [Cheers.] The Opposition required the fullest explanation regarding the employment of Irish magistrates, crown solicitors and police in framing The Times' case. They demanded to know why documents were handed to The Times for the purposes of a plot to which, it might be proved, the Government had unfortunately become the dupes and accessories. [Cheers.]

Mr. Morley said Balfour had admitted that the police tacitly erred in arresting Father McFadden. He contended that the arrests at Tralee on the occasion of O'Brien's trial were illegal. No Home Secretary or English magistrate would venture to act as though the arrests were in conformity with English law. [Cheers.] Balfour had sent a doctor to O'Brien for the sake of the Government and not on the ground of humanity. He quoted from a speech in which Balfour said he did not think he should allow O'Brien to ruin his constitution for the purpose of injuring the Government. Balfour had asserted that he had no power to relax the prison rules, but he did relax them in the case of the Catholic clergymen for fear of wounding or insulting the religious sentiment of the people.

The Deputies' Day's Work.

PARIS, Feb. 25.—The Chamber of Deputies to-day passed a bill to ensure the freedom and secrecy of the ballot. The Chamber then adjourned.

The French Shed Russian Blood.

ST. PETERSBURG, Feb. 25.—The Novoe Vremya and The Viedomosti, commenting upon the bombardment of Segallo and the capture of the Atchinoff expedition by a French cruiser, express indignation because the French shed Russian blood. Both papers think it doubtful whether violence was unavoidable. The Grashdanin commences ironically on Franco-Russian friendship and says it hears that the members of the expedition will be brought to Odessa as prisoners of war. The Svet reproduces an official communication and a report of the incident, which refer unfavorably to Atchinoff's conduct.

A Farmhouse Burnt.

ST. WILLIAMS, Feb. 26.—The dwelling house of Richard Johnson, farmer, about two miles east of here was totally consumed by fire about 8 o'clock on Sunday morning. The fire originated in a defective chimney and was not noticed until it was too late to save the building. Contents nearly all lost, no insurance, loss about $2000.

A Dwelling Burnt.

PORT HOPE, Feb. 26.—On Saturday evening the dwelling of Mr. Henry Rowe, Lot 26, Township of Hamilton, Cobourg-road, was with all the contents totally destroyed. Mr. Rowe, who lives alone, had just returned from Port Hope, made a fire in the stove and then stepped over to Mr. Burnham's, a neighbor. The fire had made such headway when discovered that it was impossible to save anything. No insurance.

ONTARIO LEGISLATURE.

A Lot of Bills Advanced a Stage—Sheep to be Protected.

TORONTO, Feb. 26.—In the Local House yesterday Mr. Freeman introduced a bill to amend the Devolution of Estates Act. Mr. Morgan followed with a bill to amend the act respecting Game and Fur-Bearing Animals.

Mr. Fraser's bill to amend the Ontario Factories Act was read a third time. Then the House went into committee to consider a number of private bills. These were passed through: Mr. Balfour's bill to amend the act incorporating the township of Pelee. Mr. Fell's bill respecting a railway debenture debt of Laxton, Digby and Longford. Mr. Fraser's bill to enable the trustees under the will of the late Hon. James Morse to sell real estate, Mr. Cunnee's bill respecting Port Arthur, Mr. Balfour's bill to consolidate the debt of Amherstburg.

Mr. French moved the second reading of a bill to amend the act imposing a tax on dogs and for the better protection of sheep. The proposed legislation really works for the protection of the dog—it is in fact as Mr. French remarked a wolf in sheep's clothing. The passage of the bill was opposed by the Government and was at length withdrawn by Mr. French.

Mr. Waters moved the second reading of the bill to amend the act respecting mortgages and sales of personal property. After a good deal of discussion the bill was withdrawn.

The second reading of the bill to amend the act respecting the study of anatomy was moved by Mr. McKay. He explained that according to the law which now existed persons whether they are relatives or not endeavor by means of subscription to demand that a medical subject shall not go to the medical school. He wished to place the educational institutions of Ontario on least on a level with those of the sister province of Quebec. His bill, he explained, would prevent the unwarrantable interference with the study of anatomy. The bill passed its second reading.

Mr. Waters moved the second reading of the bill to amend the Municipal Act, which provides that the county shall be liable for the construction of bridges 100 feet and over in length. After discussion the mover withdrew the bill.

Bills to amend the Ditches and Watercourse Act, the Ontario Insurance Act and the act imposing a tax on dogs and for the protection of sheep went through a second reading.

Death of Mr. Lyman English.

OSHAWA, Feb. 22.—Lyman English, barrister, died this afternoon, aged 53 years. He had been married twice, his last wife surviving him as well as two sons, the offspring of his former wife. Mr. English came to Oshawa in 1862, where he has since been a successful lawyer, having accumulated a large amount of property. Some four years ago he received a paralytic stroke from which he never recovered. His death is deeply regretted.

DUPLICATE DEPUTATIONS

Will Visit Ottawa, Toronto and Hamilton.

For Solicitation and Investigation—The Council Asked to Make a Tour of the Suburbs—Looking After the Five Limits—A Plan to Increase the Number of Licenses—A Sinking Fund Improvement—The Drill Shed, Little Lake, Spalding's Bay and the Market Square to be Subjects for Consideration—An Adjournment for Six Weeks.

At the special meeting of the council Monday night there were present Messrs. Hartley, Kendry, Rutherford, Beptie, Dawson, A. Hall, E. H. D. Hall, Kelly, Davidson and Cahill. In the absence of Mayor Stevenson, Mr. Rutherford was called to the chair. Mr. Stevenson entered later, having just arrived from Toronto, and took his seat.

Mr. W. Bridges complained of unjust dog tax. The tax was ordered to be remitted on Mr. Bridges making the statutory declaration.

ESTABLISHING A PRECEDENT.

Mr. R. Wainwright asked permission to erect a temporary frame addition to his ice house on George street. On motion of Mr. Beptie the matter was left to the Inspector. There was considerable discussion regarding the effectiveness of the by-law, Mr. Dawson and Mr. Cahill contending that the by law was useless and should be repealed, and pointing out a number of instances where the by-law had been broken. Messrs. Kendry and Kelly contended that the by-law was all right and if it had not been carried out it was the Inspector's fault. The question was asked, if this were made a precedent and Mr. Wainwright was given permission to erect the addition, temporary though it was, where would this thing end?

An invitation was received from Sault Ste. Marie, asking the council to visit and inspect the opening of the system of waterworks there.

AFTER THE LAW BREAKERS.

The members of the Women's Christian Temperance Union sent in an appeal, in view of the fact that all the saloons and hotels were continually violating the Canada Temperance Act, asking the council to pay an official visit of inspection to all these places and see that the law was enforced. The communication was referred to the Committee on Police Supervision to report.

ACCOUNTS.

T. E. Boddy, tickets for charity $2 00
Rathbun Co., charity 6 50
P. Heffernan, charity 5 00

The accounts were ordered to be paid.

REGARDING DEPUTATIONS.

Mr. Davidson presented the report of the Finance Committee, recommending the payment of the following accounts:—Rathbun Co., $3 50; P. Connal & Co., $55.00; Times Printing Co., $3.00; Robt. White, $15.00; Kingan & Co., $1.75; Geo. I. Reesal, $2.00; T. Smith, $7.38; John Craig, $2.00; Jos. Edgecombe, $10.00. The committee also recommended that a deputation proceed to Ottawa with reference to the petition of Col. Rogers re building a drill shed and armory, and also to urge on the government the necessity of dredging Little Lake and filling up Spalding's Bay, such committee to consist of the Mayor and each members of the council as can go; also recommending that the petition of John Gamble be referred to the town solicitor to report to the council his opinion of the same.

Mr. E. H. D. Hall considered it useless for a deputation to visit Ottawa unless they were prepared to state just what amount they were prepared to expend themselves on these improvements. If they had no definite statement to present, he did not believe they would accomplish any more than they had in the past. He moved, and Mr. Dawson seconded, that that clause of the report be not adopted.

Mr. Cahill urged that the deputation should go, for he believed in encouraging the volunteers. They had a partial promise from the government in this respect, and also as regarded the dredging of Little Lake, and if the matter was again urged upon the government, it might do some good.

Mr. Dawson said the council was not prepared to vote any money for this purpose, nor would the people endorse such an expenditure.

Mr. Davidson said the council did not propose voting any grant, but it was understood was prepared to grant a free site.

Mr. Langford said all that was expected of this council was to grant a free site for the shed. The town would not be asked to give any big sum of money.

The report was finally adopted.

THE MARKET.

Mr. Cahill, chairman of the Market Committee, reported recommending that the market tolls for the ensuing year be let to the present lessee, Mr. John Doherty, at the same price as last year, viz., $800.00; and that in case the corporation make alterations to the maket or market buildings, the lessee shall not be entitled to any commutation from the above figure, by reason of any loss or inconvenience may be at on such account.

The report was adopted.

FOR SWEET CHARITY'S SAKE.

Mr. Hartley reported the charity expenditure of No. 4 Ward, from 1st. December to 25th February, $36.

FIXING THE LICENSES.

A by-law to fix tavern and shop licenses, as per by-law voted upon the other day, was presented for third reading and confirmation.

Mr. Cahill enquired of the sums mentioned, $400 for hotels, $300 for shops and $600 for saloons, included the government fee also.

Mr. Rutherford replied that the government added a fee of $70 to whatever sum the corporation fixed.

After a little discussion the by-law was adopted.

OTHER BYLAWS.

A by-law to amend the bylaw regulating billiard and pool table licenses, etc., was passed, enacting as follows:—For billiard and pool tables $40; pigeon hole tables $30; shooting galleries $40; bowling alleys $50.

Another by-law amending the cab-men's by-law was also adopted, as follows:—For each passenger from any part of the town to another, 25 cents, children, 8 to 12 years, 15 cents, under 8 years, free; each trunk 10 cents; satchels or other goods that may be carried in the cab, free; for hire by the hour—first hour $1.00, each succeeding hour 50 cents.

SOME MOTIONS.

Mr. Langford moved, seconded by Mr. Kendry, that a house-numbering committee, composed of the mover and seconder and Mr. A. Hall, be instructed to have numbers placed on all new houses.—Carried.

Mr. Davidson moved, seconded by Mr. Cahill, that Mr. Geo. Cairns' dog tax be remitted as the animal was poisoned immediately after being assessed.—Carried.

Mr. A. Hall moved the adoption of the report of the charity committee, recommending that the council pay for Mr. Appleyard's board in the P. P. House to the amount of $2 per week. The report was adopted

"ENOUGH LICENSES NOW."

Mr. Langford moved, seconded by Mr. Kendry, that this council deem it is desirable that a special census be taken for the town of Peterborough, and that this council memorialize the Legislature of Ontario to that effect.

Mr. Kelly inquired what the object of the census was?

Mr. Langford said that at present the government went by the census of 1881, which was 6,806, and by that the government granted only 14 or 15 licenses. Another thing, Peterborough was a growing place and it was necessary that the corporation should know its standing.

Mr. Dawson was surprised that Mr. Kendry had seconded a motion that meant an increase of licenses. He considered that there were plenty of hotels in Peterborough.

Mr. Kendry said he was about to withdraw from seconding the motion, as soon as he understood it would result in an increase of the hotels.

Mr. Cahill then seconded the motion, and said he considered the taking of the census was an important thing. As regarded the licenses, the corporation had no power to increase the number of hotels anyway.

Mr. Langford said the increase of Toronto's population by census had resulted in an increase of the school grant, and he supposed a census of Peterborough would affect our town the same way.

Mr. E. H. D. Hall pointed out that it was on an increase of the school attendance the school grant was increased. There was no doubt, however, that it meant an increase in the number of hotels.

The motion was lost.

THE SINKING FUND.

Mr. Davidson moved that a committee be appointed to interview the Ontario Government with reference to the town's sinking fund. Mr. Davidson pointed out that according to the statute the sinking fund has to be equal to the amount of the debentures for the time they have to run, and in case of $30,000 debentures being issued at 4 per cent. the sinking fund would be equal to the interest, which is a hardship on the ratepayers considering that the town is in such a good financial position. He proposed that the government be asked for special legislation to allow the town to borrow money on a sinking fund of my one per cent. and also to issue money by-laws without having to go to the expense of having the sanction of the Legislature for every loan.

Mr. Cahill said he had a motion that he thought would work in very well with Mr. Davidson's. He said there was a need for better market accommodation in Peterborough, and he understood the city of Hamilton had a new market building that would about suit Peterborough. He proposed that the deputation appointed to handle the sinking fund business also take into their consideration the building of a new market and visit Hamilton for the purpose of getting "pointers."

The following amalgamated motion was then adopted:—

Moved by Mr. Davidson, seconded by Mr. Cahill, that Messrs. Cahill, E. H. D. Hall, Rutherford, Langford and Kendry be a committee to interview the Ontario government in regard to the sinking fund on debentures, and to amend the Act of 1861 consolidating the debs of the town of Peterborough so as to enable the town to pass money by-laws without getting the consent of the Legislature; and that the committee proceed from Toronto to Hamilton for the purpose of examining and reporting upon the market house there, with a view of adopting something similar here, so far as the same may be found practicable and expedient.

THE FIRE BUNGLE.

Mr. Rutherford enquired of the chairman of the Fire, Water and Light Committee, what had caused the delay at the late fire at Mr. Thos. Rehill's. There had been a delay of 15 or 20 minutes in taking the engine to the scene of the fire, and then the engine would not work. Worst of all, one of the Fire Insurance Underwriters was in town, and at the first alarm he hurried to the hall and had to wait 15 minutes for the engine to get out. There was no lack of water, as Spalding's Bay and Little Lake were close at hand, and the delay should not have occurred. It would mean a serious matter if it caused a rise in the insurance rates.

Mr. A. Hall explained that, as he understood it, an alarm of fire came by telephone on the night in question, stating that there was a fire at McDonald's mills or thereabouts. The firemen flew downstairs and harnessed up the hook and-ladder and hose wagons, leaving only one horse in the stable. They were half way to the fire before the general alarm was rang. The engine could not be taken of course until another horse was got, and this caused the delay. The engine's failure was accounted for by the rough trip to a fire in Auburn which had caused the packing to loosen. The engine was not tested afterwards, which was of course a mistake. The whole trouble arose over the young men in the fire hall in their hurry not waiting to receive orders from the Chief and taking things into their own hands. Mr. Hall said the Chief had guaranteed that the same thing should not occur again.

The council then adjourned till the first Monday in April.

WINTER

Is the season of the year when colder weather increases the appetite, and therefore more nourishing food is necessary to maintain the heat of the body and to repair the waste of the tissues, which goes on more rapidly during the cold weather and winter months respectively. We leave to the cooler nuts and fruits that surround us during the summer months and take in their place steaks and chops, something hot, and the delicious oatmeal and graham cakes and muffins.

At this time of the year sausages, pork, ham, mackerel and other salt fish, form desirable breakfast dishes; and porridge, cornstarch, cornmeal, wheaten cakes and a variety of cereals help make the repast a most delicious one.

Thirty Years Paying Rent in Peterborough.

I frequently hear statements akin to above, followed by remarks of deep regret for having missed many golden opportunities of buying whole lots at a price they would now have to pay for one foot of the same land. Buying property in Peterborough is the safest kind of a safe and profitable investment. I have at present cheap homes, medium class homes and a few exceedingly fine Residences and grounds some of which were built for home comforts, regardless of cost. Uncontrolable circumstances have now caused those to be offered for immediate sale much under value. I commence at $475, for good house and large lot. I can suit any reasonable buyer. I have also good value in Market Gardens and Farms.

CHAPTER I.

A GOLD DIGGING RECLUSE.

On a knoll, not far from a running stream, was pitched a rough canvas tent. It was of the "wall" sort, and was pegged to the ground with strong fastenings. Inside were a hammock, a coarse table, two or three stools, and some boxes and barrels. There were likewise a gridiron, a "spider," an iron kettle, some tin dishes and cups, and a pair of candlesticks of the same material. Outside there was a trench dug, by way of drainage, so that the floor within was kept hard and dry; but the floor was of earth merely. There was not a flower, or a picture, or the least attempt at ornament whatever within the tent. Hence the interior looked bare, sordid and forbidding. And yet, grim as it was, the tent had been the solitary abode of its occupant for many months. In the midst of gold, in quantity outstripping the wildest dreams of his boyhood, this man had chosen to be a miser. In the midst of a society whose reckless joviality and wild profusion were perhaps without precedent, he had chosen to be a recluse. For this self indulgence he had to pay a price. But he consoled himself, remembering that a price has to be paid for everything.

Chester Harding came to Bullion Flat about a year before. He had no friends and no money. The former he could do without, he thought, but the latter was indispensable. So he got work on the Flat, turning the spade and plying a rocker for $5 a day. Such work was then better paid as a rule, but Harding, though diligent and strong, was not used to toil, and hence was awkward and comparatively inefficient. He improved with practice and strove doggedly on, never losing a day, saving every penny, spending nothing for drink or good fellowship, courting no man's smile, and indifferent to all men's frowns. He was savagely bent on achieving independence, and in no long time, after a fashion, he got it. Independence, in this sense, consisted in a share of a paying claim, and in the whole of a "wall" tent. In the former he dug and washed, morosely enough, with five or six partners; but he made up for his forced and distasteful social attrition by living in his tent alone.

Harding was a man getting toward middle life, strongly built, but not tall, with a grave, handsome face, and speech studiously reserved and cold. He seemed to fear lest he might be thought educated, and, as if to disarm such a suspicion, his few words were apt to be abrupt and homely. When he first came to the Flat he had two leathern trunks, and these in due time were bestowed in the tent on the knoll. One Sunday Harding opened them. The first contained some respectable garments, such as might belong to the ordinary wardrobe of a gentleman. There were white shirts among the rest, and some pairs of kid gloves. Of all these articles Harding made a pile in the rear of his tent and then deliberately set them on fire. "I couldn't afford it before," he muttered. "They might have bought a meal or two if need were; but now"—— To be rich enough to gratify a caprice was clearly very agreeable to the man; for presently he brought out a number of books—old favorites obviously—and treated them in the same incendiary manner. The Shakespeare and the Milton, the Macaulay and the Buckle spluttered and crackled reproachfully in the flames; yet their destroyer never winced, but added to the holocaust heap of letters, and at last two or three miniatures saved for the fire as a final tidbit, and gazed with grim joy as the whole crumbled in the end to powdery ashes. Chester Harding reserved nothing but one little volume, bound in velvet with gilt clasps, and one faded old daguerreotype, which he replaced in his trunk side by side, and then covered quickly so that they should be out of sight. It seemed to be his wish to hide and to forget every trace of his past life.

That life had been a hard and bitter one. From his earliest childhood Harding had been a victim of the weakness and cruelty of others. A miserable home, made a hell by drink and contention, was at last broken up in ruin, and the young man went forth into the world to meet coldness and injustice at every turn. Suspicion and selfishness are among the almost certain fruits of an experience like this, and the world is naturally more ready to condemn such fruits than to find excuses for them. When Harding found himself unpopular and distrusted be as naturally shaped his conduct so as to justify its condemnation. Surrounded from the beginning of his life by bad influences, and by these almost exclusively, he found little to soften his harsh judgment of men or to mitigate his resentment of their ill treatment. In time he fell in with one who with greater strength and higher wisdom might perhaps have led him up to nobler views and a loftier destiny. For he loved her deeply and without reservation. But her charms of person found no counterparts in her mind or heart, and Harding was cheated and betrayed. To escape old thoughts and associations, and to mend if possible broken fortunes, he sought the land of gold. He had heard that men were more generous there than elsewhere, less cunning, tricky and censorious. Perhaps even he might find a grudge acceptance among new scenes and among a new [illegible] looked at San [illegible] by a [illegible] of the [illegible] The man had obtained his passage to Sydney by the steamer, and knew that he had a draft on the agent of the Rothschilds. When Harding cashed his draft he took the proceeds in gold coin, to his hotel. That night he was visited by his shipmate, who contrived to steal the belt containing this little fortune, and to escape with it to the mines. Next morning Harding sought a near relative, an older man of known wealth, his sole acquaintance on the Pacific coast.

"I've come to you," he said, after receiving a cordial welcome, "because I want you to help me [illegible] has overtaken me."

"If it's money you want, I'll help you," the other broke in, "to the last dollar. This was not [illegible] pioneers. Harding agreed to [illegible] made of [illegible]

the fates had woven out poor Harding's earlier fortune, and it was all destined to be of the same harsh, pitiless web. He bowed his head when these words were said to him, and with the kind of smile angels must most hate to see on the faces of those so near and so little below them, he went forth in silence. Next morning he pawned his watch and made his way up into the mines.

"He's cracked; that's what he is," decided Jack Storm. Since the great find of gold at Bullion Flat there had been a great rush thither from the immediate neighborhood, and among the rest quite a deputation arrived from Boone's Bar. Jack was as great a dandy as ever, and still wore his gaudy Mexican jacket, with its silver ball buttons, his flapping trousers to match, and his gigantic and carefully nourished mustache.

"Cracked!" repeated Mr. Copperas, suavely. "Not he. He takes too good care of his money for that. No, boys, that ain't the trouble. He's been 'chasing the eagle' in times past; the bird has been too many for him, and now he's playing to get even."

"Stuff!" gurgled Judge Carboy, unwilling to part by expectoration with even the smallest product of his favorite quid. "He's done sutthin' he's ashamed of. No trifle like that, Cop. He's properly committed a murder out east. Bime by we'l hear all about it."

Jack Storm shook his head. "He's worked side by side with me for nigh a year, and he wouldn't hurt a fly. Besides, it is his turn next week to go to 'Frisco for stores."

"What's that to do with it?" queried Mr. Copperas.

"A durned sight," returned the other. "Ain't they after these cusses with a sharp stick who've got in hot water at home? And ain't goin' to 'Frisco for such chaps jes' like walkin' into the lion's mouth? Why, there's honest miners—and them as ain't honest miners, Cop—who'd a leetle rather not go down to the Bay jes' now, even among the quiet folks over at Boone's Bar."

Mr. Copperas coughed uneasily. "So Harding's going down, is he?" he inquired. "Right off?"

"Sartin. You'd better take a trip and keep him company."

There was a murmur of amusement at this. Everybody at the "Bella Union" knew that something had been in the air touching chirographic exploits of Mr. Copperas a few years back at New Orleans, and before he kept the faro bank at Boone's Bar.

A Forcible Fact.,

Constipation is the most frequent cause of headaches, bad blood, humors, dizziness, vertigo, etc., and because of this should never be allowed to exist. It may be readily cured by using Burdock Blood Bitters, which never fails to cure even the most obstinate and chronic cases. 2w8d

A Useful Article.

"I can certify to the great usefulness of Hagyard's Yellow Oil. We use it for burns, bruises, cuts, sores, rheumatism, sore throat, croup, etc., and recommend it to all as an excellent remedy." T. W. Appleby, Wingham, Ont. All medicine dealers sell Yellow Oil. 2w8d

Tickling Torture.

Mrs. Henry M. Kitchen, St. George, Ont., says: "I had a bad cold which settled in my throat, causing a continual tickling, and I just coughed all the time. I got Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam and in 3 days was getting better and in ten days I went to church. Our neighbors know this to be true." 2w8d

An Apt Quotation

From a letter by Mrs. Sullivan, 124 West Ave., Hamilton, Ont.:—"After trying a number of medicines for liver complaint, from which I suffered for years, I bought two bottles of Burdock Blood Bitter and found it a complete cure My house is never without it." 2w8d

Poison Ivy Eruption.

For poison ivy eruption and for all burns, sore throats, rheumatism, etc., Mr. C. W. Wood, of Hall's Bridge, Ont., advises the use of Hagyard's Yellow Oil, which has been in use in his family for years. He regards it as a perfect cure. 2w8d

The Deputations.

The deputation appointed by the council last night to interview the government with reference to the drillshed and armory, the dredging of Little Lake and filling up of Spalding's Bay, will leave Thursday noon for capital. The deputation to Toronto and Hamilton will probably not go till next week.

Retiring from Business.

Owing to ill health we regret to say that Mr John Braden is compelled to retire from the grocery business. By reference to his advertisement, the public will learn that he is selling his entire stock of the very freshest groceries, canned goods and provisions at cost. His sale will only last for two weeks. Everything must go as he is giving up immediate possession of his premises. d

Directors' Meeting.

A meeting of the Directors of the Agricultural Society will be held Saturday afternoon at the Morgan House for the purpose of considering the advisability of changing the date of the spring stock show from April 13th to the 20th or 27th. Since the date was fixed a majority of the directors have come to the conclusion that it is too early.

The Children's Treat.

Friday evening last the Sunday school pupils of the Baptist church were given their annual treat. The children of the south ward, Murray street and Auburn Mission schools were present to the number of about 250. The little ones were given their supper, after which a literary and musical programme was rendered.

Special Services.

In the Baptist and Presbyterian as well as the Methodist churches this week special services will be held preparatory to the advent of Messrs. Crossley and Hunter. In the Baptist church last night a congregational praise meeting was held, and these will be continued on Wednesday and Friday evening. In St. Paul's church the Wednesday evening prayer meeting will be of special interest.

It Rivals the Parnell Commission.

The Scott-Benedict suit now being tried in the Toronto High Court of Justice is a monstrous case. There are some 180 witnesses being examined at the rate of about four a day. About 50 of the witnesses are from Peterborough. There is a large and imposing array of the best legal talent in the country ranged on either side, and the costs of the trial are estimated to be $2,500 per day—about the same as the famous Parnell Commission.

Sunday Drinking Again.

At the police court this morning a couple of cases resulting from liquor selling on Sunday were tried. The police have notified all the hotels and saloons that second and third offences will be pushed against parties found selling liquor on Sunday. This warning is having a salutary effect, though some of them still break the law.

Ashburnham's Real Estate Boom.

Mr. John Carlisle and other real estate owners are making constant sales of lots, each sale meaning a new residence. Recently Mr. Carlisle sold to Mr. Alex. Rutherford three lots, 23 and 24 on Carlisle Avenue and No. 50 on Munroe Avenue; and also four lots on Euclid Avenue (19 and 20 and 29 and 30) to Mr. Wm. Yelland who has the material on hand for new dwellings. Mr. Harry Stephens has also sold to Mr. John A. McWilliams lot 11, on Carlisle Avenue.

The Lowest Death Rate.

Peterborough has good reason to boast of its superior sanitary condition. Its death rate according to the governmental returns, is always among the lowest, and for the month of January past its average is 1.03, the lowest of any large town or city in the Dominion. London comes next with 1.10, Fredericton, N.B., with 1.14, Hamilton 1.20, etc. The total number of deaths was 9, Belleville had 13, Woodstock 10, Guelph 15, Kingston 28, etc. Peterborough's assumed population is placed at 8,603. If the average was based upon the correct returns, nearly 10,000, the death rate would be reduced still lower.

Fraternity.

Otonabee Lodge of Oddfellows and a few of their brethren of Peterborough Lodge last night passed a pleasant evening at the handsome and commodious rooms of the former in the Clarkson block. After regular business had been attended to, an interesting programme was presented, consisting of songs by Bro. Hendry, readings by Bros. Nugent and Springer, instrumental selections by Bro. Green, N.G., and Bro. Kincaid, and legerdemain by Bro. R. M. Roy. Afterwards lunch and coffee was served in the dining-room. These gatherings tend to increase the bonds of fellowship that exist among Peterborough Oddfellows and besides give members an increased interest in their lodge. They will doubtless become very popular.

An Open Meeting.

The open meeting of the Endeavor Society of the Charlotte street Methodist church last night was well attended and the programme was a most acceptable one. Mr. A. Tebb presided. During an intermission light refreshments were served to the hundred and fifty guests present. Following is the programme:—

Instrumental.....Miss Wrighton
Recitation—"Union Jack".....Miss Sherlock
Solo—"Love's old, Sweet Song".....Miss Pearson
Reading—"The Irishman's Panorama" (encore)
—Mr. A. Clegg
Duet, Violin and Piano (encored)—Misses Hughes and Yokome
Recitation.....Mrs Bertha Brundrette
Instrumental Duet..Misses Jones and Morphett
Solo—"The Song for Me".....Miss Fawcett
Recitation—"The Snow Shovel".....Kittie Wilcox
Vocal Duet.....The Misses Brundrette

THE NATIONAL ANTHEM.

Winter Racing.

The Kingston winter races take place on the Midland Fair track March 5, 6 and 7. It is probable some Peterborough horses will enter. Mr. Morgan intends sending down "Mayflower" if she gets well in time. The little mare is suffering from a severe cold and was not fit to be trotted at the races last week.

Dwyer's "Royal Jim" is entered in the 2:50 class at the Hamilton races which begin to-morrow, and Smith's F.O.P. is to trot in the 2:34 class.

D. Dwyer's "Little Jim" and "Royal Jim" were sent to Hamilton yesterday to take part in the races.

Three local horsemen are trying to purchase the green horse "Sergeant" before he is shipped to his owner in Scotland. They think there is money in him in this country.

Children's Concert.

Last evening a very successful entertainment was held in the Sunday school room of St. Luke's church. The room was nicely filled by an appreciative audience. The programme consisted of music, singing, recitations, and a dialogue. The members of the band of the Y.M.C.A. very kindly contributed to the enjoyment of the evening. Others who took part were,—Lillie Jackson, Alice Cox, Miss Lizzie Dawson, John Wood, Birdie Dawson, Bertie Wood, Miss Tighe, Ethel and Mabel Wills, Louie Butcher, Reggie and Alice Turner, Miss Grundy Misses Long and Deacon. The concluding part of the programme was the building of a tower by twenty two boys and girls of the Sunday school; a very interesting and effective feature of the evening. Every part of the programme was well maintained and reflects the greatest credit on Mrs. Jackson and Miss Eva Tivey who had charge of the children in their practices. The songs of Lilly Jackson were exceedingly good, but perhaps no part of the entertainment caused more real merriment and laughter than did the performances of Master Reginald Turner and his sister. They personated "papa" and "mamma" to perfection.

Police Court.

A Couple of Second Offences Against the Scott Act.

TUESDAY, Feb. 26.

The man mentioned in Monday's issue as having been arrested while drunk and disorderly at the C. P. R. hotel Sunday night, was before the magistrate fined $8 and costs.

Messrs. R. N. Roddy and Timothy Conroy were charged with second offences against the Canada Temperance Act, alleged to have been committed on Sunday last. Neither of the defendants appeared. Mr. Geo. S. Miller, bartender at the C. P. R. hotel, stated that Mr. Roddy was unable to appear on account of illness. In his evidence he said he was in the bar Sunday "cleaning up," and sold some liquor to some men whom he thought to be boarding in the hotel. He considered he was conscientiously entitled to sell refreshments to boarders, but if any offence had been committed it was upon his own responsibility, as Mr. Roddy had instructed him not to sell anything on Sunday. The man who had previously been fined was called as a witness, and said he had bought liquor there on Sunday. He was not a boarder in the hotel either.

In Conroy's case a couple of witnesses were called to prove the sale of liquor on Sunday.

In the absence of both defendants an adjournment was made till to-morrow morning when if they do not appear or send some one to pay the fine which may be administered, warrants for their arrest will be issued.

Mr. E. B. Edwards, town solicitor, conducted the prosecution.

Comments on Canada.

Harper's Monthly for March

Will contain "Comments on Canada," by Charles Dudley Warner, accompanied by a striking portrait of the Right Hon. Sir John A. Macdonald; will appear in Harper's Magazine for March, 1889, which will be published February 21st. This article describes the topography, climate, system of government of the Dominion and of the provinces, and the political issues; and the author gives his views on the Canadian sentiment towards England, on the French Canadian element, on retaliation and commercial reciprocity, annexation and independence, and the future of the Dominion. Mr. Warner is an accurate and sympathetic observer, and his conclusions will, doubtless, command the attention which they deserve. This number also contains beautifully illustrated articles on the Institute of France; Vienna; Norway and its People; William M. Chase, Painter, etc., etc. Leave your order at the Peterborough Bookstore, J. R. Stratton (late A. L. Davis & Co.)

PIGOTT CONFESSES

That the "Times"-Parnell Letters are Forgeries.

Collapse of the Great Case—The Tribune Silenced—Pigott's Confession Spikes its Guns—Encouragement at the Proceedings of the Commission Doubtful. The Perfidious Pigott in Hiding.

(Special Cable to Examiner.)

LONDON, Feb. 26th, 10.50 A.M.

The Parnell Commission resumed its sitting this morning. After the opening of the Court, Sir Charles Russell arose and stated that on Saturday Richard Pigott went to the residence of Henry Labouchere, and, in the presence of George Augustus Sala, signed a confession stating that the letters, upon which the Times based its charges against the Irish members of the House of Commons were forgeries

11.25 A.M.

Sir Charles Russell applied for a warrant for the arrest of Pigott. Presiding Justice Hannen said a warrant would be ready in an hour. Attorney-General Webster, for the Times, said no other witness was ready and that he would have to consider what course to pursue. He would also have to decide whether or not he would resume any part of the case.

2.10 P.M.

When Pigott was called to again take the stand he did not appear. Counsel for the Times stated to the judges that Pigott had left the hotel at which he was stopping at 11 o'clock last night and that the counsel were ignorant of his whereabouts. This statement caused a sensation. The court took recess for half an hour, at the expiration of which time if Pigott does not appear his papers at the hotel will probably be seized.

DRAW SHOTS.

The games at Campbellford to-day have been declared off, Belleville not being able to come to time. The Bay City curlers will instead made a tour of Campbellford, Keene and Peterborough this week, playing in Peterborough probably on Friday evening.

A couple of rinks of Peterborough curlers, skipped by Messrs. Rutherford and Brown, began a friendly game with Keene last night at the rink, but before many ends were played a difference in opinion arose that caused the game to be stopped, the Keene men refusing to continue unless they had their way. Peterborough had a big lead on both rinks when play ceased.

It has been finally decided that the game for the Governor General's trophy will be played at Ottawa between Peterborough and Lindsay on Friday next. The skips, Messrs. Rutherford and Ferguson, have not yet chosen their rinks.

Skips Attrill and Ray take two rinks to Lindsay to-morrow to play a friendly match.

Keene.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

The second and last grand carnival of the season, by the Keene Curling and Skating Rink Co., will be held in their rink at Keene on Thursday, Feb. 28th. As the ice is in splendid condition, a grand time is expected. Great attractions are offered in the way of prizes. The kickers are quite peaceable this time.

Mr. Walter Bryce, formerly of Keene, but who is at present teaching school near Baltimore, paid our village a visit last week. All were glad to see him.

Mr. Jas. Mober has sold his farm to Mr. F. Barnett.

Mr. John Macfarlane, the village shoemaker, is doing a lively trade this winter.

The Coming Evangelists.

A Secular Gossip With Rev. Messrs Crossley and Hunter.

Rev. Messrs. Crossley and Hunter, the evangelists, whose zeal and success in their labours have created for them a continental reputation, will begin a series of special evangelistive services on Sunday March 3rd. As personally introductory to their coming the following from the Detroit Free Press, as giving an idea of their personal characteristics will be interesting. Combined with the portraits of the gentlemen published in these columns, the public will be furnished with as complete an introduction as can be effected through the medium of printers ink. The Free Press says:—

TWO REVIVALISTS.

Very picturesque they appeared in their big fur lined and fur trimmed overcoats as they bowed to the clerks in the offices of all the leading Detroit hotels Saturday afternoon. And yet the most casual observer would recognize at a glance that the two seekers after hotel knowledge were not by any means plain, commonplace, everyday citizens. Genius and originality were stamped all over them. When they asked: "What do you charge per week for board and rooms?" the question was put in the very best seasoned English and with a rolling modulation that suggested oratory. The heavy overcoats, with a mild April rain falling steadily outside, did something towards distinguishing the wayfarers from the common herd, but the professional air which cropped out with every movement greatly emphasized and particularized the impression. The spokesman—or at least the one who did the most talking—wore a full brown beard, trimmed down to a fairly sharp point. This gave him something of a foreign appearance. His eyes were large, soft and expressive, yet his broad shoulders and pronounced height prevented any suspicion of effeminacy. His companion was much slighter in build, wore a very small brown moustache, and had thin, sharp pale features. Both wore very high, glossy, refined-looking silk hats.

"Will you please give me your names?" asked the clerk of the Cadillac, after the usual question regarding rates had been propounded and answered, "In case you telephone us that you want the rooms—as you suggest—it will be convenient for us to know."

"Our names?" responded he of the brown beard and broad shoulders, "Certainly. We are known as Crossley and Hunter. I am Crossley; he," pointing to his companion with one white, tapering forefinger, "is Hunter. You may have heard of us. Some people have."

"No—er—I mean—certainly," replied the clerk, who did not wish to make any damaging admissions.

"Who on earth are they, anyhow?" asked the clerk, as the well-bundled up pair withdrew with a broad smile to a corner of the office and engaged in a whispered consultation regarding the advisability of closing a bargain for accommodations without further research. "Does anybody know 'em? I'm blessed if I do."

"Crossley and Hunter are two famous Canadian Methodist evangelists," he was informed. "They travel about and sing and preach and pray after the manner of Moody and Sankey."

"I hope you folks here in Detroit will pardon our rather Arctic and outlandish appearance," said Mr. H. T. Crossley, senior of the two, when addressed a moment later, "but the fact is we have just arrived from Winnipeg, where winter is winter, don't you know. We scarcely expected to find Southern Michigan a land of perpetual summer."

"Was it cold when you left Winnipeg?" he was asked.

"Well—not particularly cold for that region at this season of the year, I believe. Twenty degrees or so below zero—that was all. But about this Detroit weather. Would you advise us to go out and buy spring overcoats, or are we likely to have a change?"

"A change is probable at any moment."

"Ah! that is better," joined in Mr. J. E Hunter, in base tones.

"You open in Detroit in evangelistic services, do you not?"

"To-morrow, God willing," was the reverential response. "Our meetings will be held in the Central M. E. Church."

"How long will they continue?"

"For a month at least—probably much longer."

"And is it your custom to stop at hotels during such engagements?"

"Invariably. We believe in conducting our affairs in a business-like manner. We do not board around at the houses of the good brothers and sisters, or anything of that sort. In short, we neither believe in posing as travelling paupers or rendering ourselves nuisances to the public."

"And how do you meet your expenses? Do you come only on a stipulated remuneration?"

The evangelists smiled in chorus.

"No, we have nothing of that sort," replied Mr. Crossley. "We take up a collection each evening. But we are always well taken care of. Our experience has been that the man who is worthy of his hire generally gets it. If you have something to offer which the people want, they are willing to recompense you for it. Don't you think so?"

"Were you originally from Canada?"

"We were. Seven or eight years ago we were both pastors of Canadian churches. Hunter, however, is an Irishmen."

"Don either of you sing?"

Mr. Crossley smiled, while Mr. Hunter answered for him.

"Mr. Crossley is popularly termed the Sankey of Canada," he said, a trifle proudly.

"And do you conduct your revivals on the old Methodist plan? Do you have a mourners' bench?"

"Oh, no! Nothing of the kind. We simply reserve the centre seats for the occupancy of those who are impressed."

"And do you have calls enough to occupy all your time?"

The smile was very pronounced this time.

"We certainly have," was the reply. "We are now engaged for over two years ahead."

"You doubtless reach many who do not ordinarily attend church?"

"In that fact is vested one of our greatest spheres of usefulness. I remember one instance which occurred in Winnipeg. Two travelling men who stopped at the same hotel with us, dropped in through curiosity one evening. Before the services were ended one of them made an open avowal of his intention to lead a better life. I kept my eyes on the other one pretty steadily and noticed that he fidgeted about in his seat, as though frightened almost but of his wits. When the services were over and we were back in the hotel, he came up to me with the remark:

"Crossley, you'll never inveigle me into a place like that again. Why, I came just within an ace of catching it.

"That's the way it goes," concluded the evangelist. "Some people speak of religion as though it were the small pox."

TORONTO TOPICS.

How Two Swindlers Worked the Farmers —An Unhappy Family.

TORONTO, Feb. 26.—When the Police Magistrate took his seat yesterday morning he found 110 cases on the docket staring him in the face. Of this number, so far as he was concerned, he quickly disposed of 80 by handing them over to the Police Court clerk. They were breaches of the snow by-law and among the delinquents were several ladies, a leading clergyman, professional men and a prominent official at the City Hall.

William Austen and John Green were charged with obtaining horses from farmers by fraud. The scheme was to give the farmers checks for the horses and when presented there were no funds at the bank. The horses were taken to a distant part of the country and sold. In this manner the prisoners succeeded in swindling a couple of farmers. Both of them were remanded.

Emma Armstrong was charged a few days ago by her husband, James Armstrong, with being insane. She was able to disprove the charge, and yesterday she appeared to answer a charge of threatening to kill "her Jimmy." When the case was called James dashed into the witness box, and without waiting to be sworn took from the folds of a newspaper a formidable-looking butcher's knife, and declared that the wife of his bosom had threatened to "gut him" with it. When he had taken the oath and came to be cross-examined a different complexion was given to the case although there is no doubt Emma had threatened him. "Will you take her back to live with you?" he asked Mr. Murdock, who appeared for the wife. "Will the court be responsible for my life if anything happens to me?" was the query of the complainant, and the court laughed. "Will the court be responsible for that man," demanded Mr. Armstrong, and the court not knowing the man declined responsibility. The wife was then bound over in her own recognizance to keep the peace towards her lord and master. The tables were then turned, and James was charged with an aggravated assault on his wife. The Bench had seen the terrible black eye she had when up on a charge of insanity, and the evidence given against the husband by Mrs. Armstrong and her daughter, a sharp, intelligent girl, disclosed a state of affairs sufficient to drive any woman insane. Mrs. Armstrong said there would be war over the case. Armstrong called witnesses on his behalf, which only strengthened the wife's charges, and eventually, as suggested by Mr. Murdoch, the husband was convicted, and bound over to come up for sentence when called upon.

The Police Magistrate yesterday committed Richard Cole for trial on a charge of bigamy. He married Christina S. Chambers at St. John's, Quebec, Jan., 1886, under the pretence that he was a widower. His former wife, whom he married in Woolwich, Eng., is now in Boston.

In the Chancery Divisional Court yesterday the case of Kelly v. Wade, a cause celebre in Western Ontario, was taken up. This case was tried at Brantford at the last assizes before Judge MacMahon and a jury and resulted in a verdict for the plaintiff for $2500. The action is a most peculiar one and is brought against the plaintiff's husband Robert S. Kelly, her own sister Sarah Clark, her adopted daughter Huldala and her husband Edmund Wade. From the evidence it appeared that the plaintiff, in order to regain her husband's affections, he having ceased to live with her for some time, feigned insanity. Previous to this, it is alleged, that she had shown considerable signs of mental aberration for some time, the insanity taking the peculiar form of "whacking" her husband over the head with a poker, and on one occasion in 1881, it is alleged on his behalf, she plentifully sprinkled one very necessary garment of his with castor oil. Counter charges are made of alleged improper conduct by the husband with her own sister. From Nov. 27, 1886, until July 24, 1888, the plaintiff was confined in the Toronto and Hamilton lunatic asylums through the action of her friends and against whom the present suit is brought for false imprisonment. At the trial Edmund and Huldala Wade were released from liability, and the present motion is to set aside the verdict given against the other defendant.

—Port Hope is bound to be in the swim of progress. The papers have begun a vigorous agitation for a telephone in the Town Clerk's office.

is always a subject for sighs with a housekeeper and she often wishes that the law settled the question of "What shall we have for dinner," and prescribed certain dishes for certain days. Such a law would certainly save a great deal of worry and questioning to many tired women. TURNBULL'S

The Flood of the Season's French and English Printed Calicoes is rolling in—white capped and aglow phosphorescent, color play. How the Priscellas of the past would joy to see them? Pretty as you have seen them, they were never so handsome before. Persian designs, leaves, buds, flowers, polka, dots, plain stripes, scrabbles and scrawls, angles and tangles. More than 300 different styles, small figures, large figures, and mourning designs, better printing was never done 'exquisite.' If you don't want to buy, don't pass the window or come in. Prices range from 6 to 15 cents.

The trouble with low grade Marseilles Bed Spreads has been loose threads at the back—face, all right, but you didn't like the fiddle-string arrangement at the back, needn't. Here are $2.50 Marseilles Bed Spreads, full size and handsome patterns, with backs firm and well finished. Look at this honey-comb quilt for $1, which needs no apology for either size or weight.

Flannelettes—what are they? Are they all-wool? No they are mostly cotton, finished to imitate a Flannel, and especially adapted for childrens' dresses and ladies' wrappers. They consist of Cream Grounds, with pink, blue and cardinal Stripes, blue and white, pink and cream, pink and blue, and pink, cream and grey, some 18 patterns in all—the best quality being only 12½ cents a yard.

Opened out this week, a line of Linen Tablings, the maker of which is noted the world over. They are specially suited for every day wear—the warp is well twisted and they wash and iron well.

LAURIER AND SIR JOHN

DISCUSS CANADA'S RELATIONS WITH THE UNITED STATES.

A Lively Debate Listened to by a Full House and Gallery—Sir John Does Not Think Harrison Favors Non-Intercourse.

OTTAWA, Feb. 27.—Hon. Mr. Laurier moved the following amendment to the motion to go into Supply:

That in view of the rejection by the Senate of the United States of the Washington Treaty of 1871, and the unfortunate and regrettable differences existing between Canada and the United States on the Fishery question, this House is of opinion that steps should be taken at an early day by the Government of Canada for a satisfactory adjustment of such differences and the securing of unrestricted freedom in the trade relations of the two countries, and that in any negotiations entered upon for such purposes Canada should be directly represented by some one nominated by the Government: that in the meantime, and to prevent such negotiations being unfavorably entered upon and to afford evidence of the anxious desire of Canada to promote good feeling and remove all possible subjects of controversy, this House is of opinion that the modus vivendi proposed on behalf of the British Government to the Government of the United States with respect to the fisheries should be continued in operation during the fishing season.

Mr. Laurier in offering his amendment not to go into supply spoke for about an hour on the alleged unfavorable position in which Canada now stood because the fishery treaty of 1888 had not been ratified. He attacked the policy of the Government at length and said that it was the vacillating, hesitating, halting policy that had been adopted by Sir John Macdonald that was to blame for the present strained relations which he declared existed between the two countries. By this policy of vacillation and uncertainty the people of Canada were face to face with a non-intercourse measure on the part of the U.S. Sir Charles Tupper a year ago had warned the House of the position of the country in this respect and that year has passed away without anything being done towards putting an end to this terrible uncertainty. When Mr. Davies the other day asked the Government whether the modus vivendi was to be continued and fishing licenses granted for the coming season they were told by the Minister of Marine that the Government had that matter under consideration. That was all the satisfaction the House or the country could get about the matter. Mr. Laurier then went into a review of the efforts and results of the reciprocal trade relations that had ever existed between the United States and Canada and he claimed that the golden era of this country was the twelve years of the late reciprocity treaty. Our relations, he said, with the United States should be of the most friendly nature. Amity would ever follow in the path of mutual trade relations between the two countries. The policy of Canada towards the United States had been an unfriendly one, dating back to the time of the great civil war in the Republic. The Government and people of Canada at that time sympathized with the South. That unfriendly spirit had been maintained up to the present day by our Government. In 1865 Mr. Davies had called the attention of our Government to the abrogation of the fisheries clauses of the treaty of Washington and pointing out that it was in the benefit of the country that they should be renewed. But instead of a friendly policy our Government's has been to coerce and force the American Government to come to us. This country never committed a greater mistake than in 1885 when it refused to ship the fish of the American fishermen in bond, seized their schooners and even forced them back to sea without being allowed to purchase supplies. Mr. Laurier then paid a high compliment to the efforts of Mr. Erastus Wiman to bring about more friendly relations on the part of Canada with the U.S., Sir Charles Tupper, he said, had paid a similar compliment to Mr. Wiman in the House a year ago. The Leader of the Opposition then enthusiastically deprecated any resort to the provisions of the convention of 1818, as had been hinted at in the speech from the throne. He counselled a policy of friendliness on the part of this country towards the United States, and thus avoid the possibility of a resort to non-intercourse on the part of that country.

Sir John Macdonald made a lengthy answer to the leader of the Opposition. He laughed at the idea of the five million people of Canada acting in a harsh and unfriendly spirit towards the poor down-trodden sixty millions that obtained in the United States. His Government would not admit that they were wrong and they were not wrong. Every position that Canada had taken in the fisheries dispute was right and the people of the United States had admitted that. He declared amid cheers that the people of Canada were not going to lower their national honor by going down on their knees to the United States. The question of the modus vivendi was very inopportunely put. In a few days a new Government would take possession of affairs in the United States and we do not propose to open our ports to their fishermen until Feb., 1890, until we know what the new administration purpose doing. The Premier said he did not believe that President Harrison would think for a moment of proclaiming the Non-Intercourse Act. "I have not heard this from official sources," said Sir John, "but I believe it to be true all the same." We are just as willing as the people of the United States are to enter into enlarged trade relations with them, we are only waiting for their intimation. We will also be too glad to go further and talk over the burning question of the fisheries. It should be remembered that Newfoundland, an important crown colony, was equally interested with Canada, and that colony heartily approved of our policy of the modus vivendi and would act with us. The Premier then declared that Canada had never set up a claim under the clauses of the convention of 1818 that the people of the United States have not admitted to be right and just. It was only the Opposition itself that said they were not. We have always been friendly and want to be friendly with the American. The sympathies of the Canadian Government during the civil war, declared Sir John, were not with the South, but with the Government of the U.S. "I was a member of the Canadian Government at the time," said the Premier, "and I know whereof I speak. We never permitted this country to be made a base of operations against the Government of the United States. We surrendered pirates and murderers who were arrested in our territory, and we paid back money that had been plundered from a bank at St. Albans by a band which had gone out of Canada. The Government of the United States had acknowledged these evidences of friendship on our part. The Premier believed that President Cleveland and Mr. Bayard were anxious to have the treaty of 1888 ratified, but owing to the Republican majority against them in the Senate it was thrown out and rejected. That was not our fault. We thought it was a fair treaty. Were we then to eat humble pie and now go down upon our knees! I do not think we will, and I think this House and the country will condemn any such a proposition as set forth in the motion. [Cheers.] We are anxious to enter into the most free and extended relations with the U. S. None of Canada's interests have been sacrificed by us. The motion will meet with the indignant opposition of the people of the country. Sir John then related his experience at Washington in 1871 as a reciprocity commissioner in behalf of Canada. The Government of that country had offered to admit free our coal, salt, flour and timber in exchange for our fisheries. This offer the English Government would not sit at all sanction. While I was there our own parliament took off the duty on coal and salt. Mr. Hamilton Fish, who was chairman of the commission, chuckled and said his offer was withdrawn." [Laughter.]

The Premier then asked Mr. Laurier what its resolution really meant. Was it undisguised unrestricted reciprocity or was it of a shady nature?

Mr. Laurier did not answer the question.

Sir John was followed by Mr. Mills, Hon. G. E. Foster and Mr. Edgar. Mr. Mills and Mr. Edgar spoke in the line of Mr. Laurier and maintained that the policy of Canada should be extended friendliness of trade relations with the United States.

Mr. Foster remarked that in the addresses of the Opposition speakers there was not a word of sympathy for the poor toiling fishermen of the Maritime Provinces. It was all for the people of the United States. "Servility," declared Mr. Foster, "will never be worn by us as a badge."

Mr. McDonald of Huron moved the adjournment of the debate, which was carried. It is expected that the motion of Mr. Laurier will be voted on by a majority of about 60.

The object of the bill of which Dr. Weldon, M. P. for Albert, N. B., has given notice to extend the provisions of the Extradition Act is two fold: First, it is proposed to authorize the surrender by the Canadian Government of fugitive criminals, except political offenders who have sought an asylum in Canada and who are charged with the commission of any one of a list of crimes given in the schedule of the bill where such criminals have fled from a country with which Great Britain has no extradition treaty affecting Canada. Second, the bill provides that in the case of fugitives from countries with which Great Britain has an extradition treaty that they may be surrendered for crimes named in the schedule and not named in the treaty. A provision will also make the law retroactive as regards fugitives already in Canada. The schedule of crimes includes all but very minor offences.

On Jan. 19th last Hon. John Costigan, Minister of Inland Revenue, wrote as follows to the Auditor General: "In reply to yours of the 15th calling my attention to two payments to me out of the preventive services expenditure of 1887-8 for which there are no vouchers except the paid checks, and asking me to furnish you with information as to the disposition of these sums, this information I must of course decline to furnish. The sums referred to were expended in accordance with the intention of Parliament." In his annual report the Auditor-General printed the above letter without comment or explanation at the foot of page 164. The Free Press of this city and The Boston Pilot, one of the leading Roman Catholic weeklies in the United States, in making reference to the letter, asserted that the Minister of Inland Revenue controlled the secret service funds of the Dominion, and that the $600 in question was paid to LeCaron, the informer. Sir John Macdonald said in the House the other day that the Government of Canada never paid the man a cent of money or ever had any correspondence with him. Mr. Costigan this afternoon told the House that he had no control of the secret service funds of the country, that he never saw LeCaron and never even heard of him until he saw his name in the papers. "The sums referred to by the Auditor-General," he said, "were expended in the preventive service in connection with collecting the inland revenue. The money is voted by Parliament for that purpose, and the minister of the day has it in his power to draw what sums he requires without giving an account of its expenditure or to whom it is paid. This is necessary for obvious reasons. I have only drawn on this fund about four times since my eight years in office, and then only for small amounts, the largest being $500. I make this explanation to set myself right with the people of the United States, where the statement has been extensively circulated that I paid money to Le Caron out of the secret service funds of Canada."

A number of private bills were introduced to-day. Mr. Jamieson introduced a bill to incorporate the Supreme Council of the Independent Order of Foresters. Mr. Corby introduced a bill incorporating the Bay of Quinte Bridge Co. Mr. Daly introduced a bill to incorporate the Northern Pacific and Manitoba Railway Co. Mr. Kirkpatrick introduced a bill to incorporate the Dominion Mineral Company. Mr. Colby introduced a bill to incorporate the Dominion Superphosphates Company.

Mr. Small introduced a bill providing that the electric telegraph and telephone wires in the city of Toronto should be buried. The city council has petitioned for such a measure.

The House adjourned at 10.50.

The House was flooded with petitions to-day from pork dealers and provision men of Hamilton, Toronto, Kingston, Brockville and Montreal, praying that the duties on lard compound be not disturbed, and asked for by the Ontario Pork-packers Association. The petitions claim that lard compound is a whole-some substance composed of hog lard, beef fat and pure cotton seed oil. Thirty dealers in Toronto signed the petition.

Ministers' Expenses.

OTTAWA, Feb. 26.—The Public Accounts Committee met this morning. Attention was drawn by Mr. Somerville to the fact that there were very large sums charged in the public accounts for Ministers' traveling expenses. The Auditor-General stated that as the Ministers did not furnish him with vouchers he had no check whatever on their expenditure.

Hon. Mr. Bowell stated it was the practice of the Minister before undertaking a journey on departmental business to estimate the amount required and draw it before starting.

Hon. L. H. Davies contended that if the traveling expenses were nominal the Opposition would not refer to it, but the sums were so large that he thought they should be regulated by vouchers.

Hon. Mr. Foster agreed with the Opposition that public expenditure should as a rule be open to the fullest enquiry, but in the case of Ministers' travelling expenses he thought their honor might be trusted to guard against any abuse, more especially as they were persons who enjoyed the confidence of the country and of Parliament.

Papers in connection with the contracts for military clothing will be brought down at the next meeting. Contractors and other witnesses will be summoned. Sir Adolphe Caron contends that the quality of the clothing made in Canada is equally good with that obtained in England, while the cost is no greater.

Capital Chat.

OTTAWA, Feb. 26.—Rev. Drs. Potts and Dewart left for Toronto to-night. Their mission at the Capital in connection with the college federation movement has been quite a success. They obtained a number of subscriptions to-day. Hon. John Carling put his name down for $500; Senator Hardisty of the territories, Mr. McMullen, M.P., Capt. Labelle, M.P., and others also subscribed. Capt. Labelle is the French member for Richelieu, and in giving the doctors a sum for the new college buildings said he wanted to own a brick in it at least. The visit of Drs. Potts and Dewart to Ottawa has stemmed a strong torrent of opposition to federation, which had found root in this end of the Province.

A deputation of soil pipe makers from Montreal, Toronto and Hamilton saw the Ministers of Finance and Customs to-day and asked for an increase of duties on pipes of less than 4 inches diameter. They want a specific instead of an ad valorem duty.

Mr. Choquette is going to offer a resolution on Friday that it is expedient to consider if it would not be advisable to sell the Intercolonial railway.

Hon. John Macdonald expects to make his big trade speech in the Senate on Friday next or early in the coming week.

In the Senate to-day Hon. John Macdonald presented a petition from the Toronto Board of Trade urging the Government to extend the trade of Canada with the Barbadoes, British Guiana, the Argentine Republic and the West Indies.

The Senate to-day increased the salary of its chaplain, Rev. Archdeacon Lauder, from $400 to $600.

There is a healthy rumor in circulation the past few days that Hon. John Macdonald will be made Minister of Trade and Commerce. This will give a portfolio to the Senate.

John Cameron of The Globe occupied a seat in the press gallery to night.

Buffaloes en Route to Paris.

DETROIT, Feb. 26.—Dr. Carver's herd of 20 wild buffalos from the plains of Manitoba or Northwest territory, the last of their race, arrived here early this morning on their way to World's fair, Paris. The animals are all "hobbled" and will be on exhibition at Princess Rink, this city, for a few days.

A Wandering Lunatic's Death.

LONDON, Ont., Feb. 26.—This morning the trainmen of the Buffalo express reported having seen a man's body lying beside the track near Glenworth. The body was afterwards identified as being that of Edward Trevithick, who was arrested yesterday by the Grand Trunk constable here on a train from the east in an insane condition. At the request of his friends he was given up to them about 6 o'clock.

At about 9 he suddenly sprang through his bedroom window, carrying the sash with him. He had on at that time pants, socks and undershirt only. He called at a house some distance off and borrowed a hat, coat and boots. That was the last seen of him until his body was found.

THE CONSPIRACY EXPOSED

PIGOTT CONFESSES THAT THE LETTERS ARE FORGERIES.

How Parnell First Learned the Letters Were Forged by Pigott—An Important Packet of Letters Delivered to Him by a Chicago Priest.

LONDON, Feb. 26.—A gentleman high in authority in the prosecution of the Parnell-Times case to-day told the story of how the conspiracy against Parnell was detected. Up to July last Parnell, his counsel and colleagues were wholly at sea. They knew the letters were forged, but every effort to discover the forger proved futile, and Parnell and his confidants were disheartened. One day last July a young Irish-American priest, Rev. Maurice J. Dorney of Chicago, accompanied by Rev. Herbert Dunn, also of Chicago, sent his card to Parnell at the House of Commons. Father Dorney informed Parnell that he had a package of documents to deliver placed in his hands the night before he sailed from New York. It contained, he said, evidence that would reveal the forgeries and identify the forger of the letters printed in The Times. Father Dorney received a telegram from Alexander Sullivan of Chicago asking him to meet Patrick Egan at a railway station in New York the night before he sailed for Liverpool. He did so. Egan and Father Dorney sat up all night. The priest learned the whole story. He told Parnell he had carried that package with more solicitude than if it had been millions.

When the nature of the package became apparent to Parnell he was deeply affected. The depression visible for months on his pale face began to soften and during the recital of the story he yielded several times to emotion. When the story itself was over he asked with painful apprehension how many men knew what the package contained. Father Dorney replied that only Egan, Sullivan and himself were familiar with it, but Patrick Ford of The Irish World would be taken into confidence by Egan! Parnell was delighted. He had feared that somebody might inform The Times. A series of interviews followed participated in by Dorney, Parnell, Sir Charles Russell, Lewis and Labouchere.

The discovery that Pigott was the forger was made by Egan in Lincoln, Neb. Egan writes that he was sorely perplexed by the forged letters, fac similes of which he got in The London Times.

The signature of these attributed to him was remarkably good. Expressions and odd abbreviations peculiar to him were in the text. He considered as a possible forger each of several men whom the Parnellites suggested or suspected, but none could have had letters from him which would have made the spurious connections possible. He recalled Pigott, but he had been a long dead in politics and covered with accumulated shame that Egan dismissed him from his mind. He remembered that Pigott had been in forgeries years before, but the idea that he might be concerned in these seemed absurd. In ascertaining the forged fac-similes he finally discovered that one signed with his name was written avowedly at a certain address in Paris.

The recollection flashed upon him that Pigott was the only man to whom he had ever given it. Pigott had written asking for a confidential address to which he might send important information. Egan who is methodical in habit had saved his correspondence for years. He has been accustomed to writing on the fly leaf of a letter received his answer to it and then copying the answer to be sent to his correspondent. Thus he had letter and answer together. He found Pigott's letters. By comparing them with the handwriting of the forged letters he saw he had the forger. He submitted letters written by Pigott to experts with the fac similes of the forged letters. They detected characteristic peculiarities which were confirmed under the microscope.

Egan had Pigott's letters and the forgeries photographed and started for Chicago, where he placed all the papers before Alexander Sullivan, who is a lawyer. A brief was drawn up by him and Sullivan. It related to the chief incidents in Pigott's career years before when Pigott tried to sell The Irishman (a newspaper) to Parnell and Egan. He furnished an inventory apparently authenticated by a well-known Dublin accountant showing the value of the property. Egan proved the inventory was false and Pigott had forged the accountant's signature. A man in Pigott's newspaper office contributed to The Boston Pilot. His room de pisme was Leo. After his death a relative discovered that Patrick Donahue, then editor of The Pilot, had remitted to Leo a draft which his family never received, and that Pigott had opened the letter, forged an endorsement on the draft and drawn the money. Pigott was compelled to disgorge.

These facts Egan committed to writing. He found among his papers letters written by him in which entire sentences appeared that were also in the forged letters. Pigott had traced these sentences carefully word for word. Then he interpolated or added other sentences or phrases completely changing the meaning of the whole letter, while preserving the integrity of portions. Dates were also changed to make the criminal interpolations applicable to illegal events. Egan also found letters by Parnell which had been similarly used.

Photographs of all these and of Pigott's bogging and blackmailing letters were enclosed with the originals in the package with the memoranda recalling to Parnell all the circumstances attending the writing or reception of each. This was the luggage the young clergyman fetched to Parnell. No hint of the contents became public until Parnell in the interview with Pigott in the presence of Labouchere and Lewis asked Pigott questions which disclosed they had evidence to convict Pigott of the crime. Pigott reported his fears to The Times or was watched by its detectives and traced into Parnell's presence. Then he had to partially confess to his employers. The Attorney-General and his colleagues compelled Le Caron to testify and he is malignant as possible for the purpose of breaking the force of Parnell's information about Pigott's antecedents.

The Cost of It.

LONDON, Feb. 26.—The costs of The Times are $700 as a daily minimum. The more examination of Houston and Pigott has thus cost already double the original price of the letters. The Parnellite side is anxious the case should continue except that the funds may fail. Thirty-seven thousand pounds has been collected, and twice that amount is wanted. The witnesses for the defence included all Liberal Ministers, all the leading patriots of Ireland, and the whole Irish hierarchy.

Parnell's Case in Scotland.

EDINBURGH, Feb. 26.—The case of Parnell against The London Times came up to-day for a rehearing commenced by Parnell's counsel before the Judges of the first division. The court by unanimous decision dismissed the action with costs.

A Bailiff on Trial.

BELLEVILLE, Feb. 26.—Geo. W. Sills, the Division Court bailiff charged with perjury, has been committed for trial. Bail was accepted, one surety in $500.

Income Statement in Court.

LONDON, Feb. 26.—Constables Gallagher and Fawcett, who protected Pigott at Anderson's Hotel, say they last saw him at 4.30 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The greatest excitement prevailed in the courtroom when the commission adjourned. Messrs. Parnell and Davitt, Mr. Gladstone and a larger number than usual of the Irish members of Parliament against whom charges were made were present. Sir Charles Russell and Messrs. Labouchere, Healy and Parnell had an earnest conversation after the court adjourned.

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 27, 1889.

WEST RIDING INSTITUTE.

There has been a change made in the programme of the West Riding Institute as announced in a recent daily issue and the weekly issue of the 20th inst. The date of the meeting is changed from March 6th and 7th to March 13th and 25th. The former meeting will be held at Lakefield and the latter in Peterborough. The same local parties as previously announced Messrs. Geo. Hilliard, Robert Jackson, Otonabee, and J. Coyle Brown, I. P. S. will give papers, and Prof. Robertson of Guelph Agricultural College will be substituted at the Peterborough meeting for Mr. Hobson. Prof. Saunders, of the Dominion Experimental Farm, Ottawa, will be present also. The farmers are greatly pleased to have these professional agriculturists at their meetings. They are specialists and can furnish information which cannot be gained through any other conveniently available channel. But, while this is the fact, the inability of any of these gentlemen to attend the public meetings does not rob the farmers' institutes of their interest and capability of being helpful and instructive to farmers. The last meeting of the Peterborough institute was attended alone by practical farmers of the neighborhood, yet the meeting was a most interesting one. Practical subjects, more in touch with the every-day interests of the tillers of the soil, were handled, and conditions with which all are familiar and which all are accustomed to encounter in the ordinary pursuit of their vocation, were dealt with by those whose experience and ingenuity had overcome them. All subjects were familiarly discussed, question and answer freely and colloquially exchanged. Practical information was evolved. No farmer could easily ask a solution to some difficulty he had met in practical work, without finding one among the farmers present, who had the requisite information to supply. At the same time, as intimated above, the professional gentlemen can furnish information that practical farmers, even the acutest and most observant have not the facilities, or apparatus, or means to acquire. With the two classes of instruction combined—the scientific and practical—the Farmers' Institute reaches the highest condition of usefulness, and that farmer who thinks he can learn nothing that will better fit him for his calling, render his soil more productive, make his operations more remunerative, is certainly deserving of pity if not sympathy. Both numerically and financially farming is the most important of our national industries. Seventy per cent. of the population is farming, and in this Province alone about a thousand millions of dollars of money is invested. Yet with all this as far as combination for mutual protection of their peculiar interest, farmers are the least progressive of any calling, and if they do not receive that governmental and legislative attention which the importance of their calling justly demands, they have themselves no little to blame. When they show a united front and a disposition to work harmoniously in their own interests—a disposition to help themselves—they will command the respect and consideration which is their just due.

Sir Adolph Caron will vote the drill shed a bore unless he consents to a vote for an appropriation. The deputation will lay seige to him, undermine him and blow him up unless he handsomely capitulates.

The repeal of the Scott Act will be a subject for the exercise of the popular franchise on the fourth of next April. Last April (1888) the repeal of the Act was voted on in eight counties, with the following results. These figures will be studied with interest and, while they may be construed by those in favor of repeal as a record of encouragement, they will not depress the friends of the Act, who will, doubtless, loyally meet the necessity of making more vigorous efforts to promote the interests of temperance:

Dufferin,	majority adopting	795,	for repeal	399
Simcoe,	"	1,183,	"	3,114
Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry	"	1,796,	"	2,200
Bruce,	"	1,312,	"	1,466
Huron,	"	1,674,	"	1,358
Renfrew,	"	736,	"	803
Norfolk,	"	1,037,	"	788

Some time since we had occasion to refer to the exceedingly low death rate of the town of Peterborough, as disclosed in the annual report of Dr. Clarke, Medical Health Officer. That this was not too favorable a view to take, is shown by the confirmation afforded by the mortuary statistics published by the Dominion Government. By these tables it is shown that Peterborough's rate of death to one thousand of the population for January is only 1.03 by far the lowest of any of the twenty-eight of the principal towns and cities of the Dominion, dealt with in the report. Amongst the many qualifications constituting Peterborough a desirable place of residence, the fact of its being the most healthful town in the Dominion, is not one of the least, and, by no means, the least important.

Mr. Crossley's Influence.

Under the heading, "Mr. Crossley's Services," the Port Arthur Daily Sentinel says:—

"If he had asked me to stand up I would have."

"He has cured one scorner."

"I am going to quit swearing."

"I would give $5 for an hour's talk with Mr. Crossley."

These and other expressions of a similar nature were heard concerning Mr. Crossley's services yesterday. They were from men who had not shown to Mr. Crossley any particular interest and whom, possibly, the services may not have appeared to affect. Much of the good which would have come out to the surface as the result of Mr. Crossley's labors here will not be manifest. Scoffers, who will be likely to point to a few who may fall away, will please take into account the foregoing fact.

MONTREAL'S REAL ESTATE

IT INCREASES IN VALUE SIX MILLIONS DURING THE PAST YEAR.

Return of Bishop Fabre From Rome—a Crossed in Notre Dame Cathedral—A Judgment for $30,000 Against the N.S.R.

Montreal, Feb. 26.—The assessed value of real estate of the city of Montreal for 1889 was nearly $84,000,000, an increase of nearly six millions over the previous year.

Emil Victor Miche, a French deserter, who is in jail here under remand on an application by the French Government for his extradition, on a charge of forging a bond and collecting about 2000 francs on it at Lyons, France, has applied for a writ of habeas corpus on the ground that it did not appear in the evidence adduced by the French Republic that the accused was the person who had signed, or caused to be signed, the alleged forged signature to the bond, and thus further sending forward the commencement by Commissioner Dugas, that accused had been warned of the possibility of applying for a writ of habeas corpus pending his fifteen days' remand. Other remands also were addressed.

The railway trains were again late to-day owing to snow drifts on lines.

An interesting judgment was rendered by Court of Appeal to-day in the case of North Shore Railway and McWillis. This was an action for $16,000, account of damages sustained by loss by fire of McWillis's farm buildings between Mile End and Sault-au-Recollect, plaintiff holding that fire was set by one of the company's passing locomotives. The Superior Court gave judgment in favor of plaintiff, holding that evidence clearly showed the fire to have been caused by sparks from the smoke stack of the locomotive, and dismissing defendant's plea that they come within the operation of the Dominion Railway Act and could have the benefit of the six months' prescription. The Court of Appeal confirmed this judgment.

Judge Loranger rendered judgment to-day in the interesting case of Barry vs. Lonsdale, Reid & Co. This is an action to recover amount of a check for $1230, signed by the firm and endorsed by the late J. C. Lonsdale. The circumstances of the case are explained as follows by Mrs. J. C. Lonsdale in her evidence. In 1887 Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Lonsdale went to New York and were one day accosted in a street car by a young man who gave his name as Bigelow. He said he was a nephew of Mr. Smithers of the Bank of Montreal and claimed to have seen Mr. Lonsdale in the bank here. He said he was in possession of a number of models of the Statue of Liberty, and would be happy to present them with one if they would call upon him at the Brunswick hotel. The next day the lady and gentleman were going to the Brunswick when they met Bigelow, who told them that the statues were not yet ready for exhibition, but he would show them to Mr. Lonsdale the next day. Accordingly on the following morning Mr. Lonsdale went out and was absent about a half-hour only. When he returned he felt very sick and said that he had been enticed into a gambling den, drugged and forced to give the check upon which the claim is now made. The Bank of Montreal was at once notified not to honor the check and after Mr. and Mrs. Lonsdale had returned Bigelow wrote three times, offering to settle for $500 and "keep the thing quiet" and not expose Mr. Lonsdale's name. The letters received no attention and finally an action was taken against the firm of Lonsdale, Reid & Co. by one Thos. Barry, describing himself as agent. In rendering judgment the court held that plaintiff proved no consideration given for the check, which had been obtained by force, and dismissed the action with costs.

At three o'clock this afternoon Notre Dame Church was crowded with an audience eager to participate in the demonstration in honor of the return of Archbishop Fabre. The church wardens presented him with an address in the presence of 300 of the clergy to which his grace replying said, "that his enthusiastic greeting was but a confirmation of the impression he had given to the Pope of the fidelity and loyalty of the Canadian people." His Holiness expressed great pleasure in the gift of the Canadian Seminary, the most valuable he had received during the year. He thanked the people for their address and pronounced his benediction. The "Benedictus" and the "Te Deum" were rendered with fine effect.

Had with Eczema. Hair all Gone. Scalp Covered with Eruptions. Thought his Hair would never Grow. Cured by Cuticura Remedies. Hair Splendid and Not a Pimply on Him Now.

I cannot say enough in praise of the Cuticura Remedies. My boy, when one year of age, was so bad with eczema that he lost all of his hair. His scalp was covered with eruptions which the doctors said was scald head, and that his hair would never grow again. Despairing of a cure from physicians, I began the use of the Cuticura Remedies, and I am happy to say, with the most perfect success. His hair is now splendid, and there is not a pimple on him. I recommend the Cuticura Remedies to mothers as the most speedy, economical and sure cure for all skin and humors of infants and children, and feel that every mother who has an afflicted child will thank me for so doing.

Thirty Years Paying Rent in Peterborough.

I frequently hear statements akin to above, followed by remarks of deep regret for having missed many golden opportunities of buying whole lots at a price they would now have to pay for one foot of the same land. Buying property in Peterborough is the safest kind of a safe and profitable investment. I have at present cheap homes, medium class homes and a few exceedingly fine Residences and grounds some of which were built for home comforts, regardless of cost. MUNCASTER'S

MISS TINSEL.

By HENRY SEDLEY.

"For my part," put in Jim Blair, who liked to hear injustice done to no man, "I s'pose there's reasons why a chap might want to live alone, and yet mightn't a knifed anybody nor robbed 'em either."

"That's so, Jim," affirmed Judge Carboy, oracularly. "No doubt on't. But when it's so we usually hear what them reasons is. Now, who knows air a word on 'em in the case afore us? Anyhow, I hope he's good—good as gold—only we've had our sheer of troubles in the county, and it's well to look sharp."

"When I was a little chap," proceeded Jim Blair with retrospective deliberation, "I lived in a village on the further side o' the Ohio. Most folks did their business on t'other bank, and went over generally by the 8 o'clock ferry in the mornin'. Now, there was two or three that didn't; men whose work lay nigher home, or who went later. But the crowd went over reg'lar at eight. Arter awhile they got awful sot agin them who didn't go over at the same time. There weren't no hell's delights you could think of them fellers didn't lay to the men who didn't travel by the eight boat; and at last, damn me if they didn't want to lynch 'em!"

"Lynch 'em for not goin' in the eight boat!" cried the judge, whose respect for the majesty of the law always asserted itself, as was meet, on hearing any tale of its infringement.

Jim Blair nodded. "Not so much, I reckon, for not goin' in the eight boat as for not doin' what other folks did. However, them who ever try to trouble Ches Harding 'll have a rough time I guess."

"You think he's sech a game fighter?" inquired Jack Storm with lively interest.

"That may be, too. But what I meant was, there's them on the Flat who believe in Ches for all his lonesome ways, and won't see him put upon. For my part, I reckon he's more sinned against than sinnin'."

"I guess you're half right, Jim," admitted Judge Carboy with diplomatic concession; "more'n half right. But mark my words," and the judge's voice rose to the orotund swell which denoted his purpose to be more than commonly impressive, "thar'll be the devil's own time on the Flat some day, and that air duck 'll be king pin and starter of it. I never know'd no such silent, sulky cuss as that moonin' round but that he kicked up pettikiller h—— in the long run."

It will be seen from this that there were differences of opinion respecting Chester Harding at Bullion Flat, and it cannot be denied that there was some reason for it.

CHAPTER II.

MISS TINSEL.

It was in a magnificent theatre that Chester Harding first saw her—a theatre grand in size and tasteful in decoration. It had only lately been opened, and was one of the lions of the Golden City. Harding went there to while away an idle hour, and in order, perhaps, that he might see all there was to be seen before leaving San Francisco. His visit was one of merest chance, and no trifle had seemed lighter in all his California life than his straying that night into the Cosmopolitan theatre.

And yet perhaps it was the turning point in his existence. Others who were there from Bullion Flat said afterward that from that night Harding was transfigured. A blaze of chandeliers, with golden fretwork skirting the galleries and rich dark velvet framing the boxes, could hardly surprise him. Nor was there much to astonish—whatever there might be to admire—in the rows of handsomely dressed women who gave brilliancy to the audience. Neither could the drama itself, which the manager was pleased to style, "a grand legendary fairy spectacle," move Harding seriously from his equilibrium. All these splendors, together with the resonant orchestra, the dazzling scenery, rich in Dutch metal and gold foil, the sanguinary and crested baron, the villain of the play, the iridescent youth, its hero, the demons, who went through traps, vampire and other—one blood red demon with a long nose being especially conspicuous—the fairies, who brought order out of chaos—of whom the "Queen of the Fairy Bower" was the large limbed and voluptuous principal—the "Amazonian Phalanx," who went through unheard of manœuvers with massive tin battle axes and spears—all these failed, it must be owned, to startle Mr. Harding from his propriety. He had seen such things, or things very like them, before. And yet he was taken off his feet, to use the metaphor, and swept away captive by a very torrent of emotion excited by Miss Tinsel.

She was only a coryphee; that is, she was but one among the minor subordinates of the ballet. Her advent was accomplished as one of the "Sprites of the Silver Shower." She had to come chasseing down the stage, and she never raised her eyelids—before most demurely cast down—until she was close upon the footlights. But when those eyelids did go up it was—well, as Judge Carboy afterward used to say, it was just like sunrise over the mountains at Boone's Bar! A girl with a mass of bright hair, almost red it looked by daylight, and large gray eyes that looked as black as soot by the gas, but took on more tender hues by day—a girl with a figure that was simply perfection, and yet one who with all her archness seemed to have no vanity. She had many dainty white skirts, one above another like an artichoke, of fluffy and diaphanous texture, and although these, it cannot be denied, were perilously short, somehow Miss Tinsel did not look in the least immodest.

All the men from Bullion Flat knew it was Miss Tinsel, since the "Queen of the Fairy Bower" addressed this charming figure more than once as "Zephyrind," and a reference to the play bill thereupon at once established her identity.

What strange magnetism there was about this girl Harding, and indeed all who looked at her, found it hard to define. Perhaps, apart from her lovely eyes and hair and her exquisite figure, it was because she always seemed to be drawing away that she proved so fascinating. Even when she advanced straight toward you she seemed forever to retreat. By what subtle and artificial instinct of coquetry Miss Tinsel was enabled to convey this impression cannot here be explained.

That she did convey it was universally admitted. It appeared, however, on inquiry, that her dramatic powers were of the slightest. Her beauty and charm were such that the manager would gladly have put her forward could he have seen his way to do so. But her success had been so moderate, when the experiment was tried, in one or two of the "walking ladies" of farces, that it was thought wisest to let her be seen as much and heard as little as possible.

When Harding last saw her that night she was going up to Paradise on one foot, the other pointing vaguely at nothing behind, the intoxicating eyes turned up with a charming simulation of pious joy, and the cherry lips curled into a smile that showed plenty of pearls below. She vanished from his gaze in a glory of red fire, amid the blare of gongs and trumpets, while the "Blood Red Demon" went down to the bad place under the stage through a trap, and the "Queen of the Fairy Bower," with felicitous compensation, ascended to the heaven of the flies.

After this tremendous catastrophe Harding went to his hotel and reflected.

That a Timon like himself—a misogynist indeed of the first water—should fall in love at first sight with a ballet girl certainly furnished matter for reflection. But reflection did not prevent Timon from seeking an interview with his unconscious enslaver the next day. Even cold and soured natures may become under some incentives enthusiastic and ingenious.

Harding found out where Miss Tinsel lived, learned that she usually came from rehearsal at about 2, called consequently at 3, and coolly sent in his name, telling the servant that the young lady would know who he was. As he hoped, the device got him admittance. The girl supposed he was some one from the theatre whose name she had not caught or had forgotten.

It was a very plain and humble room, almost as bare and forbidding perhaps as the inside of Harding's tent on the knoll, and yet how glorified was the place with the purple atmosphere of romance!

Magnificent Stock. Splendid Selection of Bibles, Prayer Books and Hymn Books at a Reduction of 33⅓ per cent. at the Peterborough Bookstore (late A. L. Davis & Co).

Why People Wonder

How it is W. J. Morrow sells his teas and all other lines so cheap,—well, he buys in large quantities owing to his extensive trade, turns over his goods quickly, as he is not so anxious for large profits as other houses are, and does the largest trade of any grocery house in town. Something new—our 5 lb. Japan for $1.00. See our advertisement in another column.

New Temperance Society.

After the lecture in the opera house last night, at the invitation of Mr. Carswell, a few earnest temperance people remained and discussed the advisability of organizing a division of the Sons of Temperance in Peterborough. An adjournment was made till this evening, when the new society will be instituted at the Y.M.C.A. rooms.

Retiring from Business.

Owing to ill health we regret to say that Mr John Braden is compelled to retire from the grocery business. By reference to his advertisement, the public will learn that he is selling his entire stock of the very freshest groceries, canned goods and provisions at cost. His sale will only last for two weeks. Everything must go as he is giving up immediate possession of his premises. d

Magnificent Stock. Splendid Selection of Bibles, Prayer Books and Hymn Books, at a Reduction of 33⅓ per cent. at the Peterborough Bookstore. (late A. L. Davis & Co).

When They Arrive.

Messrs. Crossley and Hunter will arrive in Peterborough Saturday evening on the 7.50 C.P.R. train, and will at once begin preparations for their meetings. One of them will confer with a committee of the churches to arrange a plan of campaign, whilst the other will meet the union choir which is to assist in the services and arrange a musical programme.

After Licenses.

Already some of the hotel and saloon keepers are applying for licenses in the belief that the Scott Act will be repealed. The other day a county man applied to P. M. Edmison for information as to where and from whom he could obtain a license; but he could not be told, as there are now no Commissioners under the Crooks Act, and they alone have the power to grant licenses under that Act. It appears that no licenses can be taken out until the Act is repealed and new commissioners appointed.

St. John's Church.

The subject of the Bible-reading in St. John's at 8.30 this evening is to be "The Offertory an Act of Divine Worship as Exemplified in the Bible." This will conclude the series on "Public Worship in the Bible." Readings on Prayer and Praise having been given on former Wednesdays. Important arrangements have just been completed for the Wednesday evening services in Lent, which will be announced later. Rev. Canon Damoulin, Rev. J. P. Lewis, Rev. R. J. Moore and other celebrated preachers are coming.

Sporting Notes.

An Orillia paper the other day stated that Dwyer's "Little Jim," of Peterborough, was a "ringer", being Dock Wright (2.19½). This statement is altogether wrong. Dock Wright was foaled in 1886, and would therefore be 21 years old now. It would be absurd to suppose that a horse at that age would have the life and speed of Little Jim. Then Dock Wright is down on the Wiser book as standing 15½ hands, while Little Jim is exactly 15 hands.

Dwyer's "Royal Jim" won the 2.40 trot at Hamilton yesterday. "Little Jim" is entered in the free-for-all to-day.

The Greatest of These is Charity.

Between two and three hundred people attended the lecture in the opera house last night by Mr. Carswell. The lecturer came under the auspices of the Laymen's Evangelical Association, and the proceeds were devoted to the Protestant Home. Mr. W. Cumming presided. The address was upon "Charity," and Mr. Carswell handled the subject so cleverly and well that he kept the undivided interest of the audience for an hour and a half. At the conclusion of the lecture a vote of thanks was moved by Mr. Jas. Sutherland, seconded by Mr. I. Richardson, and carried unanimously.

Opera House Fixtures.

Mr. Bradburn of the Opera House wishes it stated that the statement that all opera house dates, contemporaneous with the presence of Rev. Messrs. Crossley and Hunter, have been cancelled, is quite incorrect and uncalled for. On the contrary, there is more than the usual number of fixtures booked as the following will show:—

MONDAY, March 4th.—Signor Giovanni's Novelty Company and gift entertainment for one week.

MONDAY, March 11th.—Wm. Gillett's "Held by the Enemy" Company.

TUESDAY, March 12th.—Chas. L. Andrews, "Michael 86 ogoff" Company.

FRIDAY, April 12th.—Joseph Murphy's Company "Kerry Gow."

Minutes of W. C. T. U. Meeting

A special meeting of the union was called for Monday afternoon Feb. 25th. After prayer service some points of interest were discussed. As the town council had disapproved of the appeal sent in last week on the ground of its being "limited," it was thought advisable to present another which would embrace all offenders against the liquor law. A complaint was drawn up in due form and signed by the members present. The secretary read a communication from Messrs. Deenistoun and Stevenson who had been instructed by Mr. Thomas Dunn to acquire whether he was correct in his inference that the petition of the W.C.T.U. presented to the town council dated Feb. 18th, 1889 and signed by the secretary referred to his place of business on Hunter street. An enquiring mind in the union asked in reply: Does Mr. Dunn's establishment correspond to the description contained in said appeal? Session adjourned until date of regular meeting.

More Good Advice.

Young men, we want to impress upon you the importance and force of a few remarks addressed to you a few days ago in reference to preparing for your approaching marriage, for if you are not going to marry at once, its time you began to think about it. The crows-feet are on the home stretch, and an occasional gray hair is sneaking in around your temples. To be fully ready for marriage you must have a house and have it furnished and make a "minute" of this fact, that the best place in the Midland district to get furniture is at the shop of D. Bellegheim, the Furniture King. If you are too modest to come and select the furniture yourself, get your mother or sister and your "intended" to go to Bellegheim's. By so doing you will insure one the conditions of a happy home, a well furnished house, in which there will be no ricketty furniture to destroy the temper of husband or wife and thus provoke family jars For all of Bellegheim's furniture is of the best quality, not only finely finished, but strongly built of the best kiln-seasoned lumber. Another thing, you have an immense stock of varied furniture—the largest in the Midland district—to select from, and you have every chance of being pleased both in price and quality. Remember, everybody, that at Bellegheim's you have the best assortment of furniture in the county to select from, that prices are right and satisfaction in all respects is guaranteed. Remember also the place—the furniture shop furthest west on Hunter street.

The Firemen, the Engine and the Rehill Fire.

To the Editor of the Examiner:—

DEAR SIR,—I notice in your report of last night's council meeting a statement made by the chairman of the Fire Water and Light Committee respecting the fire which occurred at Mr. T. Rehill's on January 17th., 1889, stating that I informed him the mistake which occasioned the delay was an error on the part of the firemen in leaving the station without giving a general alarm. Now sir in the first place I wish to correct the statement, as I never had any conversation with him since the above mentioned fire in regard to fire matters. And in the second place it is not the duty of the firemen to sound an alarm but to proceed to the fire as quickly as possible.

I was in the hall myself at the time the electric alarm was given and went with the hose wagon to the fire, instructing the town bell to be rung while passing the Arcade, which was immediately done. After reaching the fire I telephoned from the C.P.R. station for the engine and in the meantime the town clerk had procured a team from Mr. Snowden's livery, which drew the engine to the scene of the fire. As to the further statement of the chairman that the packing had been loosened in one of the cylinders of the engine by the drive to Auburn a few nights before, I cannot say whether the packing was loose or not, but I do know that the time which had elapsed between the fire at Auburn, which occurred on the morning of December 26th, 1888, and the fire at Mr. Rehill's on the evening of Jan. 17th, 1889, left no excuse for the engineer not knowing whether the engine was in working order or not. I merely make this explanation to exonerate the firemen from all blame in the matter. Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for your valuable space,

I remain yours, etc.,
THOS. RUTHERFORD,
Chief Engineer of Peterborough Fire Department.
Peterborough, Feb. 27th, 1889.

A New Zealand Letter.

A Descriptive Letter from the Antipodes—A poor Opinion of New Zealand.

The following letter has been received by Mr. Wm. Rust from his son, Mr. Dixon Rust, written from New Zealand. The letter is an interesting one and well worthy careful perusal:—

ASHBURTON, New Zealand, Jan. 12th., 1889.

DEAR FATHER:—I neglected writing last mail. I was "up country," as they call it here, and missed the date of sailing. I am in New Zealand at the time of writing this letter, still with the blisters, but by the time you receive it I expect I will be back in Victoria again. When the harvest is through here I will be done with the Massey Co. for this year—and for good, I guess. I am tired of travelling. I have not been ten days in a place since I left Peterborough, and "a rolling stone gathers no moss," but rather wears it off. I will have some difficulty in getting a situation as paterfamilias, for two reasons—one is, I have no grey hairs; the other is the lack of enterprise in this country among manufacturers. They are fully one hundred years behind Canada. They import everything they want, which is draining the money out of the country, and they export nothing in comparison. Wool is the principal export this year. They will have very little grain to export. Provisions are at a famine price. Although the colonies this year hay is 50 and 60 dollars a ton; in Melbourne oats $1.50 per bushel Potatoes are 6 cents a pound. They boast about their fruit, but I tell them they don't know what fruit is. But they know what to ask for it. Grapes just now in New Zealand are 75 cents per pound. Tomatoes, which ought to be common, are worth 25 per pound. I think I described the crops of Victoria in my last letter; but for crops New Zealand takes the palm. The like of them I never saw. Fancy a crop of oats so tall you can reach up with your hand as high as you can, and a person cut side the grain could not see you. They often have as high as 60 bushels of wheat and 100 bushels of oats to the acre. But every country has its drawbacks. One drawback here is the northwest winds, which, if they come on when the grain is ripe or nearly so, blows the grain out of the heads and almost strips it clean. Their summer weather here, though, is something grand not too hot nor too cold. New Zealand, taking it on the whole, is a poor country. They are terribly in debt. Government officials in this country seek office for sake of plunder, and then return to England to live. The Colonials are as a rule unprincipled; they do not know what honor is.

Well, if I spend a year in the colonies it will be as much as I will do. I do not like the country. Ontario is the finest country, in my estimation, that I have seen. I have met several Canadians here and they all say the same thing. One thing I have missed, the cold weather, but I have had an equivalent in heat. Christmas Day I was in Melbourne, and the heat was something dreadful. My clothes were wetter than I ever before had them with perspiration. People say they never saw the like of it before, but that is all rot; they have it every year. Again, they say February and March are the two warmest months. If they are, I don't want any of them. That draft I got from Mr. Roper I had to send to London to get it cashed, and won't get a return before April. It was lucky for me that I had plenty of money without it, for this is a hard place to be without cash.

I made a mistake, when I was in British Columbia, that I did not stay there. Vancouver, the terminus of the C.P.R., is a rising place, and if I had invested what money I had in land there I could not have gone astray. I see by the papers that there has been a terrible blizzard through America, and a great loss of life. I should have had you write every boat after I left and and addressed my letters to Massey address. Then I would have known how you were getting along at home; but we will soon have a mail now.

Give my love to all the folks, and when I get a return mail I will take you all in rotation. I suppose Mr. Hamilton is hard at work on next year's machines. Give him, and also R. Nichols my compliments.

Good-bye, and a happy New Year to you all.

Benefort.

The roads are pretty well filled owing to recent storms, but as there is a good covering of snow, it is expected that business in driving will be well attended to.

Mr. Manley has purchased a first class thresher for next season's work, from Mr. P. Hamilton, Peterborough. If the season be favorable, he will oblige customers on both sides of the river.

The Sunday school entertainment, held in No. 3 school house, on Friday evening, 15inst., was well attended. A good and interesting programme was given. The proceeds, which will be used in aid of Sunday school, amounted to about fourteen dollars.

The meetings addressed recently by Father Chiniquy at Centreville were a decided success, judging from numbers on Sunday and total receipts. Seating in the church was nearly impossible on Sunday. The collection taken amounted to about twenty dollars, and the total amount including lecture receipts was about eighty dollars. Part of this is to be used by Father Chiniquy in his work, and the balance goes to the Women's Foreign Mission Society.

Apsley.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Apsley is improving at last. Messrs. Gallon and Webster put up a new store, boarding house, stables, sheds last summer and are intending to put up another building this year. Mr. B. Bullied bought the cricket ground and put up a house on it. Mr. Cornelius Daly built a new house. The tenders are asked for a new school house near Apsley. Mr. T. Eastland has got together several thousand feet of matched lumber to put up another building.

Lumbering is going on briskly. The Messrs. Stricklands have four camps and Mr. Irwin has one in Burleigh. The Messrs. Rathbun have let jobs to about seventy settlers about Loon Lake and Eels' Creek. One of them has in $800 worth of logs and railroad ties now.

Mr. Sharp, of Chandos, died very sudden on Friday week. He was in good health. He and his wife were on their way to Coe Hill, and went into an neighbors house. Mr. Sharp dropped dead. He leaves a wife and four children in poor circumstances. He was 65 years of age. He was a local preacher for the Methodists for many years.

Pigott's Way of Doing It.

How he forged the Parnell Letters—Pigott to be brought Back from France.

(By Cable to Examiner.)

LONDON, Feb. 27.

In the House of Commons to-day Matthew's Secretary for Home affairs stated that the authorities were taking steps to secure the extradition of Pigott from Paris.

When the Parnell Commission opened this morning Attorney-General Webster read a letter that Mr. Shannon, the Times Dublin solicitor, had received from Pigott. The letter was dated Saturday and contained the confession Pigott made to Labouchere. He stated that he fabricated the letters by using genuine letters of Parnell and Egan, copying such work showing the general character of the writing and tracing them against the window pane. He afterwards destroyed the genuine letters.

A GOVERNMENT VICTORY.

Excited Debate Over the Registry Office Bill.

TORONTO, Feb. 26.—Mr. Meredith asked some days ago if the members of the House were ever going to get down to work. A practical answer is furnished. They are getting down to work, but their proceedings cannot be said to be characterized by a very great degree of public interest. True, the lower galleries were yesterday pretty well filled, but the upper gallery was empty. The attendance of members on the Government side was a little better than on Monday, but Mr. Meredith of the Opposition was conspicuous by his absence.

Then the House went into committee to consider Government orders. Mr. Gibson's bill to amend the Pharmacy Act was passed through its second reading. The greatest amount of discussion took place on Mr. Hardy's motion for the second reading of a bill to give representation in the Legislative Assembly to Nipissing district. A deputation waited on the Government some time ago with this object in view, and the reasons advanced by the members of that deputation for giving representation to Nipissing were brought forward by the Commissioner of Crown Lands yesterday.

The bill was passed.

Then the Premier's Registry Office bill created quite a debate.

Mr. Creighton accused the Government of trying to make another office in order to give it to one of its followers.

Mr. H. E. Clarke, amidst cries of "Order," spoke of the creation of office for some needy mendicant for Government favor. He concluded by saying that so far as Toronto was concerned no one desired the changes proposed.

In the evening the debate was resumed by Mr. Meredith. He made a rattling good speech, condemning the measure and moved an amendment, the effect of which would have been to give the bill a six months' hoist.

Mr. Mowat so ably defended his measure. He would not withdraw the bill as his friend opposite had recommended, because it was a very good bill and one in the interests of the people, whereat the Opposition applauded albeit ironically. The proposed measure, he continued, was extremely simple, extremely reasonable and the Premier hoped the House would have no hesitation in voting down Mr. Meredith's motion. A number of other members followed from both sides of the House. Dominion politics were dragged in and the Opposition were accused of condemning measures in Ontario which they countenanced at Ottawa.

Mr. Meredith's amendment was defeated on the following division and the bill received its second reading:

YEAS.—Blythe, Clancy, Clarke (H. E., Ter.) Craig, Creighton, Cruess, Fell, French, Hammell, Hess, Hudson, Ingram, Kerns, Lees, Marter, Meacham, Meredith, Metcalf, Miller, Meak, Morgan, Ostrom, Preston, Rorke, Smith (Frontenac), Stewart, Tooley, Whitney, Willoughby, Wood (Hastings), Wylie.

NAYS.—Allan, Armstrong, Awrey, Balfour, Ballantyne, Bishop, Blezard, Brouson, Caldwell Chisholm, Clarke (Wellington) Commee Dack, Dance, Dyer, Evanturel, Ferguson, Field, Fraser, Freeman, Garson, Gibson (Hamilton), Gibson (Huron), Gilmour, Gould, Graham, Guthrie, Harcourt, Hardy, Lyon, Mackelcan, McKay, McMahon, Meek, Merlin, Mowat, Murray, O'Connor, Pacaud, Phelps, Rayside, Robillard, Ross (Huron), Ross (Middlesex), Smith (York), Snider, Sprague, Stratton, Waters, Wood (Brant).

Up to the Highest Figure.

KINGSTON, Feb. 26.—The license commissioners, having stated their intention to reduce the number of licenses in the city, the council last night, in order to meet the loss in revenue, increased the license fee to $300, the maximum allowed by law.

They Were Not All Forged.

LONDON, Feb. 26.—Attorney-General Webster received a letter written by Pigott Sunday, which says "I informed Mr. Labouchere Saturday that I forged all the letters I gave The Times. That is not so. [Laughter.] I got the first eleven letters from Casey in Paris. 'Murphy' was a fictitious name. Casey had the letters three months before I induced him to sell them. I paid him three fourths of the £500. These letters I believe to be genuine. The second batch comprised two Parnell letters and one Egan letter. I forged the bodies of the Parnell letters and Casey forged the signatures. Casey gave me Egan's letter, which I do not doubt is genuine. The last batch comprised three letters, Davitt's and O'Kelly's, which were similarly forged. Egan's letters were genuine. When making the statement to Mr. Labouchere I was afraid of a prosecution for forgery. Mr. Labouchere promised me that I would not be prosecuted if I made a statement. He also said he pledged his word of honor that the Parnellites would give my children £3000. I ask The Times to deal with me leisurely. I have been in difficulties and great distress for the last twenty years and to support myself and family I have been guilty of many acts that must disgrace me." The Attorney-General produced Pigott's affidavit stating the contents of the letter were true.

Mr. Parnell is Looking Well.

LONDON, Feb. 26.—Mr. Parnell has gone to the country. He is looking well. It is stated that when the Parnell Commission was first proposed Lord Randolph Churchill wrote W. H. Smith cautioning him against assenting to the proposition.

DINNER
is always a subject for sighs with a housekeeper and she often wishes that the law settled the question of "What shall we have for dinner," and prescribed certain dishes for certain days. Such a law we'd certainly save a great deal of worry and questioning to many tired women. TURNBULL'S

The Flood of the Season's French and English Printed Calicoes is rolling in—white capped and aglow phosphorescent, color play. How the Priscellas of the past would joy to see them? Pretty as you have seen them, they were never so handsome before. Persian designs, leaves, buds, flowers, polka, dots, plain stripes, scrabbles and scrawls, angles and tangles. More than 300 different styles, small figures, large figures, and mourning designs, better printing was never done 'exquisite.' If you don't want to buy, don't pass the window or come in. Prices range from 6 to 15 cents.

The trouble with low grade Marseilles Bed Spreads has been loose threads at the back—lace, all right, but you didn't like the fiddle-string arrangement at the back, needn't. Here are $2.50 Marseilles Bed Spreads, full size and handsome patterns, with backs firm and well finished. Look at this honey-comb quilt for $1, which needs no apology for either size or weight.

Flannelettes—what are they? Are they all-wool? No they are mostly cotton, finished to imitate a Flannel, and especially adapted for childrens' dresses and ladies' wrappers. They consist of Cream Grounds, with pink, blue and cardinal Stripes, blue and white, pink and cream, pink and blue, and pink, cream and grey, some 18 patterns in all—the best quality being only 12½ cents a yard.

Opened out this week, a line of Linen Tablings, the maker of which is noted the world over. They are specially suited for every day wear—the warp is well twisted and they wash and iron well.

Before you hear from us again, I will have visited the wholesale markets where I will be on the look-out for Bargains for my Customers.

PLUNGED DOWN TO DEATH

TERRIBLE RAILWAY TRAGEDY AT ST. GEORGE, ONT.

Nine Killed and Thirty Wounded—Many Ontario Visitors—Running Forty Miles an Hour—The Story of the Accident.

ST. GEORGE, Feb. 27.—Never in the history of Western Ontario since the Desjardines Canal accident has the population been thrown into such a state of excitement as they were to-night by the intelligence that the east-bound St. Louis express due at this station at 6 p.m. had gone through the iron bridge a few yards east of the station.

The train is one of the heaviest loaded on the line and consisted to-night of five coaches, baggage, passenger, smoking, Pullman and dining cars.

As soon as can be ascertained the accident happened in the following manner. The pilots red broke from one of the trucks passed the station, and the rails to spread as it proceeded. The engine, tender and smoking car crossed the bridge in safety, but just as the passenger coach was near the centre of the bridge the terrible affair occurred.

The firemen noticed that all was not right and jumped, receiving a severe scalp wound.

The passenger car fell over the bridge, turned a somersault and landed right side up. The Pullman remained on the bridge.

The dining-room car continued about seven people besides the employes. Supper had just been announced and in a few minutes the car would have been filled and all must have perished.

The following is a list of the killed and wounded:

The Killed.

GEORGE LEGGAT of Mitchell.
W. WEMP of London.
DR. LEVI HOYT SWAN of Woodstock.
A. W. FRANCIS of Woodstock.
MR. McLEAN of the firm of McLean & Dresher, Detroit, Mich.
E. R. BAINES, general storekeeper Grand Trunk Railway, London.
CAPTAIN MOORE, a Salvation Army lass from Brantford.
MR. PERRIS of Woodstock.
HARRY ANGLE, fireman.

The Injured.

The following are more or less severely injured:

THOS. L. DOCHERTY, the temperance lecturer.
MRS. JENKINS of Paris.

D. W. KANE of Woodstock.
WILLIAM BRENDOUR of Sanilac, Mich.
MISS ANDREWS of Lambeth.
DR. H. LEGUERRES of Cleveland, O.
MRS. A. S. SEMBALL of Detroit.

The town is wild with excitement and special trains have brought delegations from various points. The accident was witnessed by some of the townspeople, the alarm was given immediately and in a few moments the streets were the scene of the wildest excitement. Merchants and tradesmen were on their way to supper, but they left the evening meal untouched and hurried toward the scene of the wreck.

Every available conveyance was hurried to the bridge, and as the dead and wounded were taken one of the debris they were conveyed, some to hotels, some to private residences and still others to the Mechanics' Institute hall and the station house.

A noble army of heroic women turned out to minister to the wounded and dying. All the doctors were soon on hand and attended without delay to the poor mortals who groaned and cried for help.

An auxiliary train soon arrived from Hamilton and another from London. A special came from Woodstock, a sister town that has suffered much more heavily than any other, bringing a large number of people.

Doctors came from Paris, Brantford, Hamilton, Woodstock and London. For a time the hands of all were full.

The scene of the wreck is appalling. On one part of the bridge are 4 number of ties heaped together and some of them splintered to atoms. The partially demolished Pullman occupies a place on the bridge, and appears to look down in pity upon the sorrowful scene. The dining car stands up almost perpendicularly upon its end, the upper end leans against one of the vast stone piers.

The hind wheels of the driving car became detached from it just before it took its fearful leap for the ground and they now nestle in the iron framework of the bridge.

The first-class coach took a complete somersault in the descent, and though it landed right side up it is nearly demolished. A heap of debris lies at the foot of one of the piers, and a strange conglomeration is it of car wheels, stoves and other railway attachments.

Engineer Brown stuck to his post and passed over in safety, while the poor fireman jumped and was so severly injured that he died.

The bridge, formerly of wood, is about sixty feet high, was a substantial iron structure with massive stone piers, and to avoid even the possibility of an accident was overhauled a week or two ago. It stood the strain a few years ago of a heavy freight train on which two or three cars had jumped the rails, caused by a broken wheel, and only the heavy dining car broke through the iron trestle work after the ties and woodwork were stripped off by the preceding car.

The dining car being strongly constructed of iron was almost impenetrable by the axes and saws. The poor fellows were pitched to the bottom amongst a mass of broken cables and debris. Upon the top of all this was the cooking furnace in full running order. The danger of fire was imminent and luckily the first thought of the rescuers was to prevent this still worse horror befalling the poor victims crushed beneath.

Beneath all one man was calling for help and when taken out was scarcely injured. The shrieks of a lady near him were heart-rending, but she died before they could rescue her. Two men were sitting together talking. One was killed instantly, the other was rescued badly, but not hopelessly, injured.

A special train was sent for Coroner Webster to Paris, and an inquest was opened in Mechanics' Hall.

RETICENT OFFICIALS.

Thirty Londoners on the Ill-Fated Train —Excitement in the Forest City.

LONDON, Feb. 27.—About 30 tickets were purchased at the station here by passengers on the St. Louis express this afternoon, and when the accident to the train was reported the city caused great excitement throughout the city. The news spread very rapidly and the G. N. W. Telegraph office was soon besieged by anxious enquirers. Nothing whatever could be learned at the depot about the accident, the railroad officials being very reticent. E. R. Baines, general storekeeper of the Grand Trunk Railway, and W. M. Wemp, travelling agent for the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway, from this city, are amongst the killed. Conductor Revell and Frank McLaughlin are in the wounded list.

Mr. Frank Stephen, brother of Mr. George Stephen, and Mr. A. Beck of this city intended taking passage on this train, but as the last moment decided to go via the Canadian Pacific Railway.

Later Particulars.

HAMILTON, Feb. 28, 2.20a.m.—Most of the injured have been taken to Brantford. Some of them, however, are now at Hamilton. Timber is now being loaded here for the purpose of repairing the bridge.

The Wounded Taken to Brantford.

HAMILTON, Feb. 28, 8.40 a.m.—The train that left here at 7.30 p.m. has just returned. A corps of ten surgeons went out to the wreck and rendered assistance to the wounded.

The wounded were met, as expected, brought here. They will be taken on to Brantford.

At the hospital here arrangements had been made for the reception of 40 patients.

Another train will leave here this morning for St. George.

A TRAVELER'S DESCRIPTION.

How the Dead Were Found and the Wounded Cared For.

TORONTO, Feb. 28.—More graphic was the description given by Mr. J. C. Gilroy, traveler for the firm of Wyld, Grasett & Darling, who with Mr. T. L. L. Lewis of the Creighton Comet Co. was seated in the smoking car of the ill-fated train. Said Mr. Gilroy:

"I was on one side of the smoker at about 6 o'clock and Mr. Lewis was opposite me. We were waiting for supper to be served in the dining car, the tickets having just been given out. Suddenly we felt the wheels bumping over the ties. We jumped to our feet and rushed out just as the train came to a standstill, and we found ourselves about one hundred yards on the other side of the bridge. Rushing back we saw the bridge broken and the three last cars in ruins. The first class passenger car, which was next to the smoker, had been thrown off the bridge and precipitated to the ground sixty feet below. It had turned a complete somersault and landed with the wheels down. The dining car, which was next to the ordinary passenger, had also gone flying over the bridge and had turned the ground, but is stood perpendicular against one of the big stone abutments, only one end resting on the ground. The sleeping car did not go down but is hung in the wreck between two of the abutments.

"I've read of such things," said Mr. Gilroy, "and I saw one at St. George, but I never want to see another. It was simply horrible. All is over the cars that were safe hurried out and rushed back and down the embankment. The passenger car that had gone clean over commenced to burn, but the men set to work and with snow and their coats quenched the fire and saved many lives from death by burning. Many a good fur coat was spoiled. I helped to carry three dead men out of the wreck of this car and saw a couple of women badly smashed. Miss McLeod of Ingersoll was injured and so was Mrs. Jennings of Paris and her child, but the lady much more seriously than her child. Mrs. Higgins of the Rossin House, Toronto, was also hurt. I saw an elderly gray-haired lady whom I was told was Mrs. Evans, matron of a home in Toronto, whose face was horribly crushed in. The St. George people were extremely kind and drove out with all sorts of rigs to remove the dead and dying to the hotels and other places; the doctors of St. George and Paris did grand work.

"But the great and awful sight was that of the people in the overthrown passenger car. The dead and dying were lifted out and laid on the snow, and there were only two people out of the car who were able to come away with us. Miss Mabeleon of Hamilton was pinned within the car under some timbers. She was close to a window and seeing the flames start smashed the glass and worked herself out, her injuries being some ugly bruises and her clothing rather badly torn. When we got down we saw her smashing other windows with a stick and helping to liberate other passengers. She did some grand work."

Another passenger who reached Toronto last night gave this account: When the express left Detroit at noon it consisted of a baggage car, smoker, passenger coach, Pullman and dining car, in the order named. All the cars were pretty well filled, but the crowd of passengers was much increased as the train progressed east. At Wood-stock there was a large accession. There were many ladies on board, mostly of those between the Pullman and the passenger coach. It was dark on to 5.40 when the train neared the fatal spot. The first intimation the passengers had of it was the jolting of the cars over the ties of the bridge. A freight train from the west had passed safely over about an hour before.

The engine, tender, baggage car and smoker, although all off the track, got safely across. The passenger coach, immediately behind, cut loose from the procession and darted over the bridge. The trucks parted company with the body and were thrown about 50 yards apart. The body with its human freight struck the bottom of the creek with a tremendous crash and there lay. Strange to say the Pullman car remained on the bridge, but the sleeping car behind it got away and followed the coach. In its descent it struck one of the stone piers of the bridge, the force of the collision breaking the car completely in two. The pier itself was also ruined. The dining room car, the last of all, also went over. It bounded against another pier and the shock threw it end up, in which position it yet lies. The scene immediately after the accident was one of horror, which was added to by the fact that the dining room car caught fire and began to burn fiercely. The uninjured passengers, however, in a short, sharp struggle conquered the flames and saved the injured from a terrible death.

One lady going to Hamilton had a most miraculous escape. She was seated in the passenger coach next to another woman. When the crash came her companion was killed and she was untouched, and able to crawl out of a window. As soon as she got out she fainted, but shortly afterwards recovered and worked as hard as the stoutest man, and to as good purpose. The people of St. George turned out to a man with sleighs, bringing the wounded up to the village. The dead were taken to the depot and there laid out. Four bodies were taken out of the passenger coach alone.

Conductor Revell, who had charge of the train, was slightly injured, but he and the other train hands worked like heroes. The excitement in Hamilton when the news of the accident reached there was intense. All kinds of rumors were afloat at first. The G.T.R. people at Hamilton were reticent, simply telling inquirers that there was nothing to be alarmed at, and that the engine only had left the track. However, when a general call for doctors had been given out, and the preparations to send out the wrecking train with a double gang began to be perceived, the suspected disaster was confirmed. The wrecking train left Hamilton at 6.37, having on board a staff of 12 doctors and a wrecking gang of 60 men in charge of Conductor Flavell.

The train when crossing the bridge was going at the rate of 45 miles an hour, the usual gait at this section of the road.

The Scene of the Accident.

St. George is a small station on the main line of the Great Western, between Harrisburg and Paris. It is in the township of South Dumfries, in the County of Brant; and the village lies one mile north of the railway track. The station is distant from Harrisburg about two miles, and the accident happened a few yards east of St. George, that is, on the way to Harrisburg.

THE VICTIMS.

Brief Biographical Sketches of Those Who Went Down to Death.

Egerton Robert Baines was the son of the late Thomas Baines of Toronto, and brother of Messrs. William and C. C. Baines, brokers, and of Dr. Allen Baines of Toronto. He was about 57 years of age and leaves a widow, four sons and one daughter. The eldest son is Mr. Hanley Baines, who is agent of the Dominion Bank at Napanee, the other sons being W. B. Baines and Harry Baines of Toronto, and R. A. Baines of Chicago; the daughter is unmarried. The deceased's mother, aged 74, is also living in Toronto.

The deceased gentleman was educated at Upper Canada College, and in England, and was connected with the Great Western Railway and Grand Trunk Railway for twenty-five years, being purchasing agent for the Grand Trunk Railway since the amalgamation of the two roads, and before that with the freight department at Hamilton. He had been living in London for six years, where he was warden in St. Thomas Church, and was on his way to Toronto to stay with his brother, the doctor, in Simcoe-street. He was a genial, well read man, with many friends and no enemies.

Dr. Levi Hoyt Swan

was a prominent physician of Woodstock, where he practised for the last 20 years. He was about 50 years of age and leaves a family of two children. One of them, his daughter, was married to Fred Cox, son of Mr. Cox of the Canada Lete, last week. Dr. Swan was a member of the town council for the past three years and also surgeon for the 22nd Battalion.

Captain Moore,

one of the "Hallelujah Lassies" of the Salvation Army, was about 23 years of age and unmarried. She was on furlough and had been resting at Brantford. She was formerly stationed at Burlington. She was well known at other stations, but had not been connected with the Toronto Salvationists.

William Wemp

was the traveling agent for the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway Company. He was born in Canada about 45 years ago. He formerly lived at Chatham, Ont., and went into the railway business about four or five years ago. He was an all-round good railroad man although his experience in that business was not very extended.

Hamlin W. Mann.

Mayor of Woodstock, is a leading member of the firm of Karn & Co., organ manufacturers, about 55 years of age. He represented the town for the past two years as reeve, is a prominent member of the Baptist denomination and a member of the Senate of McMaster University. He is also a director of the Manufacturers' Life Assurance Company of Toronto, in which company he is insured for $10,000. He has a wife and three small children.

THE WOMEN DISAPPOINTED.

Saltfleet Mr. Waters's Bill Defeated in the Ontario Legislature.

TORONTO, Feb. 28.—The galleries of the Local House presented an unusual appearance yesterday. Crowded were they to their utmost limit by ladies deeply interested in the passage of Mr. Waters' bill to enable widows and unmarried women to vote for members of the Legislative Assembly. The upper gallery was also crowded. There was little applause during the speech of the mover and the reply from the principal opponent of the measure, Mr. Dryden, but both members received liberal applause at the commencement and finish of their speeches. A pleasing feature was the presentation by the ladies of a handsome bouquet to Mr. Waters while addressing the house.

Mr. McIntosh favored the passage of the bill and made a brief but telling and humorous speech in favor of it.

Mr. Armstrong (Perry Sound) favored the measure. Dr. Gilmour (West York) opposed the bill.

Hon. A. M. Ross did not favor the discrimination contained in the measure.

Mr. Hewitt (East York) was of the same opinion, and would, as the bill stood, be compelled to vote against it.

In the evening, after a number of private bills had been passed through their second reading, Mr. H. E. Clarke resumed the debate on Mr. Waters' bill. He did not consider the franchise was a natural right at all; it was a civil right.

Mr. Hardy moved an amendment to the original bill, coinciding with the words "It is the duty of this House as now constituted to refuse in no account to any measure involving the principle of female suffrage at parliamentary elections."

Mr. Mowat spoke in favor of the amendment. His old opinions that women suffrage would be a good and useful thing was unchanged.

Mr. Meredith entered an emphatic protest against the bill.

Mr. Creighton also opposed the bill, and the amendment put to the House was carried by a vote of 56 to 32.

WHEATLEY SCORCHED.

Three Buildings Burnt to the Ground—Loss $15,000, Partly Insured.

WHEATLEY, Feb. 27.—This morning about 12.15 fire broke out here starting at Henry Dring's stable. The next building caught was a feed stable belonging to A. Merritt, and occupied by W. Coulson, and a few minutes after the building owned by T. Underwood, and occupied by Mr. Crawford, hardware merchant, was in flames. In the course of an hour all three buildings were burned to the ground. By hard labor H. Scott's store and the Commercial Hotel escaped the flames, though badly scorched. The horses and most of the rigs were saved. The total loss is about $15,000, pretty nearly covered by insurance.

Winnipeg Wire Whispers.

WINNIPEG, Feb. 27.—In the Legislature last night Fisher, Campbell and Roblin strongly opposed the Government in supply because no information or plans were submitted, and a resolution was offered demanding the probable cost of certain items before any sum be voted. It was voted down, 28 to 6.

To-day the Government announced its policy towards the Hudson Bay Railway, wiping out the old guarantee act and offering $2000 bonus per mile.

The Conservative Association meeting last night was an exciting one. Scarth was elected president but declined and R. L. Drewry was elected in his place.

The Clarke-Burrows criminal libel suit was adjourned till to-morrow.

Natural Gas Explosions.

PITTSBURG, Feb. 27.—A natural gas explosion occurred at Tarentum last night. The concussion almost completely demolished two brick dwellings and two smaller buildings. All the occupants were more or less scratched and bruised. The loss is heavy.

A natural gas explosion here this morning wrecked the frame house of Patrick Murray. The family of five were still in bed and it is a miracle that all were not killed. They all received painful injuries.

Ottawa Notes.

OTTAWA, Feb. 27.—John Hamilton of East Whitby was brought before Police Magistrate Grierson yesterday on the charge of firing a revolver. He was fined $20.

J. W. Ray of the Queen's Hotel and L. Maxwell, druggist, were before the Police Magistrate for violating the Scott Act, but their cases were postponed to Monday next.

A 10-year-old daughter of Wm. Carr of this place was run over by a handsleigh today and received serious injuries.

Canada and Australasia.

OTTAWA, Feb. 28.—The Government has received a reply to its invitation sent last November to the Australasian colonies asking them to send delegates to Ottawa to take part in an intercolonial conference for the purpose of discussing improved trade relations between Canada and Australasia, and joint action in regard to the proposed Pacific cable. The reply is of a most friendly and fraternal character, thoroughly appreciatory of the good-will involved in the invitation. Our antipodean brothers point out, however, that as they consist of seven governments to Canada's one, it would be more convenient to them if the Dominion would send her representatives to Australia to take part in a conference such as is proposed, and mentioned Sydney or Melbourne as a likely place for the holding of the gathering. In the event of Canada accepting this proposal her delegates are promised a royal greeting, and the colonies express themselves as willing to discuss all questions likely to affect their or our welfare. The Government will not, however, consider this proposal until after the session.

All Quiet in Panama.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—The United States Consuls at Panama and Colon report that no trouble is anticipated because of the collapse of the Canal Company. Hundreds of West India negroes and Frenchmen are returning home every month, and 300 white laborers a month are leaving for Chili to work on railways.

Important Official Testimony.

(Ottawa Free Press.)

It has been frequently charged that there is an exodus of population from Manitoba and the Northwest Territories, and that the immigrants who are brought into the country through the government's assisted immigration system, do not remain in Canada but go to the United States. These charges the organs of the government have, of course, denied, but unfortunately the annual statements of the immigration agents in Manitoba, published in the report of the Minister of Agriculture for 1888, establishes the charges of the Opposition only too accurately. Mr. Grahame, the immigration agent at Winnipeg, in his annual report to the Minister of Agriculture says:—

"Many will be surprised to learn, that the number of actual settlers in our province and territories, has not been as large as expected neither has the amount of wealth brought in by those who have come, been as considerable as that of former years. This may appear strange, when we consider the many efforts put forth by the different organizations, to induce immigration to the province and neighboring territories, but it is nevertheless a fact that out of the many thousands who left the mother country ostensibly for the Northwest, a large number of them have found occupation and homes on the Pacific coast, and I regret to say a large majority of these are on the American side.

I came in contact with great numbers of people, who were, as they said, passing through to British Columbia, having been advised by British and continental steamship and transportation agents that work and opportunities for investments were never greater than during the present year. On arriving at Vancouver, a busy active thriving young town, but, owing to its comparatively recent origin capable of supplying employment to a limited number, hundreds of these people were disappointed, and seeing that remain there in idleness, took the steamboats for Port Townsend, Seattle, Tacoma, and other points in Washington Territory, Oregon, Arizona, and Northern California. During a visit to these territories, I had met while they were en route through Winnipeg, many of them old Canadian residents, and others new arrivals direct from Europe. When I questioned them why they went over to the Americans, instead of remaining on the Canadian side, their reply was, in substance, what I have already stated, namely, that on their arrival at Vancouver and Victoria, they found the demand for labor limited, the facilities for active agriculture with small capital low, and, not caring to return, they went further west, as they found it cost less money to do so. I took a keen interest in this subject, and, interviewed the purse of the local steamboats from whom I gathered information that would lead me to believe that the steamboats plying between Vancouver, Victoria, San Francisco and the various ports at the head of Puget Sound, carried very little less than ten thousand immigrants, most of whom left Europe with the intention of remaining in British possessions."

From the foregoing it appears that the efforts of the government to populate the Northwest, and the vast expenditures of public money upon steamship subsidies, assisted passages, and immigration agents, are resulting simply in populating Washington and Oregon territories. The immigrants who leave Europe for the Northwest get cheap passages from the steamships which are subsidized by the Dominion Government. They are transported inland and fed at the expense of the Canadian taxpayers, but their ultimate destination, as Mr. Grahame points out, is the Pacific States. Why is it that settlers who leave Europe with the intention of making homes for themselves in Canada do not remain here? It can not be said that Manitoba and the Northwest are inferior to any other part of the continent as a field for the agriculturist. On the contrary there is abundant evidence to prove that our Northwest, if properly developed and decently governed, would form the great wheat field of the world. Why is it then that settlers will not remain there? Does the policy of trade restriction and high taxation not tend to frighten them away? Do they get alarmed when told that they are not to be permitted to trade with the millions of people in the republic to the south of them? If there is anything "unpatriotic" in calling attention to the statements of the immigration agent at Winnipeg, the responsibility must rest with the minister of agriculture. It is quite possible that Mr. Carling's report will be quoted by American emigration agents to prove that those who go to the Canadian Northwest do not remain there, and that it is better to take passage for the States direct.

About Card-Playing.

(For the Examiner.)

"Whether therefore ye eat or drink or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God."—I Corinthians, x., 31.

Play euchre? Yes, surely! No, friends, we do not,
Though many who bear Jesus' Name
May do so, because 'tis the fashion to wile
Away social hours at this game.

You may call us straight-laced, or too strict, we care not,
So long as we know we are in
The company of Jesus for with Him we can't Expect the world's friendship to win.

For those who the world's smiling favors would gain,
Are not the true children of God,
For the path way of holiness is the one of Separation, that Jesus Christ trod.

Ostracized we may be, but still we decline
Even cushre progressive to play;
Its tendency, like other card-playing, is
To lead the unstable astray.

That others in things that are harmful indulge
Or fail in perfor mn ; what's right,
Cannot shield you from blame in doing what's wrong;
For five blacks do not make a white.

We beg you consider well, if, at this time,
Our Lord walked this world, would we find Him sitting with card-players; those who are His
True fellowers should have His mind.

"Christ pleased not Himself," and we should deny
Ourselves selfish pleasures for sake
Of the weaker ones, whom our influences may Effect their soul's interest at stake.

"No one to himself ever liveth," Paul says,
How solemn to those who profess
The Lord, in the thought, that for evil or good
They power over others possess.

Let those who the truth of God's word would instil
In the heart of young children beware
Lest partaking in what they deem harmless, they may
In the little ones' path prove a snare.

That game that was played with some dear chosen friends,
In the house of some Sunday school boy,
May many years after that hour's rob of what
One time was its pride and its joy.

"All things should be done to the glory of God."
Does that with card playing agree?
And ponder the time that it wasted that must
Be given account of by thee.

"Come out and be separate," what mean these words?
"And conformed to the world do not be."
"Our citizenship is in heaven," from whence
Our Lord we expect soon to see.

And he who once leaned on His bosom entrusts
Believers in Him to attide,
That when he appeareth they may not be ashamed,
At morning or at eventide.

EQUAL TO BLIND TOM.

A Little Negro Boy Who Possesses a Miraculous Memory.

A couple of dozen gentlemen assembled in Parlor L of the Astor house to witness the remarkable performances of a little blind negro boy from Texas, who has attracted a good deal of attention in the southern states by reason of his marvelous calculations, displaying wonderful and their most striking characteristic is remarkable mental development. He is a little over 3 years of age and has, it is said, a command of over five thousand words.

For an hour or more the little fellow amazed the visitors, answering without an instant's hesitation and apparently deriving the keenest enjoyment from the wonder which his replies aroused. He takes rank with and even surpasses Blind Tom as an untaught wonder, and that the African race should have produced two such prodigies was a subject of comment among those who heard the boy.

The name of this wonder is Oscar Moore, called "Professor Moore" by those having him in charge. He is a little taller than the seat of an ordinary chair, and can walk under a table without stooping. Save that his head is remarkably large and he has no nose, he does not differ in appearance from hundreds of "pickaninnies" to be met throughout the south. His dresses in short skirts, makes mud pies for amusement and can make as much noise as an able bodied man.

In order to bring this midget into sight H. P. N. Hammel, of Austin, Tex., who has him in charge, yesterday placed him on a chair in the middle of a large table. Everybody present was handed a little book containing some thousand or more difficult questions, pieces of poetry and arithmetical tests, which Oscar could rattle off, together with speeches on the tariff, chapters out of the Bible and other things at will.

Mr. Hammel explained that Oscar was born on a farm seven miles from Waco, Tex., Aug. 18, 1885; that both of his parents are uneducated negroes who had been slaves before the war, and that when hardly 1 year of age he learned whole sentences which were spoken in his presence, and first manifested a desire to talk by doing a sum in mental arithmetic which one of his sisters was unable to perform correctly. The boy is said to be perfectly healthy. One of the gentlemen present asked the question:

"How many languages are spoken in the world?"

"Two thousand seven hundred and fifty," came the answer promptly, and then the little fellow clapped his hands and laughed to himself to think how smart he was.

"Where is the largest bell in the world and how much does it weigh?" asked another.

"Moscow, Russia. How much does it weigh? 439,000 pounds."

"Which is the highest mountain in the United States?"

"Mount St. Elias, in the Rocky mountains."

"How high is it?"

"Seventeen thousand eight hundred and fifty feet."

"Now, Oscar, sing a song," said Mr. Hammel. Then the little fellow asked what kind of a song and Mr. Hammel said the gentleman wanted a song about himself. Thereupon he climbed down from his seat and sang a little song descriptive of himself. Oscar joined in the applause which greeted this performance and then made his great speech upon the tariff, which consisted of about five hundred words, and was fully as good as many of those delivered in congress over the Mills bill.—New York World.

A Queer Bridegroom.

A funny story comes from the village of Crumpton, where the gossips are discussing the marriage of Miss Mattie Glanding, the principal of the school, and Dr. C. T. Cahoon, the village physician and druggist. When the ministerial blessing had been given and the benediction pronounced, the happy pair stepped into the finest rig the town could afford and drove to Ralph's wharf, twelve miles away, to take the steamer Emma A. Ford for a wedding trip to this city and Washington. When the steamer was reached, however, the bridegroom concluded that he could not desert his practice and his drug store, even for the pleasure of a bridal tour, so placing his bride on the steamer, with many emphatic injunctions to the officers to look after her comfort, he slowly and sorrowfully wended his way home, while the lonely bride came on to Baltimore. Mrs. Cahoon visited friends here and in Washington, and enjoyed her lonely wedding tour as best she could. After three days' absence she returned, and yesterday morning was met by her husband at the wharf. The little house was ready for her, and the happy pair have gone to housekeeping.—Baltimore Cor. North American.

A Notable Tree.

A remarkable and notable tree in Chicopee has lately fallen beneath the blows of the woodman's ax. It stood on the old Parson McKinstry place, at the upper end of the street, the present owner of the place being Mrs. Taft, of this city. The tradition has always been that either Mr. or Mrs. McKinstry set out this tree when they built their house, which was about the time of Mr. McKinstry's settlement there as the first pastor of Springfield, in 1752. But since the tree was cut down it is believed that it must have been very much older than the house, and it is thought that it was fully 200 years old. It was a remarkably beautiful tree of the buttonwood variety, and the residents of Chicopee street are all cherishing as valuable keepsakes pieces of the wood of this famous tree. It had changed very little for the last seventy-five years, having been "hollow" as long as present octogenarians played under it, and hid themselves in its protecting hollow. The circumference of the tree where it was cut down was thirty feet, and sons and daughters of Chicopee will miss the familiar landmark.—Boston Herald.

Women in the Dentist's Chair.

Said an Albany dentist recently: "Women are my best customers. I think that two-thirds of the persons I operate on are ladies, and they stand the work fully as well as, if not better than, men. I presume it is because they feel that they must have it done, because nothing makes a woman look homelier than decayed or unclean teeth. You know a gentleman's mustache will cover his teeth so that nobody will notice ~~~

Prof Dorenwend's Wigs and Toupees for Gentlemen.

Gentlemen who have lost their hair are beginning to realize the great advantages derived from wearing artificial coverings. They supply protection to the scalp wherein nature has failed and also fill up the deficiency in appearance caused by baldness. Hundreds of gentlemen in all parts of America testify to the benefiting results of using Prof. Dorenwend's wigs and toupees. Each article is carefully made, is light and strong and when worn cannot be detected by the closest observer. Prof. Dorenwend will be at Phelan's hotel on Friday and Saturday, March 1st and 2nd, and will show a big stock of them. Go and see them whether you buy one or not; he makes no charge for trying them on. dw

WINTER

Is the season of the year when colder weather sharpens the appetite, and heartier and more invigorating food is necessary to maintain the heat of the body and to resist the wear and tear of the tissues, which goes on more rapidly during the cold weather and under increased activity. We have the cosier salads and drinks that refreshed us during the summer months, but in their place steaks and chops, smoking hot, and the steaming oatmeal and graham cakes and coffee.

At this time of the year Hams, pork, bacon, mackerel and other meats form a most desirable breakfast dish; and porridge, omelettes, oatmeal, wheaten cakes and a variety of cereals help make the repast a most delicious one.

Thirty Years Paying Rent in Peterborough.

I frequently hear statements akin to above, followed by remarks of deep regret for having missed many golden opportunities of buying whole lots at a price they would now have to pay for one foot of the same land. Buying property in Peterborough is the safest kind of a safe and profitable investment. I have at present cheap houses, medium class homes and a few exceedingly fine Residences and grounds some of which were built for home comforts, regardless of cost. Uncontrollable circumstances have never caused those to be offered for immediate sale much under value. I commence as $600, for good house and large lot. I can suit any reasonable buyer. MUNCASTER'S

MISS TINSEL.

By HENRY SEDLEY.

Miss Tinsel was as simply equipped as her room; a gown of dark stuff, with a bit of color at the throat, and that was all. Harding saw that she was not quite so perfect physically as he had thought, and this, strange as it may seem, instantly increased his passion for her. Nothing could make her figure other than beautiful, or impair the luster of her eyes; but the fair creature had a little range of freckles across her delicate nose and cheeks, and her hair by day appeared, as has been said before, nearly red. Her natural smile, on the other hand, as distinguished from her stage smile, which was merely intoxicating, was almost heavenly; and it was not made less so by an occasional look that was grave almost to sadness.

"Sit down." He was standing stock still and silent in the middle of the room. "You come from the theatre, don't you?"

He was standing stock still and silent.

It was a sweet voice—sweet and low—too low, in truth, which was one of the reasons of its failure in the drama—one of those thrilling contralto voices, most magnetic and charming when heard by one alone or close by, but which lost their magnetism and charm if strained to fill the ears of a crowd.

"No—yes—that is, I was there last night. I saw you there," he replies stupidly.

"Last night? Oh, yes; but why do you want to see me today?"

This is a hard question to answer, so he tries evasion.

"Did you get a bouquet?"

"A perfect love—a beauty—it was thrown at my feet; but I gave it to her, of course."

"Gave it to her?"

"Miss De Montague—don't you know—the 'Queen of the Fairy Bower?' She gets all the bouquets."

"Oh, she does, does she?"

"Certainly. She is the principal, you know. Her engagement calls for all the bouquets."

"Even when they are plainly intended for somebody else?"

"Ah, but they oughtn't to be intended for somebody else. If any one is so silly as to think somebody else ought to have a bouquet any one has to be punished. Then they forfeit him."

"Forfeit him?"

"Or his flowers. They always forfeit you in theatres—if you're late at rehearsal, you know, or if you keep the stage waiting. But then you needn't mind. Miss De Montague is a dear, good soul. She took the bouquet for the look of the thing, you know; that's business; but she gave me half the flowers when we got home."

"Does she live here, then?"

"Why, to be sure. You know we always go to the theatre together. Only for her I should be quite alone."

"And do you like this kind of thing?" he asks clumsily.

She bursts into a merry laugh. "Like it? Why, I get my living by it. We all have to live, you know, and I've no one to look out for me but myself and"——

She pauses suddenly, having caught his eye fixed upon her with a gaze of passionate admiration. This first calls up the look of gravity we have spoken of, and then brings the color sharply to her face. It also reminds her of the somewhat peculiar character of the interview. The instant after she resumes, as if continuing her sentence: "Did you come here to ask me that?"

"No," he replies bluntly. "I never thought of the question until the moment before I asked it."

"Please tell me, then," she proceeds, with gathering surprise, "what did you come for?"

He hesitates a moment, moved by the superstition or the honest feeling that he must tell her no word of untruth, and then quietly answers:

"I am not sure that I know."

"Not sure that you know?"

"No."

"Perhaps, then, you'll go away, and when you are sure"——

"Come back again?" hazards he.

"I didn't say that. You look and talk like a gentleman, and if, as I hope, you are one, you will know that I can't see strangers—people who have no business with me—and so you must excuse me." She has risen and moves with some dignity toward the door.

"One moment," he interposes. "Forgive me; you know for your part that it is impossible I should wish to offend"——

"How should I? You come here to me a stranger, and refuse to say what for"

"No; I did not refuse. I only said I was not sure that I knew why I came."

"Then you must be crazy!" she blurts out impulsively.

"Perhaps I am. I begin to think so."

"Then I wish you would go away!" she goes on with apprehension. "I'll tell you what, Mr. Bellario is here, and he's—oh, terribly strong!"

"Mr. Bellario!" he echoes.

"Yes: the 'Blood Red Demon,' you you. Didn't you see him go through the trap?"

Harding laughs, very much amused. "And you mean to threaten me with the 'Blood Red Demon,' do you?"

"Oh, no," she responds gently, but again edging toward the door, "not threaten, but"—in a very conciliatory

"Children Cry" for Pitcher's Castoria.

you won't say what you come for and won't go away"——

"But I will," he says, gravely.

"Will which?"

"Will both; I will say what I came for and then I will go away."

"I don't mean to be rude, you know," she puts in, softening.

"Nor I. Now I will tell you. I came because I could not possibly stay away—because you drew me toward you with an irresistible force"——

"I'm sure I didn't!" she protests indignantly.

"Unconsciously, of course. You may think me foolish—wild if you please. I can't help that. You will know better in time. I come to you saying not a wrong word, thinking not a wrong thought. There is nothing against me. At home I was a gentleman. I ask leave to visit you, respectfully as a friend, nothing more."

"But why?" she asks, bewildered.

"Because I admire you greatly, inexpressibly, and I must tell you so." She turns scarlet now. "But I shall never tell you this—not again—or anything else in words you do not choose to hear. All I ask is the leave now and then to see and to speak with you."

This was very embarrassing. Had he said he loved her, and at first sight, she would have turned him away. She would have distrusted both his sincerity and his motives. But he did not say this. On the contrary, he offered in explicit terms, it would seem, not to say it. She therefore naturally took refuge in generalities.

"But what you ask won't be possible. What would people say? This is a very bad, a scandalous country, I mean. What would Miss De Montague think, or Mr. Bellario?"

"What people will say or think hardly needs to be considered," said Harding steadily, "since in a week I shall have gone to my home in the mines. You won't be troubled with me long—twice more perhaps. Only once if you prefer it. All shall be exactly as you wish it. Is not that fair?"

Miss Tinsel was saved the present necessity for replying to a question or coping with a situation both of which she found extremely perplexing, since at this juncture the door opened and admitted the "Queen of the Fairy Bower" and the "Blood Red Demon," who had apparently been out for a morning walk. To Harding's surprise, the "Queen" was a motherly looking woman of forty-five and the "Demon" a weak eyed young man, with a pasty white face, and some fifteen years younger. Both were much over dressed, and both stared vigorously at Harding—the "Queen" with an air intended to represent fashionable raillery, the "Demon" with haughty surprise. But the visitor avoided explanations that might have been embarrassing by bowing low to the company and passing from the room.

Why People Wonder

How it is W. J. Morrow sells his teas and all other lines so cheap,—well, he buys in large quantities owing to his extensive trade, turns over his goods quickly, as he is not so anxious for large profits as other houses are, and does the largest trade of any grocery house in town. Something new—our 5 lb. Japan for $1.00. See our advertisement in another column.

Retiring from Business.

Owing to ill health we regret to say that Mr John Braden is compelled to retire from the grocery business. By reference to his advertisement, the public will learn that he is selling his entire stock of the very freshest groceries, canned goods and provisions at cost. His sale will only last for two weeks. Everything must go as he is giving up immediate possession of his premises. d

Introducing Steam.

The Campbellford Herald's era of prosperity has resulted in the introduction of steam into the premises and hereafter its presses will be run by steam. The boiler was made by the Wm. Hamilton Manufacturing Company of Peterborough, who, as the Herald states, are noted for the excellence of their productions in iron work. May the Herald's step in advance be but the first of a series of onward strides that will carry it forward to the desired goal.

Sons of Temperance.

Last night a division of the Sons of Temperance was established by Mr. Carswell, district organizer. All the officers were not installed; the remainder will be selected at the next meeting on Thursday night of next week. Following are the officers at present:—

J. Sanders	Past Worthy Patriarch
W. J. Mason	Worthy Patriarch
Geo. Powell	Associate W.P.
O. C. Rowse	Reading Scribe
Captain Piper	Assistant Scribe
M. Cummins	Financial Scribe
Robert Weir	Treasurer
A. Russell	Conductor

The Ottawa Deputation.

The deputation of the town council appointed at the last meeting to visit Ottawa and interview the Government in the interests of a new drill shed and armory, the dredging of Little Lake and the filling in of Spalding's Bay, left on the 11:20 C.P.R. train to-day to join Mayor Stevenson at the capital. The deputation included Messrs. Thos. Cahill, R. S. Davidson, H. C. Winch, R. H. D. Hall, A. Hall, A. Dawson, J. D. Saptle, A. Rutherford, Wm. Langford, J. J. Hartley, C. McGill, Treasurer, J. E. Belcher, town engineer. Messrs. Keadry and Kelly may go down to-night.

Railway Accident.

A farmer from the vicinity of Hiawatha by the name of Hetterick, was on his way home last night about nine o'clock, and being intoxicated to such an extent that he was unable to help himself, ran a very narrow escape of losing his life. It appears that he must have stepped the team just as they crossed the railway crossing on Mark street, Ashburnham, nearly opposite the residence of Mr. H. Bennett, the sleigh not having cleared the track. A west bound C.P.R. freight going at the rate of twenty-five miles an hour, down grade, struck the sleigh, throwing the box off and badly smashing the end of the sleigh, landing its occupant about twenty feet distant in about four feet of snow. The team escaped uninjured and started on the run for home but had gone only a short distance when they were stopped by Mr. Downer who turned them and came back where he found Hetterick unable to extricate himself. By calling Mr. Bennet, who was unaware of what had taken place, to his assistance, they managed to lead him on the sleigh, Mr. Downer accompanying him to Mr. N. Dawson's with whom he said he was acquainted. Hetterick seemed not to be injured externally in anyway. But he has reason to thank his stars for not being a corpse.

Prof. Dorenwend, of Toronto, Coming.

We take pleasure in announcing the visit of Prof. Dorenwend, of the Paris Hair Works, Toronto, with his magnificent assortment of styles in Ladies' Bangs, Frontpieces (plain and wavy), Switches, Half Wigs, Full Wigs, Gents' Wigs, Toupees, etc. The Prof. is noted as the manufacturer of the best and most natural looking hair goods in America. Wherever he has visited the press is unanimous in praising the Prof. as an artist and an energetic business man. This together with the fact that he has the largest and most magnificent establishment of the kind on the continent, will recommend him and his goods to the public, and we have no hesitation in saying that our readers and their friends cannot do better than invest in some of the Professor's goods as satisfaction is sure. He will have his show rooms at Phelan's hotel on Friday and Saturday, March 1st and 2nd. See his advertisement in another column. dw

The Evangelistic Meetings.

Messrs. Crossley and Hunter will arrive in Peterborough per C.P.R. at 7.50 Saturday evening next. The latter will meet the committee of management at 8.30 in the Y.M.C.A. rooms; the former will meet the mason choir at the same hour at the George street church. The following is the committee of management:—President, Rev. M. L. Pearson; Secretaries, Messrs. H. S. Griffin and J. D. Collins; Treasurer, Messrs. A. L. Davis and D. B. Gardner. A meeting for Christian workers only will be held in the Charlotte street church Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock. About twenty people are coming from Belleville to attend the Crossley-Hunter meetings next week, including Mayor Diamond, Wm. Johnston, Inspector of Weights and Measures and Rev. Jno. Learoyd.

Port Hope Hospitality.

The Masonic fraternity of Port Hope entertained their friends at a conversazione in the opera house Wednesday evening. They did it well, too. The pretty little hall was tastily decorated and everything passed off swimmingly. There were probably four hundred people present, including Port Hope's fairest and best and a number from neighboring towns. Peterborough was well represented, among the visitors from the north being Messrs. J. G. Macklin, McCreary, Geary, Forbes and Paterson, and Misses White, Gray and Melville. A pleasing programme of unusual merit was rendered, comprising selections by the Accidentals orchestra, which, by the way, is a splendid amateur organization; vocal solos by Miss Waite, of Belleville; cornet performances by Mr. Clarke, leader of the "late lamented," Citizens Band, Toronto; and highly amusing songs and recitations by Port Hope's inimitable comique, Mr. T. O. Monaghan. After the concert the hall was cleared for dancing, and the devotees at the shrine of Terpsichore enjoyed several hours indulgence in "the mazy" to the inspiriting music of the Accidentals. Supper a la picnic was served in the dining hall attached. The Masons of Port Hope are right royal entertainers, and that this last evidence of their hospitality was appreciated by their guests was amply proven by the showers of compliments and gratitude expressed on every side.

More Good Advice.

Young men, we want to impress upon you the importance and force of a few remarks addressed to you a few days ago in reference to preparing for your approaching marriage, for if you are not going to marry at once, in time you began to think about it. The crows-feet are on the home stretch, and an occasional gray hair is sneaking in around your temples. To be fully ready for marriage you must have a house and have it furnished and make a "minute" of this fact, that the best place in the Midland district to get furniture in at the shop of D. Belleghem, the Furniture King. If you are too modest to come and select the furniture yourself, get your mother or sister and your "intended" to go to Belleghem's. By so doing you will insure one the conditions of a happy home, a well furnished house, in which there will be no ricketty furniture to destroy the temper of husband or wife and thus provoke family jars For all of Belleghem's furniture is of the best quality, not only finely finished, but strongly built of the best kiln-seasoned lumber. Another thing, you have an immense stock of varied furniture—the largest in the Midland district—to select from, and you have every chance of being pleased both in price and quality. Remember, everybody, that at Belleghem's you have the best assortment of furniture in the county to select from, that prices are right and satisfaction in all respects is guaranteed. Remember also the place—the furniture shop furthest west on Hunter street.

Old Number Forty-Five.

Some Interesting Reminiscences of a long Extinct Temperance Society.

The organization of a Peterborough Division of the Sons of Temperance by Mr. Carswell Wednesday night, calls up memories of a long-dead and nearly forgotten organization that formerly existed here. Division 45 of the Sons of Temperance was instituted in Peterborough in 1850 or '52. The charter was received in '49, and among the charter members were the late Hon. Thos. White, then a boy of 18, Thos. Benson, who was killed in the Desjardins canal accident, Robinson Rutherford, Jos. Ford, Anson Sperry and others, long ago dead or removed from town. No. 45 flourished for a number of years, but became extinct about 25 years ago. The members of the new Division purpose applying for the old number if it has not since been taken up.

The Sons of Temperance was an educational institution. Its members were drilled in debate and parliamentary rules, and many a young Peterborough man received there the rudiments of a training that was afterwards the means of elevating him to a high position in life. The Division held its meetings in an old roughcast building which still remains standing on the lane that runs from Brock to Murray street, about midway between the two streets. It was in this place that Thos. White delivered the first address of his life, and so strict were the rules of the order that he had to commit it to memory. Among those who heard it was Rev. John Gilmour, Baptist minister. The latter undertook to criticise Mr. White's maiden effort, and accomplished his task so effectually that the young speaker was rhetorically flayed alive. Nothing daunted, the young man's spirit of pluck rose above the discouragement and by perseverance he became, as is well known, one of the best speakers in the land. Years afterwards in addressing a Peterborough audience, he said he considered all that he had accomplished in the past and all that he hoped to in the future, was directly due to the training he received as a member of Division No. 45, Sons of Temperance.

Foresters' Anniversary.

A Grand Success—A Musical Programme—Crowded Rooms.

The Forester's of Court Peterborough celebrated the tenth anniversary of their organization in Peterborough last night by a reception and entertainment at their beautiful rooms. The hall was handsomely decorated. In addition to the elegant permanent ornamentation of the room there was a profusion of blooming flowers disposed here and there and flags and bunting were liberally bestowed. At an early hour the rooms were crowded and the guests of the Forester's first addressed themselves to a discussion of the splendid repast, supplied through the committee, by Messrs. Long and Hooper both members of the court. After the tables had been removed the gathering became seated to listen to the musical and literary entertainment provided. Mr. Alex. Rutherford Ashburnham, Chief Ranger occupied the chair and introduced the several numbers as follows:

Selection.....Orchestra
Vocal duet.....The Misses Rickey
Violin solo.....Louise Yokomo
Recitation (by request)—"The Captive".....Miss (Saunders
Leguerdemain.....Mr. H. M. Roy
Selection.....Orchestra
Song.....Miss Hooper
Instrumental solo (harmonica) encored.....Mr. W. Burdock
Vocal solo.....Miss Rickey
Recitation.....Mr. A. Tebb

GOD SAVE THE QUEEN.

The entertainment committee were disappointed by some who had promised to contribute to the programme having been unable to attend, but Mr. Roy, with his characteristic good nature and cleverness, filled several gaps with his deft sleight of hand performances. During the course of the programme Rev. Mr. Shorey arrived and delivered a brief, pithy address, in which he expressed his pleasure at the obvious success of the entertainment and gave some exceedingly wholesome advice. The entire entertainment was of a most successful character, and reflected great credit upon the enterprise of the several committees, and was a reflex of the prosperity of this flourishing court of one of the most flourishing beneficiary orders in the country.

After the departure of the general audience a large number of the younger persons (of both sexes) remained and dancing was indulged in to the excellent music of Prof. Doucet's orchestra, till the early hours of the morning. Altogether the occasion of the celebration of the tenth anniversary of Court Peterborough will be remembered as one of the most pleasant, profitable and successful.

Bon Voyage to a Bachelor.

A Supper and a "Send-Off" to Mr. M. J. Tierney—Address and Presentation on the Eve of his Marriage.

Last night Mr. M. J. Tierney, of the grocery firm of Elliott & Tierney, was handsomely entertained at a complimentary supper at the Commercial Hotel, by a large circle of friends who wished to signalize the occasion of Mr. Tierney's marriage, which takes place on Monday in Rochester.

Mr. J. P. Dunn, C.P.R. station agent, occupied the chair, and Dr. Brennan the vice-chair. On the right of the chairman was the guest of the evening, and Mr. J. J. Sheehy, who, after the gastronomic part of the programme had been disposed of read to Mr. Tierney the following ADDRESS.

MR. M. J. TIERNEY:

DEAR FRIEND,—We, as representing your numerous friends in Peterborough, learning, with pleasure, that you are on the eve of taking the most momentous and, we confidently trust and believe, the wisest step of your life, by uniting yourself in marriage to a most estimable lady, desire to seize the occasion to give expression, so far as words avail, to our felicitations and cordial good wishes for your future happiness.

While we give you our heartiest congratulations, we have, from a selfish point of view, reason for regret. The new relations you are assuming will, necessarily, give a more domestic direction to your social activities, and will thus deprive us of those delightful bachelor associations with you, which we have enjoyed for so many years, and in which your genial, hearty, whole-souled character has earned for you, in its widest sense, a valid claim to the title of a "jolly good fellow." Whether in the field of manly sport, the social gathering or the musical circle, or in the bustling arena of business enterprise, your good qualities of muscle and mind, of head and heart, have made you respected, admired and appreciated in all of these relations You have been a good citizen, a faithful friend, a warm-hearted associate, a cheerful companion, and no doubt you will make a good husband, in every way worthy of the lady whom you have selected as the best amongst sixty millions of people. And now, in earnest of all our assurances of regard and goodwill, please accept this souvenir, to be a perpetual reminder, in what we are sure will be a happy home, of the abiding friendship and esteem of the friends you now see around you, and also of the many other friends of yours we represent.

Hoping that you may in the future sustain your reputation by being a leading member of the home "Harmony Club," and that prosperity and happiness may attend you on the new journey you are entering upon, we bid you God speed.

The following names were signed to the address:—E. Brown, H. Lebrun, R. H. Fortye, J. P. Dunn, J. E. McIntyre, T. Rush, M. McFadden, F. J. Daly, M. J. Dunn, B. Stenson, T. Fortye, C. S. Stapleton, F. Polvin, O. Goulet, W. H. Robertson, J. W. Fairweather, J. Hackett, G. W. Hattoe, B. Morrow, J. J. Sheehy, A. Mercer, E. C. Crevier, F. H. Brennan, M.D., J. E. Stratton, M.P.P., J. A. Ellis, C. H. Clementi, R. W. McKee, P. Corkery, H. C. Winch, P. J. Quinn, M. Connors, T. E. Boddy, E. Welch, F. Stenson, T. Kelly, P. D. Doran, J. E. Dolan, C. S. Shaw, R. W. Grubbe.

Mr. Tierney who was visibly affected by the sentiments expressed in the address gave a very neat and happy reply, disclaiming his merit of the complimentary references, expressed and thanking his friends cordially for their hearty address and the accompanying substantial gift, which consisted of a superb China Tea set and a Raymond Sewing Machine. The address was taken as the toast of Mr. Tierney's health, and complimentary addresses were given by most of the gentlemen present all testifying to the high esteem in which Mr. Tierney was held and wishing him every success and happiness.

After the toast of "The Queen" had been heartily honoured a general toast list with speeches followed and the hours were pleasantly and profitably, put in till about 12 o'clock.

Mr. Tierney is a young gentleman well known and well respected in the town. As an associate, his genial and hearty character won for him hosts of friends. In sports, especially lacrosse, he took both a sentimental and participating interest, having been one of the best members of the old twelve of the Peterborough Club in their hey-day, when they were masters of the field. As a musician, he was a leading member of the Harmony Club, and hardly a church or social organization in town but has enjoyed the benefit of his musical services. As a business man, he has entered upon a successful career, and in every relation of life he has made friends, whose good wishes will follow him upon his matrimonial journey. Mr. Tierney took the 5 o'clock express this morning for Rochester, where on Monday he will be united in marriage with Miss Stasia Carrol, a native of this county, but for some time a resident of Rochester.

Launched Out into Business.

Mr. John Fanning, formerly in Mr. Kelly's store has opened out in the dry goods business in Port Hope. Mr. Fanning, though only established last Friday, is already making his presence felt. He is advertising heavily, and intends pushing to the front. His many Peterborough friends will wish him every success in business.

Beecham's pills act like magic on a weak stomach

Lines

Respectfully addressed to JOHN BENHAM, of Toronto, formerly of Peterborough, for his kind visits to me during my confinement while undergoing an operation on my eye in Toronto.

Sir, over thirty years have passed since we were first acquainted,
Since then no jar occurred to break our friendship there commented;
Our frequent intercourse was sweet, your ways obliging, kind,
With all your business cares I found strict honesty combined.
Friendship at all times should be prized if true, unbiased, sincere,
It often soothes the sorrowing heart and checks the rising tear.
It lends a sympathising hand when cruel misfortunes rise,
Though best of some how sweet the balm its friendly aid supplies;
It cheers the prisoner in his cell, the beggar by the way,
Stops a shivering on a winter's night, helps the street waifs by day.
When frail humanity has crushed hence 'neath oppression's load,
Kind acts of friendship free bestowed, in love, STANDS NEXT TO GOD.
In years of health your friendship gave joys unto me untold,
But in afflic tion it is increased—yes, sir, one hundred fold.
Shut up in darkness, suffering pain, no loving friend was near,
In friendly, pitying love you called my solitude to cheer.
Your hand felt a more kindly grasp than in the days of yore;
Your voice seemed toned with softer sounds than I had heard before.
The fullness of a feeling heart the words you did express
Gave evidence you felt for me while lying in distress.
On Sabbath morn the church bell chimes upon my ears did fall,
They added grief for I could not respond unto their call.
The Heaven-like strain, the word of God the worshipers might cheer.
While I a prisoner was sent my no prayer nor praise could hear.
My friend the good you had received you wished for me the same.
Soon with your books of Heavenly stores into my room you came;
And well you knew the subject which would best to me impart,
With sentiments to suit my case the text a clouded heart.
Your clear, expressive, silvery voice, with edifying power—
Why, sir, in church I seldom spent such a delightful hour.
Each word and sentence full expressed, with pathos touching, grand.
I thought some holy priest of old had touched you with his wand.
That holy day, instead of gloom, was, by your presence, blessed;
You said good-bye just as the sun was setting in the west;
My thoughts, my prayers that night went up for God's reward to thee—
A loving, kind Samaritan that cheered and solaced me.
Long may such kindness dwell in you, so strong within your breast,
Your sympathy for fellowmen, while suffering or distressed;
A friend in need you proved to me, my love it shall renew,
With grateful heart I tender thanks to Mr. Cox and you.

WILLIAM TELFORD,
Smith.

The Ottawa Rinks Away—A Victory and a Defeat.

The brave champions of Peterborough's claim to the Governor-General's silver tankard left for Ottawa at noon to-day to play Lindsay at the Capital to-morrow. The Peterborough rinks are strong ones, and on neutral ice should have no difficulty in winning the trophy again this year. Let us hope they will, anyway. The Peterborough curlers are:

R. M. Donnistoun,	A. Hall,
T. E. Bradburn,	J. B. Pentland,
C. McGill,	R. S. Davidson,
T. Rutherford, skip.	W. G. Ferguson, skip.

The Lindsay skips will be Messrs. Hughes and McLennan.

AT LINDSAY.

Skips Ray and Attrill took rinks to Lindsay yesterday, and both won and lost. In the morning they played skips Wallace and Hughes, losing by 10 shots, but in the afternoon they redeemed themselves by defeating skips McLennan and Favelle by 8 shots. Mr. Rutherford skipped for Mr. Ray after dinner. The Peterborough rinks were:

Rink No. 1.	Rink No. 2
J. Dixon	A. Stevenson
Geo. Dunsford	G. Fitzgerald
T. Rutherford	J. B. Pentland
S. Ray skip	T. P. Attrill, skip

DRAW SHOTS.

DINNER
is always a subject for niche with a housekeeper and she often wishes that the law settled the question of "What shall we have for dinner," and prescribed certain dishes for certain days. Such a law would certainly save a great deal of worry and questioning to many tired women. But it is not such a difficult problem to solve after all especially in Peterborough, where we have such a good market, besides at China Hall you can secure full Dinner Sets that will grace any table for so little money that anyone can afford the outlay.

TURNBULL'S

The Flood of the Season's French and English Printed Calicoes is rolling in—white capped and aglow phosphorescent, color play. How the Priscellas of the past would joy to see them? Pretty as you have seen them, they were never so handsome before. Persian designs, leaves, buds, flowers, polka, dots, plain stripes, scrabbles and scrawls, angles and tangles. More than 300 different styles, small figures, large figures, and mourning designs, better printing was never done 'exquisite.' If you don't want to buy, don't pass the window or come in. Prices range from 6 to 15 cents.

The trouble with low grade Marseilles Bed Spreads has been loose threads at the back—lace, all right, but you didn't like the fiddle-string arrangement at the back, needn't. Here are $2.50 Marseilles Bed Spreads, full size and handsome patterns, with backs firm and well finished. Look at this honey-comb quilt for $1, which needs no apology for either size or weight.

Flannelettes—what are they? Are they all-wool? No they are mostly cotton, finished to imitate a Flannel, and especially adapted for childrens' dresses and ladies' wrappers. They consist of Cream Grounds, with pink, blue and cardinal Stripes, blue and white, pink and cream, pink and blue, and pink, cream and grey, some 18 patterns in all—the best quality being only 12½ cents a yard.

Opened out this week, a line of Linen Tablings, the maker of which is noted the world over. They are specially suited for every day wear—the warp is well twisted and they wash and iron well.

Before you hear from us again, I will have visited the wholesale markets where I will be on the look-out for Bargains for my Customers.

Thirty Years Paying Rent in Peterborough.

I frequently hear statements akin to above, followed by remarks of deep regret for having missed many golden opportunities of buying whole lots at a price they would now have to pay for one foot of the same land. Buying property in Peterborough is the safest kind of a safe and profitable investment. I have at present cheap homes, medium class homes and a few exceedingly fine Residences and grounds some of which were built for home comforts, regardless of cost. Uncontrollable circumstances have now caused those to be offered for immediate sale much under value. I commence at $475, for good house and large lot. I can suit any reasonable buyer. I have also good value in Market Gardens and Farms.

THE ST. GEORGE CALAMITY

MRS. HIGGINS' NAME ADDED TO THE DEATH ROLL.

Brakesman Angelo Still Alive but Very Low—The other Wounded Doing Well—Scenes of Sorrow and Suffering.

ST. GEORGE, Feb. 28.—The little town of St. George, on its hill-slope facing the south, has been in a fever of excitement last night and to-day. From 7 o'clock till midnight the whole town almost worked hand and unceasingly in extricating the dead and wounded from the wrecked railway train. The scenes were something to wring sympathetic anguish from the heart. The shrieks of women and the groans and shouts of men in agony went up from the wreckage with which they were covered. One by one, bleeding and mangled, the unfortunate people who still lived were rescued and the dead were carried away and laid in the station house. The Cummings House, the largest hotel in town, was given over for the service of the wounded people. Private residences took those that could not get a place at the hotel. All night long till daybreak this morning the excitement was intense, and to-day it was unabated.

Looking southward down the slope the seven tall columns of stone on which the bridge rests can be seen a quarter of a mile distant. The unspanned space in the bridge, through which the ill-fated coach dropped, can also be seen, and there are the wrecking trains at both ends of the bridge with the engines puffing and blowing and crowds of people sixty feet below gazing upward at the wreck. People came from all over the district to see it. The road for a quarter of a mile on each side of the bridge is lined with vehicles, and busses ran constantly from Harrisburg and St. George.

There is no doubt as to the cause of the disaster. The train was whirling along eastward and was within less than a hundred yards from the bridge when the tire of the back driving wheel on the right side threw out a segment about eleven inches long. The tire ran off, leaped over the coupling rods and sped away down the embankment, through a fence and out into an open field, where it now lies.

The wheel, stripped of its tire, fell about two inches, and the great strain pulled the pins from the coupling rods. On the bridge flew the train, the back part of the engine, tender and smoker jumping from side to side cutting great gashes in the wooden ties. The ties were stripped from the girders, the iron needle beams brushed away like a cob-web and the dining car, having no support, fell through between the girders. The engine, tender and smoker crossed the bridge in safety owing to the grip of the engine truck, which never left the rails. The first passenger coach jumped the track and fell somersaulting through the air, and the Pullman, next to it, remained standing on the verge of the gap, obeying equally the retrograde force of the dining car and the onward force of the rest of the train. Its couplings at each end were smashed and it remained standing on the track.

The latest death was that of Mrs. Higgins, which occurred at 6.30 o'clock this morning. The following is the list of the dead:

A. W. Francis, Mayor of Woodstock and editor of The Woodstock Times.
Thos. McLean, stove and tinware dealer, Detroit.
Captain (Miss) Moore, Salvation Army, Brantford.
Dr. Swan, Brantford, a well-known physician through Ontario.
E. R. Baines, store department Grand Trunk Railway, London.
W. M. Wemp, immigration agent, London.
Geo. Leggat, Mitchell.
John Peers, councillor Woodstock.
Chas. Crump, colored waiter in dining car, Windsor.
Mrs. C. W. Higgins, Toronto.

The following is a list of the wounded and the nature of their injuries:

D. W. Karn, organ manufacturer, Woodstock—scalded on the right hip, flesh wounds on the head and face and slight body bruises.
Daniel Peacock, Reeve of Woodstock—right ankle injured and large scalp wound.
Hamilton Johnston, cook in dining car—shoulder blade broken and body scalds.
Mrs. Jennings, Paris—leg broken.
May Jennings, a 6-year old daughter of the preceding—skull fractured.
Dr. H. Le Queene, Cleveland, traveler for Scott & Bowe, 132 Fifth-avenue, New York—thigh dislocated and ribs broken.
Jas. Dwyer, Detroit—head and body bruises.
R. W. Knight, Woodstock—flesh wounds on head and injured internally.
Thos. N. Dewdney, temperance lecturer, Detroit—left leg broken and head and body bruises.
David Cooper, waiter in dining car, Suspension Bridge—badly scalded on head and body.
Jonathan Martin, Woodstock—shoulder dislocated and head badly bruised.
Conductor Reville, London—serious cut on the head.
Andrew McLaughlin, Windsor—hurt about head and back.
Wm. Benedict, Saranac, Mich.—wrist hurt and arm scalded, and serious internal hurts.
Miss Issie McLeod, Ingersoll—bad scalp wound, ear split, collar bone broken and spine injured.
Stephen Budden, Dorchester, Ont.—badly cut about the face and skull fractured.
Mrs. Budden, Dorchester, Ont.—shoulder dislocated and skull fractured.
Miss Mary J. Chaffee, Pontiac, Mich.—scalp wound and side bruise.
Geo. Forbes, New York—scalp wound and scalded.
Miss Andrews, Belleville—ear nearly torn off and ankle fractured.
J. R. Marshall, Regina, N.W.T.—back and legs bruised.
Mrs. Marshall, Regina, N.W.T.—severe scalp wound.
John McKinley, Detroit,—scalp wounds and body bruises.
Thos. Hancock, news agent, London—back hurt and head cut.
John H. Wilson, waiter, Chatham—legs bruised and head cut slightly.
Geo. Sargeste, dining car conductor, Niagara Falls—scalded badly about head and arms.
Mrs. Evans, matron of the Children's Home, Hamilton—wrists and arms cut, badly scalded.
Mrs. A. L. Sendall, Detroit—scalp wounds and bruises.

Eight occupants of the ill-starred train escaped unscathed. They were:

T. S. L. Lewis, Chatham, traveler for the Crompton Corset Co.
J. C. Gilroy, traveler for Wyld, Grassett & Darling, Toronto.
Mr. Ley Lisle, traveler for the Ontario Barbed Wire Works, Toronto.
Councillor Potts, Woodstock.
David Peters, commercial traveler, Belleville.
G. C. Eden, town clerk of Woodstock.
Baggageman Plummer.
Engineer William Blackwell.

At 9 o'clock this morning Dr. Ridley and Dr. MacKelcan left Hamilton on behalf of the Grand Trunk Railway for the wreck and were joined at Harrisburg by Dr. Digby of Brantford. They made re-examinations of the patients and during the day Messrs. Karn and Peacock of Woodstock were removed home, and in the evening Mrs. Evans of Hamilton was taken home. All of the dead bodies were sent home by this evening, except those of Charles Crump and Geo. Leggat.

Three railway officials were at the scene of the accident all day: Messrs. Joseph Hobson, chief engineer of the Great Western Division; Samuel Barker, general manager of the Northern and Northwestern Railway; Wm. Pope, of Solicitor Bell's office, Belleville, and Chas. Stiff, superintendent of the Southern Division of the Grand Trunk. Relays of men were put to work and the wreckage was rapidly cleared away and the track put in order. Loads of timber came from Hamilton and Komoka with bridge carpenters to repair the break. Three wooden trestles will be erected to support the broken span. The work has progressed well so far and by to-morrow the line will be open again. Until the repairs are made the trains will run by Paris and Brantford.

HEARD ABOVE THE CRASH.

Some Sad Features of the Accident—Two Wedding Journeys Interrupted.

ST. GEORGE, Ont., Feb. 28.—Mr. Karn sat opposite Dr. Swan of Woodstock, who was killed. They were both in the first-class coach. Mr. Karn says that the coach turned over three times in making the descent.

Dr. Swan only lingered a short time after the wreck. His lungs were Mrs. Higgins, wife of Mr. C. W. Higgins, of the Rossin House billiard room, had been on a visit to friends for some months. For some weeks past she was visiting in Detroit and would have come home several days ago had she not been detained by the kindness of her friends. Mr. Higgins came up to St. George, reaching here about 3 o'clock this morning. He saw his wife and spoke to her and she was not too far sunk in recognize him. Mr. Higgins is completely broken in spirit.

Little May Jennings received a bad fracture of the skull. Dr. Ridley says, however, that she will get over it all right.

Mr. Joe Richardson, the well known railway man, came down from Detroit on Wednesday. He intended coming through but stopped off at London on business. He does not regret it.

Dr. McLaurg of Woodstock took charge of moving Messrs. Karn and Peacock.

Geo. Forbes, the well known sport of Woodstock, is among the wounded. He is doing very well and will soon be about.

Mrs. Sendall of Detroit fell out of the end of the Pullman car, which was left standing on the bridge. She fell to the ground sixty feet below, and strange to say was not badly injured.

George Margette, dining car conductor, has been several times a member of the Wimbledon team. Once while at practice a man stepped in front of the target just as he fired. The bullet passed through the man's left lung and made a bull's-eye on the target. The wound inflicted was not fatal.

Two newly married couples, Mr. and Mrs. Marshall and Mr. and Mrs. Budden, were in the wreck. The former were married in Dorchester on Wednesday and were on their way to St. Catharines, and the latter were married in Chesterfield and were going east on their wedding trip. All four are doing well.

Mrs. Marshall, whose maiden name was Nancy Henderson, had been married but a few hours before the occurrence. Her husband, Mr. J. R. Marshall, had just come down from Regina to marry the young lady. She wrote to a friend in Toronto the early part of this week detailing her wedding tour and the places she intended to visit. She had not got very many miles from her home when all her calculations were rudely upset.

The Grand Trunk officials acted with great promptitude in summoning medical aid. In two hours after the accident these doctors were in attendance: Drs. E. C. Kitchen, E. E. Kitchen, Addison, Paterson, St. George; Vars, Sinclair and Dutton, Paris; Digby and Howard, Brantford; McKay and McLurg, Woodstock; and Ridley, Wilverton, Wallace, White, Shaw, Leslie and Ormstead, Hamilton, 19 in all.

Mr. James Sutherland, M. P., of Woodstock leaves the Capital to-day to attend the funeral of his townsman.

The body of Miss Moore, the Salvation Army captain, which was sent to Brantford, was viewed there by the Salvationists and no one identified her. The body was sent to Ingersoll, where it is said she belongs.

Among those who came up to the scene of the accident from Toronto were Hon. Chas. Drury and Messrs. Bayside, M. L. A. for Glengarry and Caldwell, M. L. A. for North Lanark.

THE DETROIT VICTIMS.

Mr. McLean a Former Resident of Port Hope—Mrs. McKinley's Plight.

DETROIT, Feb. 28.—Among the killed at the St. George railway accident is Thomas G. McLean of Detroit, of the firm of McLean & Beecher, Penetanguishene Furnace agents. He came to Detroit seven years ago from Port Hope, Ont., and was employed as foreman for James F. Gulas. Two years ago he commenced business for himself in connection with Mr. Beecher. Some little while after this Mr. McLean's wife died, leaving three children, who were sent to live with relatives at Port Hope. Mr. McLean was 36 years of age.

John McKinley, whose name appears in the list of injured, lives at 147 Seventh-street, Detroit. He is a piano polisher by trade, but has been out of employment for some time. Work was offered him in Boston, and he left yesterday for that place. Last night his wife received a telegram from St. George, simply stating her husband was hurt. She would go to him if she had means to do so, but her husband took all the money they had except 30 cents, to pay his fare to Boston.

Brakeman Angelo Very Low.

LONDON, Feb. 28.—Brakeman Angelo is still alive but very low.

THE INQUEST.

A Broken Tire on the Drive Wheel of the Locomotive—Dangerous Switches.

ST. GEORGE, Feb. 28.—Coroner Webster empanelled a jury last night with William Snowball as foreman, but owing to Mrs. Higgins' death this morning a second panel was summoned with D. Cope as foreman. There was a large attendance in Mechanics' Hall, where the inquest was held, and intense interest was manifested in the proceedings.

James Stewart, general inspector of the Traffic Department, stated: The train re called No. 54 express, is made up as Windsor and runs to Suspension Bridge. Wm. Blackwell of London had charge of the engine and Henry Angelo was fireman. Dan Revell was the conductor. There are two brakemen, one baggeman, parlor car conductor, dining car conductor, three waiters and three cooks on this train. Examination is made at London and Harrisburg by car inspectors of the car wheels and trucks and also the engine wheels. No interim examination is made except by the engineer himself. The trains passing at Princeton were exactly on time. It is the duty of the conductor and his men to inspect the train at every station and also to keep a lookout when in motion.

Thomas Paquette stated he was employed as brakeman on the train. It leaves Windsor at 1.40 p.m. The driver is not the same that left Windsor. The engine was changed at London, nothing being wrong there. The first notice I had of the accident was the jumping of the cars when we reached the bridge. I was in the smoking car at the time. It did not leave the bed of the track. No one was injured in this car. I knew the brakes were on by the motion of the cars. I cannot tell our speed. It is my duty to see that the brakes are all right. I got off the car at the north side and went down to the passenger coach and helped get the passengers out. The train was all right at Paris, do not think the train was off the track before it reached the bridge. Steam was shut off before reaching the bridge. The brakes were put on after the engine was reversed.

John Plummer, baggageman of Windsor, testified: The first impression I had of the accident was I recollect striking the west end switch. We struck it very hard. I noticed it swayed the car I was in. My impression was that something was wrong. Something struck the car where I stood before we reached the bridge. The air pipe broke beneath the car I was in. When I found we were off the track I applied the air brake from the inside of the car before reaching the bridge. In trying the brake I found it did not work, but hung on to it until we got over the bridge. It was no defect in the brake. Under my own car, just previous to that, there was something wrong. The distance between the west end switch and the station is 200 yards at least. The car dropped down about the station and was dragged along on the ties. The station is about 200 feet from the bridge. We can stop the train inside of 100 feet. It is down grade to St. George. I regard this switch as a very dangerous switch, because coming down grade we strike it heavy. There is a curve there. We did not leave the track there. Have no idea how fast we were going. I suppose our usual time, about 35 or 40 miles an hour.

John B. Rousseaux of Hamilton, G.T.R. detective, stated he was on the train, was sitting in the smoking car. After we passed St. George station, just by the little shanty, I noticed the tire of the "drive" wheel was thrown over the fence at the bottom of the embankment. At the same time I heard a report. I thought it was the uncoupling of the air brake. It might have been 50 or 10 feet from the bridge. I found I could not get out. The smoker and engine went over all right, the smoker drew the ties up. Noticed nothing until I saw the tire go off.

Chas. Stiff, superintendent of the Southern Division, said: I believe the accident was caused by a tire of the driving wheel breaking on the south side, that caused the connecting rods to break, the track to spread, the cars to run off the track, the needle beams of the bridge to be all crowded together, allowing the cars to fall between the girders, and this breaking took place before the train reached the bridge. I have traced the tire from the field in which it now lies to the point where it left the track about 50 yards west of the bridge. I think the tire became loose about 100 yards west of that. There are marks on the tires from the distance I mentioned, about 150 yards west of the bridge. The engine driver would notice the difference of the running at once of the train; that, I think, would be about 150 yards west of the bridge. At the speed he was running it would have taken the driver about 500 yards to stop the train. The time cards show that they would run about 44 or 45 miles an hour. The train has to run about 45 miles all the way through. I don't know how long the engine has been in use. The tires occasionally get broken. I do not know how long the tire was in use. I should say it had not been out of the shop long. We found the missing piece of tire which is now at the station and I cannot see any defect in it. It is apparently a new fracture. The switch I examined to-day, it is close to the station. There is one further up about 600 yards. There is no curve at the station switch. I have no theory of the cause of the break. An engine running over a very rough road might do it. The tire is steel; as far as my knowledge goes it seems to be perfect. I cannot say how far from the bridge the tire was found. I cannot see any possible connection the switches had with the accident.

Joseph Hobson, Chief Engineer of G.W.R. division, stated: My duty is to see that the track, bridges, fence, etc., are kept in good condition. The track is broken at both ends of the switch. Do not consider that a break in the track. I passed over that part of the road last Tuesday. I looked at the switches; they were all right. I never notice any concussion at these switches. I have examined the one nearest the bridge. The train makes a little more noise going over the switch. Am positive the switch near the bridge had nothing to do with the accident.

William Blackwell of London, engineer, said: I was in charge of the train; left London at 4.30, took charge at London; stopped at Ingersoll, Woodstock, Princetown, Paris and Diamond Crossing. I examined engine at London. My duty is to examine engine before leaving London, not the duty of anyone but myself. I did this yesterday afternoon. Was satisfied that she was fit for the journey. This is not my regular train, the regular engineer was off. At Woodstock we took water and oiled there. With the hammer we tried the crank pins and keys to see whether they were sound at London, did not use the hammer after that.

I first noticed that something was wrong about midway between the two switches of the siding. I noticed something give way under where I was standing. I was in the cab. I do not know what it was, I noticed splinters thrown up and the tire was thrown off. I think between the two sidings. I did not do anything. I did not reverse the engine, did not put on the air brakes, could not do so; did not blow whistle, it was impossible to stay in the cab. I shut the engine off as soon as I heard the crash. I saw I could not do anything. I ran to the rear of the engine, the fireman jumped off. I could not stop the train, if I did reverse, in that distance; would have no power to stop the train in a short distance. The trailing wheel, the tire and the left driving wheel were off at the other side of the accident on the bridge. I would apply the air-brakes, reverse the engine and give all the power I could to stop a train if necessary, but could not in this case do anything. Could stop the train in about 200 or 300 yards. I often run over this road. Did not notice any jar or concussion at the curve.

I don't know how long the engine was in service. I started on the road in 1872 on freight and passenger trains, was never permanent passenger engineer. I picked up a piece of the tire midway between the two switches, the large rim and the piece produced makes the tire complete. I did not use the hammer on the wheels at any time on this trip. I examined the repair register and all was clear.

Arthur A. Smith of Toronto, Assistant Mechanical Superintendent, stated he had charge of the engine and tire in the locomotive department under Mr. Wallis. Mr. Walton of London would have charge of this engine. It would be the duty of the engineer to see that it was all right. I saw the piece of tire produced at midnight on Feb. 27. It was not rusted. I consider that the tire is a "fair" average steel tire. Can detect a longitudinal mark down the tire which I can't account for, unless it has been caused by the beating of the tire when it broke on the rail and ties. I can't say whether it was a former defect or not, not in its present state. I could not swear that that was a perfect tire at the time of the accident, the crack might have been there for two weeks. The defect is on the inside of the tire. I did not examine the other part of the tire to see if the tire was cracked, it could not be seen by any possibility at all and persuasion would not reveal that defect under any circumstances, if defect there were. It could not be detected by any means while on the wheels. I should say that the tire would be from six to nine months turned since last turning. I should call that of the first quality of steel. The tires are about from 2½ to 3½ inches thick, the one produced is 1¾ inches thick at the thinnest point. The crack running the length of the tire would not be produced by breaking crosswise. It would be safe to run a tire of 1¾ inches thick of soft steel and an eighth inch thicker of hard steel. The reason the tires are put on so thick is that they can be turned down. Could not say whether the steel produced is hard or soft. The inquest was adjourned till 10.30 Friday morning.

A BIG BILL FOR THE TRUNK.

The Damage and Damages Will Run Many Thousands.

ST. GEORGE, Feb. 28.—Some of the leading local officials of the Grand Trunk were here during the day. Of course they would not give any opinion as to the amount of the damages, but it is the general belief that they will be heavy. The damage to rolling stock consists of the destruction of a dining car, a Pullman, a first-class coach, some injury to a smoker and a bad smashing up to the engine. The damage to the bridge is not very great. The whole structure is all right with the exception of one span and this can be easily repaired.

The damage to rolling stock is heavy, but it will probably not equal the amount to be paid in damages. There are ten people killed, one at London, Angelo, the brakeman, likely to die, and there are twenty-eight wounded.

It is not likely that less than $100,000 will cover the whole bill.

TORONTO TOPICS.

Legislators Busy With the Estimates—Mr. Jeffery Exonerated.

TORONTO, March 1.—The estimates for public institutions were up in the Local House yesterday afternoon and quite a breeze was raised by a comparison which the Provincial Treasurer instituted between the expenditure on public institutions of the United States and those of Ontario, when Opposition members were subjecting the figures to criticism. The House in committee passed Mr. Fraser's bill to amend the Ontario Shops' Regulations Act.

Rev. Dr. Stone, chairman of the Toronto West District Methodist Church, has received the report and findings of the Committee of Investigation in the case of Rev. T. W. Jeffery. Most of the charges are reported not to have been sustained, but the committee consider that some remarks made by Mr. Jeffery from the pulpit were highly improper. The charges of taking liquor were not sustained. The committee recommend that the chairman of the district seriously admonish Mr. Jeffery for the remarks referred to. In accordance with the resolution of the official meeting of the Queen-street Methodist Church adopted on Friday night, Mr. Jeffery will be engaged on a supply for that church for the balance of this conference year.

Attempted Suicide in Perth.

STRATFORD, Feb. 28.—Mr. Greul of Wartbery, while laboring under a temporary fit of insanity, cut his throat from ear to ear last night. Slight hopes are entertained of his recovery.

The Ives and Stayner Indictments.

NEW YORK, Feb. 28.—Six new indictments have been ordered against Ives and Stayner. There are new ten, Partner Doremus is said to be implicated.

Increase in the U. S. Debt.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—It is estimated at the Treasury that the public debt, less cash in the Treasury, has increased $7,000,000 since Feb. 1.

Reducing the Output of Coal.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 22.—The anthracite coal companies have determined to reduce their output by shutting down two days each week. The Reading and other coal companies will follow suit.

WEST HURON Liberals on Wednesday passed a vote of confidence in the Liberal leader, and congratulated Mr. M. C. Cameron, Q.C., on his recovery from his recent serious illness, further expressing the hope that he would be spared to carry the Liberal standard in future contests.

THE annual report of the Ontario Inspector of Charities contains an interesting table indicating the cost per day per patient of the different hospitals of the province. The daily cost is as follows:

	Cents.
Hamilton city hospital	62.85
Toronto general hospital	51.76
Kingston general hospital	64 66
Belleville hospital	71.96
Brantford, Stratford hospital	66.25
Matawa general hospital	72.51
Pembroke general hospital	65.57
Guelph, St. Joseph's hospital	48.92
Kingston, Hotel Dieu hospital	49.96
Ottawa Roman Catholic hospital	60.49
Ottawa Protestant general hospital	59 11
London general hospital	59.51
St. Catherines general hospital	49.26
Guelph general hospital	63.04

In the Roman Catholic institutions the real one services of nuns obviate the expense for employees and reduce cost of maintenance one quarter at least.

TORONTO is a great city and so modest in setting forth the various items that constitute its greatness. No very decided boast is made in the matter of its city debt, which is something big enough to be worth "blowing about"—more important than many others which originate so much brag. Read this summary of the debt of the city of Toronto:

General debt, 1889	$ 5,410 966
Hypothecated debentures	1,005,038
Authorized for Court House and City Hall	750,000
Sewers	175 000
Schools	5,000
Subway	100,000
Prop sed for water and sewage	1,955,000
Extras for Court House and City Hall	500 000
	$13,071,034

If the Queen City doesn't begin to go slow in finances, the day may come when the Sheriff of York will become ex-officio Mayor and administer the estate.

"KNOXONIAN," the clever contributor to the Canada Presbyterian, expresses the inconsistency of the persons in Ontario who are now opposing the Jesuit Act, as compared with their action in relation to the Scripture Selections. Knoxonian says:—

"Two years ago there was an immense fuss made because the proof sheet of the Ross Selections were shown to Archbishop Lynch. A large number of Roman Catholic children attend the Public schools, and as the Selections were prepared by Protestant divines representing the different Churches, it was considered nothing more than an act of courtesy to show the Selections to the head of the Catholic Church. The Archbishop merely suggested that the word "which" in the Lord's Prayer should be exchanged for "who," a change made by nearly every minister who uses the prayer in public. But oh, what a fuss was made about this matter! Some of the men who made the fuss are as dumb as oysters over the refusal to disallow the Jesuit Bill. To show the Selections to Archbishop Lynch was an unpardonable sin; to condone the submission of an Act of Parliament to the Pope for approval is right enough!"

MR. WATERS, the ladies man of North Middlesex, deserves better success in his efforts to secure the enfranchisement of women. Session after session, undeterred by opposition or undaunted by temporary failure, he "comes up smiling." He introduced at the first opportunity this session, his bill providing that the power be given to unmarried women and widows to vote at elections for the Legislative Assembly, on the same conditions they are allowed to vote at municipal elections, and fifty-six out of the seventy-eight members were ungallant enough to kill the bill on its second reading in the House on Wednesday night. The obvious rights of women to have a voice in the administration of affairs in which they are directly interested, were ignored. The character of votes shows an evident intention on the part of our legislators to exclude women from politics. The vote was a non-political one. Grit and Tory buried the political hatchet for the moment and voted together for or against the second reading. Mr. Stratton, M. P. P., for West Peterborough voted for the principle of the bill, while Mr. Blezard, M.P.P., for East Peterborough voted against it, and other instances were afforded, in which political partnership as far as the ordinary division lists are concerned, were dissolved. Fourteen Liberals and eight Conservatives voted for the bill. The Liberals who voted for it were Messrs. Allan, Armstrong, Balfour, Caldwell, Dack, Ferguson, Field, Garson, Graham, McAndrew, Mack, Morin, Stratton and Waters. The Conservatives who voted for the bill were Messrs. Cruess, Ingram, Marter, Meacham, Metcalfe, Miller, Ostrom and Rorke. Mr. Waters is not meeting with very encouraging treatment. Last session his measure was defeated by a majority of sixteen, this session the majority is thirty-two. But even this inverse ratio of progress will not discourage him. He will doubtless introduce it again at the next session, and there is no telling what effects female influence may have on the ungallant members of the house during the recess.

Beginning the Defence.

The Mail says a rather novel scene was witnessed Wednesday at Osgoode hall in the trial of the great timber limit case of Scott v. Benedict, when Chief Justice Armour and the late Chief Justice Sir Adam Wilson were called as witnesses and placed in the box to give evidence on behalf of the defence. It is needless to say that they were treated with great consideration by the learned counsel. In this suit the lunacy of Walter A. Scott is the question most vital to the result of the case. In 1872 Chief Justice Armour acted as counsel for Scott in a big railway suit, in which he recovered a verdict of $7,000 for his client. Sir Adam Wilson was the judge who tried the case. Their evidence as to the state of Scott's mind at that time was therefore most important, especially as it related to a time about a year after the plaintiff alleges that Scott was insane.

THE SECOND IN HISTORY.

A TIE ON A DIVISION IN THE DOMINION HOUSE.

Mr. Brown's Anti-Cruelty to Animals Act Escapes the Six Months' Hoist by the Speaker's Casting Vote.

OTTAWA, Feb. 28.—There was a tie vote in the House this afternoon, the second in the history of the Dominion Parliament. Mr. Adam Brown's anti-cruelty to animals bill was the subject matter on which the division took place. There had been two previous votes on the bill, one in its favor and one against, and each time the majority was but one.

Yesterday the Committee of the Whole rose without reporting anything about the bill. This afternoon Mr. Brown moved to "re-committee" the bill, naming next Monday as the day. Col. Tisdale, who champions the opponents of the measure, at once moved that the bill be considered in committee of the whole six months from now. No one seemed to want to talk any more on the bill and the division bells were at once rung.

The vote was taken first on Col. Tisdale's amendment for a six months' hoist and after the Clerk counted and recounted the vote he declared it a tie, 91 to 91. This is a very heavy vote in a House of 215. There were no "pairs," this is another unusual occurrence. The vote was entirely devoid of politics, the parties being split up in all shapes. Nearly all the French members but Mr. Boisvert (Con.) and Mr. Laurier voted against Col. Tisdale. Sir Hector and Sir Adolphe voted for the amendment. The vote at best is merely a complimentary one and when the bill gets into committee again it is altogether likely that it will be slaughtered.

There was great clapping of hands and stamping when the vote was announced. The Speaker voted against the amendment, as he explained, "for the purpose of keeping the bill before the House."

Then the yeas and nays were called on the main motion to refer it to the Committee of the Whole on Monday next, and this was carried by 96 to 92.

The only other tie vote in the House of Commons since Confederation was on May 5, 1870, on the third reading of an interest bill. An amendment had been moved for a three months' hoist and the House divided, 56 to 56. Hon. James Cockburn was Speaker, and he voted for the amendment. At that time the House had 181 members. There are now 215.

The Postmaster-General to-day introduced his amendments to the Postal Act, and the bill was read a first time. The bill makes several important changes and amendments in the postal law, the principal ones being:

All steamboats plying on the inland waters of Canada will be compelled to carry His Majesty's mails, on terms to be stipulated by the Postmaster-General, or so much per pound or ton. Subsidies will be abolished to inland steamboats, and they will be dealt with similarly to railways which carry mails. The stealing of decoy letters will be treated as a felony, just the same as stealing an ordinary letter.

Stringent regulations are to be adopted concerning the transmission of obscene and immoral literature and photographs through the mails.

The rate for carrying registered letters is to be increased, but the amount of the increase is not stated. The Postmaster-General said it was intended to make the registration fee equal to the American and English rate, which is 10 cents besides the usual stamp. He also said that greater security was to be given to the transmission of valuable letters, and the desire was to induce the public to take the fullest advantage of this additional security. Incidentally this clause was severely criticised by the Opposition.

The weight of letters to be carried for 3 cents is increased from ½ ounce to 1 ounce.

The most radical change made is the increase of drop letters from 1 cent to 2 cents. Mr. Haggart said this also applied to post offices where there was no free delivery. Letters posted in Toronto for delivery in that city will pay 2c. instead of 1c. This clause will meet with a lively opposition on both sides it is expected.

No other papers or journals but dailies or weeklies will be transmitted free to subscribers. All other periodicals, semi-monthlies, monthlies, etc., will pay 2c. per pound.

The Postmaster-General is empowered to make arrangements with foreign countries as to a parcel post. A better delivery is to be given as to dead letters. Insufficiently stamped letters will be forwarded to their destination and a double penalty will be imposed on their delivery. For instance, a letter which only has a 2 cent stamp will pay 6 cents at the office of delivery. Better regulations are made of offices where a customs branch is attached.

No mention is made of a reduced postage on ordinary letters to 2 cents, but it is believed that will be the next reform.

The amendments proposed above were finally adopted at a meeting of Council to-day. The bill will no doubt encounter a heavy opposition on its second reading.

The Pacific Defences.

OTTAWA, Feb. 28.—In the Senate this afternoon Mr. Macdonald of British Columbia asked the Government for information concerning the defences of the province, and whether the Imperial or Dominion Governments intended to commence the erection of batteries at Esquimalt. Senator Macdonald said he hoped he would not be considered an alarmist in asking the question, but in view of current events in Europe it was well to consider these matters. The necessities for some means of defence on our Pacific coasts had been fully acknowledged by both the Imperial and Dominion Governments.

Mr. Abbott, the Government Leader, said that a large number of Imperial dispatches and orders-in-council in relation to these defences had been received by the Militia Department and the correspondence was still proceeding. These despatches were in the main of a confidential nature. It had not yet been decided definitely whether the erection of batteries near Esquimalt will be proceeded with this year. Negotiations between the Imperial and Dominion Governments respecting the preparation of armaments were also of a confidential nature, but they were proceeding satisfactorily.

Mr. McInnes of British Columbia drew attention to other points on the Pacific Coast that should not be overlooked if fortifications were to be established. He mentioned the terminus of the Canadian Pacific Railway in particular, which, of all places in the Province, ought to be protected. Nanaimo, the great coaling station, should not be overlooked either.

A Peculiar Collision.

BRAMPTON, Feb. 28.—Last night as a G.T.R. freight train was crossing the C.P.R. track a freight train of the latter road crashed into it, cutting its way through, never stopping, not a wheel of the C.P.R. train leaving the track. The engineer and fireman jumped and saved their lives. A brakeman ran forward, setting the brakes and reaching the engine brought the train to a stand after running 2½ miles past the scene of the accident. No one was hurt, but a great deal of damage to property of the G.T.R. was done.

Prof. Dorenwend's Wigs and Toupees for Gentlemen.

Gentlemen who have lost their hair are beginning to realise the great advantages derived from wearing artificial coverings. They supply protection to the scalp wherein nature has failed and also fill up the deficiency in appearance caused by baldness. Hundreds of gentlemen in all parts of America testify to the benefitting results of using Prof. Dorenwend's wigs and toupees. Each article is carefully made, is light and strong and when worn cannot be detected by the closest observer. Prof. Dorenwend will be at Phelan's hotel on Friday and Saturday, March 1st and 2nd, and will show a big stock of them. Go and see them whether you buy one or not; he makes no charges for trying them on. dw

MISS TINSEL.

By HENRY SEDLEY.

CHAPTER III.

THE CUP AND THE LIP.

Her real name was Jane Green. But Jane Green would never do for the play bill; so the manager, exercising his peculiar and traditional prerogative, had re-christened the young lady for the histrionic world, and she appeared as "Aurora Tinsel." A poor, almost friendless girl, she had left the Atlantic states with an aunt who had been the wife of the "property man" in the theatre. Soon after the aunt died, and Jane had gladly accepted the offer of Miss De Montague to live with her, and, by helping that lady with her dresses, to render an equivalent for her society and protection.

Harding was a wise man in his generation, foolish as in some respects he may appear. We offer no explanation of his swift and unreasoning infatuation, because it is just such men who do just such rash and impulsive things. But he was sagacious enough to know that a man who really wants a woman is less likely to get her by being too quick than even by being too slow. Women who are interested always maintain the contrary; but this is because they want to beg their game instantly, whether they mean to throw it away afterward or not. The sex are not apt, however, to err by overrating the value of what they get too easily, and this Harding was philosopher enough to know.

Hence, while he again sought Miss Tinsel twice before his departure, and while his admiration, although respectful, was not concealed, he did not go so far as to ask the girl to become his wife. It appeared that after the run of the current spectacle at the theatre a "great tragedian" was to play an engagement there, and the opportunity was to be taken for the ballet and pantomime troupe to make a tour of the mines. Miss De Montague was to go as a chief attraction, and Miss Tinsel was to go also, and among the places they were to visit was Bullion Flat.

These plans left open a space of three months, during which Harding could think of what he was at, and Miss Tinsel could think of what he meant, and several other persons who were interested could make up their minds what to do.

The first step taken by Harding on his return was highly confirmatory, in the judgment of the Flat, of the opinion expressed by Jack Storm some time before. A contract was made with a builder, and close by the tent on the knoll there speedily arose a cottage of fair proportions, which was evidently meant to supersede the humbler structure which for a year had formed Harding's home. No one doubted his ability prudently to incur such an outlay. He had been saving to parsimony, and he had been prosperous. By why, when a tent had so long sufficed to him, and when he so disliked to part with money, he should go to so needless an expense, was so obscure that to accept Jack Storm's solution impugning Harding's sanity was the easiest and consequently the most popular way of solving the enigma.

The cottage was built notwithstanding, and it was soon the subject of general remark that Harding was becoming more genial and "sociable" than before. He astonished Judge Carboy and Jim Blair by asking them to drink one night at the "Bella Union." He smiled affably and passed the time of day with Jack Storm and his other companions when they met to begin work on the claim for the day. He ordered champagne for the crowd on the evening when a green tree was lashed to the rooftree of his cottage on the knoll; and at last he raised wonder and surprise at their perihelion by actually giving a housewarming.

"I know'd it all along," affirmed Judge Carboy that night to his familiars. They were taking a cocktail at the "Bella Union" by way of preface to "bucking" against Mr. Copperas' bank—"I know'd it all along. He's got a wife out east, and she's a comin' out to jine him in the new house."

"Is that the 'suthin' you talked of that he was ashamed of, judge?" laughed Jim Blair. "It looks like it, for sartin he never said nothin' about her."

"A man may git married," retorted the judge with judicial acumen, "and yit do suthin' else to be ashamed of, mayn't he? There's been murderers and horse thieves stretched afore now who had wives, hain't there? And the last chap the boys hung to a flume up to Redwood, he had three wives, didn't he? And they all come to the funeral." And with this triumphant vindication of his position the judge sternly deposited half a paper of fine cut in his mouth and started for the luxurious apartment of Mr. Copperas.

Next morning Bullion Flat was in a flurry of excitement and pleasurable anticipation. The "Grand Cosmopolitan Burlesque, Ballet, and Spectacle Troupe" had arrived, and were to play in the theatre attached to the "Bella Union." It was not, however, until the succeeding afternoon that Chester Harding called upon Miss Tinsel at the same hotel.

It was a good sign that that young lady ejaculated at the first sight of him; what she first said was another:

"You have not been in a hurry," she pouted, "to come and see me."

"I supposed you would be very busy," said he smiling and devouring her with his eyes. "Were you so anxious to have me come?"

"Anxious!" she repeated; and then added, illogically, "I supposed you would please yourself."

He nodded. "And how do you like Bullion Flat?"

"I think it ever so pretty—only I don't like the earth all torn up, and such ugly holes and scars."

"We have to get at the gold, you know," he explained, "even at such a cost. But the hilltops, anyhow, are spared."

She looked through a window and pointed at the most picturesque eminence in the neighbourhood—the knoll. "That is your house!" she observed shyly.

"Yes. Do you like it?"

"I think it lovely—situation and all."

"And how did you know it was mine?"

"Oh," she said, laughing, "we show folks see a great many people—besides being seen by them—and I've heard a lot about you."

Harding's face darkened a little. "Then you've heard that I'm not much liked?"

"I've heard some say so. But what of that? Miss De Montague says she wouldn't give a fig for a man everybody speaks well of—and she quoted something from a comedy—the 'School for Scandal.'"

"Will you tell me what people say?" he inquired curiously.

"Oh, that you are gloomy, reserved, and live all alone, and that you are—are not extravagant, and that you haven't had a very happy life."

"That last, at least, if true, is a misfortune rather than a fault."

"It's all misfortune, ain't it?" said the girl sagely. "People don't make themselves. There's Mr. Ballario now. He thinks nature really meant him for a great warrior—somebody like Napoleon, you know. And instead of that he's—well, he calls himself a professional gentleman, but the boys call him a tumbler. I suppose it would be much grander to kill people than to jump through 'vampire traps;' but you see he didn't get his choice—any more than I did."

"Then you didn't want to go on the stage?"

"No, indeed. It was just for bread. Aunty was a 'second old woman'—and they got me in for 'utility,' as they call it. There was no one to care for me, and I was glad to earn an honest living; but like it! Never!"

"You say there was no one to care for you?" said Harding gently. "Had you no friends—no parents?"

Jane reddened painfully, and the sad look came quickly into her face. "My mother is dead, you see," she replied, with hesitancy, "and—and—I'd rather not speak of this any more, please."

"Surely," he exclaimed hastily, "I've no right to catechise you. Pray forgive my asking at all. I ought to have been more careful. I know what trouble is, and how to feel for those who suffer."

She looked at him earnestly. "You have suffered yourself, then—they were right when they said yours had not been a happy life?"

"I have no right to whine—but happy—no, far from it."

Jane's lovely face took on its softest and tenderest expression.

"They said that lately you have been happier—gayer than ever before—and that people liked you—oh, ever so much better than they used to. Why is it that people like those the best who seem to need help and sympathy the least?"

Jane leaned from the window as she spoke and toyed with some running vine that clambered to the casement. The grace and beauty of her figure were made conspicuous by the movement, and Harding paused a moment before he replied:

Conroy failed to prove priority and Mr. Lowe intimated that his decision would be in favor of Mr. Gough.

Come Ethereal Mildness.

Spring was in the air yesterday, on the walks and along the shop fronts. A rapid thaw honey combed the ice on the street and everywhere axe and shovel were being used to free the boards of their slippery coating. A few robins and an organ-grinder would have completed the picture.

Mr. Crossley wishes to meet the members of the choirs who are willing to help in the singing during the meetings, on Saturday night in the George street church at 8.30 o'clock. The choir will receive tickets on Saturday evening which will entitle them to a place in the choir, and entrance by the private door.

Prof. Dorenwend, of Toronto, Coming.

We take pleasure in announcing the visit of Prof. Dorenwend, of the Paris Hair Works, Toronto, with his magnificent assortment of styles in Ladies' Bangs, Frontpieces (plain and wavy), Switches, Half Wigs, Full Wigs, Gents' Wigs, Toupees, etc. The Prof. is noted as the manufacturer of the best and most natural looking hair goods in America. Wherever he has visited the press is unanimous in praising the Prof. as an artist and an energetic business man. This together with the fact that he has the largest and most magnificent establishment of the kind on the continent, will recommend him and his goods to the public, and we have no hesitation in saying that our readers and their friends cannot do better than invest in some of the Professor's goods as satisfaction is sure. He will have his show rooms at Phelan's hotel on Friday and Saturday, March 1st and 2nd. See his advertisement in another column. dw

Peterborough Musicians in Belleville

Mr. and Mrs. Dunn have been contributing very effectively to two Belleville concerts. On Tuesday evening, Mrs. Dunn gave a much praised, piano forte solo, and Mr. Dunn sang with fine effect "Anchored" at the Christ church social in the Opera House. The Intelligencer says: The concert was opened by a piano solo by Mrs. Thos. Dunn, of Peterborough, the execution of which was excellent and showed much musical talent. Mr. Thos. Dunn, of Peterborough, readered "Anchored" in a manner which showed him to be a vocalist of no small repute. He was heartily applauded and given an encore, to which he responded." At the St. Michael's musical festival. "Mr. Thos. Dunn gave a vocal solo entitled "Judith," and surpassed all previous effort before a Belleville audience; he has a deep, powerful baritone voice, of which he has complete control. "Mr. and Mrs. Dunn were the only representation of "out-side talent" engaged in this concert.

Removed to Peterborough.

The Lindsay Post says:—A re-organization of the Singer sewing machine agencies has been taking place and one result is that Mr. John Hore, the genial and popular agent at Lindsay, will have to remove to Peterborough, which place will be made the headquarters of the much wider district over which Mr. Hore will now be called upon to preside. Mr. Hore has been a most energetic, popular and faithful agent, and has pushed the Singer business to large proportions, and in the larger field of a general agency he will no doubt make even a better showing. Mr. Hore took charge of the new office Monday, but will not remove his household for some time. As an exemplary and respected citizen Mr. Hore's departure will be greatly regretted, but as it is a promotion his fellow-citizens will join us in congratulations and good wishes. The removal of Mrs. Hore, when it takes place in due course, will also be regretted by a wide circle of friends.

A Business Change.

Reference to another column will inform the reader that a dissolution of partnership has been made between Messrs. R. Fair and Wm. VanEvery, known as the Golden Lion dry goods store. This business has become firmly established and has won a leading place in the public confidence, and very justly so. The business has been managed on good principles, the public wants in every department have been promptly met, and under the exclusive management of Mr. R. Fair, no doubt a fresh impetus will be given to the business of the Golden Lion. Mr. Fair's determination is that the Golden Lion shall not only maintain its lead, but make an advance in every department on the position his has won and held for several years. Mr. Fair has the EXAMINER'S best wishes for success.

Farewell to the Bishop

The Emerald Benevolent Association Present Bishop Dowling with an Address.

Last night there was a full attendance at the meeting of the Peterborough branch of the Emerald Benevolent Association. The President, Mr. A. R. Lee, occupied the chair. His Lordship Bishop Dowling was also present, accompanied by Rev. Father Redihan.

After routine business a farewell address was read to the Bishop on behalf of the Association by Mr. C. J. Leonard. The address expressed the deep regret the members of the Society felt at the departure of Bishop Dowling to another field of labor, referring to his pious zeal and Christian effort in behalf of the church in this diocese. His Lordship replied briefly, but feelingly, saying that though sorry to leave Peterborough he willing obeyed the Holy Father's call, but would always remember with pleasure his connection with the diocese and people, as well as the Association which tendered him the address.

The new Bishop of Peterborough, Rev. Dean O'Connor, will be installed on the first of May, and Bishop Dowling will leave for Hamilton about the third of that month.

An Address of Welcome.

The following is the copy of an address presented to Mr. J. J. Rooney on the occasion of his entering upon his duties at the Peterborough Business College, and his reply:—

To J. J. ROONEY, ESQ.:

DEAR SIR,—We, the teachers and pupils of the Peterborough Business College, desire to welcome you as one of the instructors in this institution, and, although we do so thus formally, our welcome is none the less sincere.

Some of us have had the pleasure of your acquaintance, and we have all heard of your great success and ability as an instructor.

We believe the success of this College, which has been so remarkable under the management of our genial and able principal, Mr. Geo. S. Bean, will be materially increased by your services.

The success of this College means our gain as pupils, and we, therefore, learned with pleasure that you would take charge of an important department, and we have great pleasure in unitedly welcoming you to this College.

Signed on behalf of the teachers and students,

JAS. K. HUNTER,	M. M. MOFFAT,
J. C. ANDERSON,	FANNY SAILSBURY,
DEAN UDEY,	MARY SCOTT.

Peterborough, Feb. 27th, 1889.

REPLY.

In reply Mr. Rooney said that, not expecting any such expression of their kind wishes for him, he could not find words adequately to express his sincere thanks for the very flattering address with which the students were pleased to present him. He trusted the success which had attended his labors in the past would be continued in the sphere of life upon which he had entered.

He was aware the Peterborough Business College had always been a success, and particularly so since the advent of Mr. Bean's management, and he hoped, now that the staff had been increased, even greater success would be achieved.

He said it was often stated that business colleges are practically very little use. To this Mr. Rooney said that if he had had reason to believe this he would never have entered one. But in every other sphere of life special preparation was necessary. The professional man had to undergo a long course of training, the mechanic had to serve a long apprenticeship, and why the business man did not require some special preparation he could not see.

The Business College was the only school which made a specialty of this kind of work, and he believed it was now thought by all enlightened people, that the Business College was a necessity.

The prime aim of the present Principal of the Peterborough Business College has always been to give the student the most thorough training possible and allow no one to leave the college without a thorough mastery of all the work. He said he would heartily second his partner in his efforts. In conclusion he said the Peterborough Business College had a grand work to accomplish and it was the determination of the present proprietors to make it second to no other college in the Dominion.

Violating Racing Rules.

A Claim That Little Jim is Deck Wright —Newspaper Comment.

The Globe to-day says:—The ringer Deck Wright, trotting the ice circuit this winter under the alias of "Little Jim," was protested at Hamilton by the owner of St. Jacob, the second horse in the free-for-all trot at this meeting. The management of the meeting should not have made any protest necessary. They knew that the horse was entered under a false name and was, therefore, ineligible to start, and it was their duty to protect the owners of other horses in the race as well as the public. Some bitter complaints frequently come from Hamilton of the pitiable condition of trotting in the Ambitious City, and there was certainly in this week's meeting much to discourage those who believe trotting meetings should be conducted with some glimmer of an idea of encouraging the sport, and not solely for the purpose of making a few dollars for the managers. The Deck Wright case is one instance. Permitting Lady Bunker, alias "Mabel B" to start on the previous day is another. The mare and her owner were expelled by the American Trotting Association a few months ago for fraudulently performing on an association track. Another violation of the rules was seen when Maud S. and F.O.P. trotted in the free-for-all, in defiance of the regulation which forbids more than one horse from the same owner's or trainer's stable starting in a race of heats. On the previous day F.O.P. appeared as the property of J. E. Smith, of Cannington, but in the free-for-all he was entered by J. Harwood, while Maud S was now owned by J. E. Smith. When a meeting is announced as governed by association rules people have a right to expect that the fundamental rules, at least, will be respected, but if it is intended to have a "go-as-you-please" it is just as well to say so.

How Fortunes are Made

A Former Peterborough Man in Vancouver—Chances for the Speculator.

About three years ago Mr. John J. Irwin left Peterborough for Vancouver, B.C., with a small sum of money in his possession, and is to-day worth over $30,000, as the result of his speculations. In letters to his friends he gives some interesting facts regarding the place. As an instance of how fortunes are made, he tells the following: The morning after he arrived in Vancouver, a stranger in a strange land, he wandered into an auction room where a wrecked vessel was being sold. The vessel had foundered just outside the harbor in a storm a short time previously. It was loaded with lumber, and if it could be raised would bring in a small fortune to the owner. The last bid was $1,330, and Mr. Irwin advanced $5 more. The purchaser a man entirely unknown to him then added another $5 and got the wreck. He succeeded in raising the vessel, and afterwards sold the cargo for $11,000 and the boat for $20,000. Mr. Irwin himself, shortly after his arrival there, bought a lot for $1100 and sold half of it again for $6,000. These are but a couple of instances of the many chances of successful speculation there are in that rising young city In his last letter to a friend in Peterborough he says:—"A few days ago I bought a lot on one of the best streets. To-day I can take $400.00 on my bargain it I want to sell. I am not doing much at present but I intend to build some where in the spring. Real estate is improving nicely in all good locations, and outside property is holding its own. The city assessment this year is a little over six millions, just about double what it was last year. I might say we have had yet, only frost enough two or three times to make an inch of ice. We have not had ½ inch of snow altogether. No more snow on the mountains than was to be seen in June last year. More than half the time clear, calm sunshine, and some times heavy fog on the gulf, so much so, that ships had some trouble in making the harbor. I never saw anything like it since I came to the country. There are a lot of people coming in here now, and great preparations are being made for building next spring. Architects say they have plans ready now for $387,000. there are many other buildings besides for which there are no plans drawn (not needed.) They are going to commence a street railway in about a month and the company are bound by their charter to have the cars running from the foot of Granville street to False Creek Bridge by October next."

Obituary.

The Late Mrs. James Swinton.

On Friday the oldest inhabitant and the oldest settler in Smith, Mrs. James Swinton, passed away to her rest at the ripe age of ninety years. The deceased lady was a native of Scotland and came to Canada, settling in the township of Smith at a very early period in its history, when a cow path formed the only communication with the front, and during her long life in Smith she has seen many great changes. Her husband died about ten years since at the age of 74 years. Mrs. Swinton left behind her eight of the ten children of which she was the mother. All of these except one are married and settled in life.

DINNER

is always a subject for sighs with a housekeeper and she often wishes that the law settled the question of "What shall we have for dinner," and prescribed certain dishes for certain days. Such a law would certainly save a great deal of worry and questioning to many tired women. But it is not such a difficult problem to solve after all especially in Peterborough, where we have such a good market, besides at China Hall you can secure full Dinner Sets that will grace any table for so little money that anyone can afford the outlay.

TURNBULL'S

The Flood of the Season's French and English Printed Calicoes is rolling in—white capped and aglow phosphorescent, color play. How the Priscellas of the past would joy to see them? Pretty as you have seen them, they were never so handsome before. Persian designs, leaves, buds, flowers, polka, dots, plain stripes, scrabbles and scrawls, angles and tangles. More than 300 different styles, small figures, large figures, and mourning designs, better printing was never done 'exquisite.' If you don't want to buy, don't pass the window or come in. Prices range from 6 to 15 cents.

The trouble with low grade Marseilles Bed Spreads has been loose threads at the back—lace, all right, but you didn't like the fiddle-string arrangement at the back, needn't. Here are $2.50 Marseilles Bed Spreads, full size and handsome patterns, with backs firm and well finished. Look at this honey-comb quilt for $1, which needs no apology for either size or weight.

Flannelettes—what are they? Are they all-wool? No they are mostly cotton, finished to imitate a Flannel, and especially adapted for childrens' dresses and ladies' wrappers. They consist of Cream Grounds, with pink, blue and cardinal Stripes, blue and white, pink and cream, pink and blue, and pink, cream and grey, some 18 patterns in all—the best quality being only 12½ cents a yard.

Opened out this week, a line of Linen Tablings, the maker of which is noted the world over. They are specially suited for every day wear—the warp is well twisted and they wash and iron well.

Before you hear from us again, I will have visited the wholesale markets where I will be on the look-out for Bargains for my Customers.

Thirty Years Paying Rent in Peterborough.

I frequently hear statements akin to above, followed by remarks of deep regret for having missed many golden opportunities of buying whole lots at a price they would now have to pay for one foot of the same land. Buying property in Peterborough is the safest kind of a safe and profitable investment. I have at present cheap houses, medium class houses and a few exceedingly fine Residences and grounds some of which were built for home comforts, regardless of cost. Uncontrollable circumstances have now caused those to be offered for immediate sale much under value. I commence at $475, for good house and large lot. I can suit any reasonable buyer. I have also good value in Market Gardens and Farms.

AT CANADA'S CAPITAL.

THE VOTE TAKEN ON MR. LAURIER'S RESOLUTION.

More Deputations—Revenue and Expenditure—Postoffice Savings Bank Statement—The Dominion Debt.

OTTAWA, March 2.—In the House yesterday the discussion was resumed upon Mr. Laurier's resolution in favor of direct negotiations by Canada with the United States, looking to the settlement of the fisheries question on the basis of extended trade relations.

Dr. Macdonald, of Huron, as the mover of the adjournment of the debate on Tuesday last, was the first speaker. He pointed out the three questions involved—the fisheries question, the Reciprocity question and the question of the right of Canada to have a voice in the making her own commercial treaties. While he was endeavoring to show how essential it was to the maintenance of Canada's rights in relation to other countries that Canadians should direct the negotiation of all international arrangements affecting Canada, the Speaker called him to order, the reason given being that he was discussing the question of Canada making her own commercial treaties, which had been decided upon this session by vote of the House. Dr. Macdonald closed with an appeal to the House to act in this matter in a spirit of independence, looking to greater freedom of trade between Canada and the United States.

Mr. Jones of Halifax followed. He asserted that the Government knew no middle course between defiance and servility, and whether their demeanor was characterized by one or the other it was weak always and always led to loss on the part of Canada.

Mr. Kenny followed and asserted that Mr. Jones had dragged into the discussion the dismissal of Collector Ross after that gentleman had requested that his dismissal should not be discussed in the House.

After recess the discussion was continued by Hon. Peter Mitchell. He had no doubt whatever, he said, that Sir Charles Tupper had come out to America bearing the personally-expressed opinions of the British Cabinet on the relations of Canada and the United States in the present case, and that he would reopen negotiations for a new treaty with the United States. In fact, from what the Premier had said, it would seem that negotiations or preliminary official arrangements have already been begun.

Sir John Macdonald denied that he had suggested in any way that negotiations had been begun. All he had said was that he had unofficial information as to the opinions of the incoming Administration.

Mr. Casey and Mr. Davis followed in favor of the resolution, the latter making some remarks which called out Sir John Thompson.

He said the record showed that Canada had followed a conciliatory course upon the termination of these clauses and had come so far as to give free to the United States the fishery privileges about which it was proposed to negotiate. The Opposition said we had put an unwarrantable interpretation on the treaty of 1818, narrow and inhuman. But it was no new interpretation, being precisely the interpretation put upon it by the Provincial Government, backed up by British guns and fleets for seventy years, and Canada's action was in 1885 so far endorsed in Great Britain that United States Minister Phelps was informed by Lord Rosebery that there were no two opinions in England upon the matter.

Concerning the modus vivendi Mr. Davies has charged the Government with wilfully irritating the Government of the United States by suspending or threatening to suspend it, and urged that it should be put into full force again at once, but in considering the termination of the modus vivendi the Government simply acted upon the principle that we should not open the privileges of our coast to them while it was open to us to refuse all privileges to us. The modus vivendi was adopted simply to prevent hostilities arising and imperilling the treaty on its consideration by the United States Senate. If unfortunately any retaliatory measure should be put into force by the United States and non-intercourse should be declared, our Government would be able fearlessly to leave the record to the judgment of the people.

Sir Richard Cartwright followed, rising at 12.15. He declared the policy of the present Government to be characterized by utter carelessness, recklessness, imbecility and folly. The United States had to-day extended an olive branch which had shown that they were not actuat hostility and he called upon the Govern to meet them in a generous spirit.

The House divided at 1 o'clock and Mr. Laurier's resolution was lost on the following division:

CANAL TOLLS.

A Deputation From Various Boards of Trade Ask a Reduction This Season.

OTTAWA, March 1.—A large deputation representing the Boards of Trade of Montreal, Toronto, Kingston, Hamilton, St. Catharines, Port Arthur and Winnipeg had an hour's interview with Sir John Macdonald, Acting Minister of Railways and Canals, this afternoon, with reference to the reduction of canal tolls for the coming season. About forty gentlemen were on the deputation and there were fifteen speeches made. They pointed out that it was highly desirable and necessary that those tolls should be reduced the year, the same as had been done for the past two seasons. This was necessary to keep the traffic of the St. Lawrence route from being diverted to the Erie route. The speeches were emphatic on this point. The deputation also asked for information concerning the completion of the enlargement of the entire canal system of the Dominion. This information would be invaluable to the vessel owners who contemplated the construction of larger craft in keeping with the extended canals.

The Premier said he could give the deputation a reply with reference to the canal tolls in a very few days. As to the completion of these great artificial waterways he pointed out that the cost would be enormous and that there was a great deal of talk about the public debt expanding at a rapid rate. Besides there was a good deal of difference of opinion of engineers as to the depth of running water along the St. Lawrence route. He would be pleased to receive any information which the deputation had in their possession. The Premier also asked that their exact requests be put in writing.

Mr. Geo. A. Chapman and Capt. S. Sylvester were the Toronto men present. J. B. Farrarieve, president of the Hamilton Board of Trade, and C. T. Kyles were present from Hamilton; Captain S. Nesbeu and James Morris from St. Catharines.

The deputation, among whom were several well-known vessel men, asked that Mr. Kirkpatrick's reciprocal wrecking bill be passed. The Premier said that as far as the House of Commons were concerned he believed it would become law, but as for the Senate he was not so sanguine. The sub-committee appointed to consider the measure, after approving several amendments, decided to report it. The amendments so remodel the bill that it is now almost similar to the American Act.

The bustling town of Peterboro was in the Capital in full force to-day. Several of its prominent citizens had interviews with the Ministers of Militia and Public Works. The deputation consisted of Mayor Stevenson, M.P., Col. Rogers, Major Bell, Captains Denison and Langford, Councillors Cahill, Davidson, Rutherford and Hall. The Peterborians were modest in their requests and want government assistance in repairing the drill hall and the building of an armory, dredging Little Lake, which is badly contaminated and injurious to health, and the erection of a new Custom House. The proposed cost of the drill hall repairs and armory is $6000, of which the town will pay one-half. Peterboro is the headquarters of the gallant 57th Battalion. The ministers made a careful note of the deputation's requirements.

FACTS AND FIGURES.

Revenue and Expenditure—Decrease in the Dominion Debt Last Month.

OTTAWA, March 1.—The revenue and expenditure on account of the consolidated fund of Canada on Feb. 28 was:

Customs	$ 1,838,673
Excise	467,436
Postoffice	260,000
Public Works and Railways	167,879
Miscellaneous	88,017
Total Revenue	2,766,913
Revenue to Jan. 31, 1889	21,650,344
Total	$24,416,767
Expenditure	$ 1,881,223
Expenditure to Jan. 31, 1889	20,091,760
Total expenditure	$21,972,986

The expenditure on capital account to Jan. 31, 1889, was:

Public Works and Railways	$ 2,238,940
Dominion lands	61,361
Railway subsidies	644,443
North west rebellion losses	1,256
Total	$ 2,946,076

Add expenditure in February:

Public Works and Railways	$ 189,734
Dominion lands	9,204
Railway subsidies	65,697
North west rebellion losses	273
Total	$ 2,605,984

The total net debt of the Dominion on Feb. 28 was $236,095,114. The decrease during February was $675,445.

The balance in the hands of the Finance Minister on account of the Postoffice Savings Banks on Dec. 31, 1888, was $21,667,395. The deposits during January were $778,599 and the interest paid $5966. The withdrawals during January were $623,145. The balance at the credit of depositors is $22,284,914.

Militia General Orders.

OTTAWA, March 1.—In the militia general orders to be published to-morrow, the following occurs in connection with the permanent corps officers who obtain or have obtained long course certificates subsequent to Feb. 4, 1887, but previous to their appointment to a permanent corps. They will only be allowed to count in their four years' service for additional pay of 50 cents per diem the period of six months for their arm of the service, as now fixed for the long course, instead of twelve months previously allowed.

Notes and Incidents.

OTTAWA, March 1.—The Franchise Farm ers Committee will take no more evidence. The last witness gave evidence to-day.

The Railway Committee met to-day and decided to report the Victoria, Saanich and Westminster Railway Company's act of incorporation.

The Liberals held a caucus this morning and decided to support Mr. Cook's Home Rule resolution.

In the Senate this afternoon Hon. John Macdonald's resolution for better trade relations with South American countries, etc., was postponed till Tuesday.

NEW BRUNSWICK NEWS.

The Harbor Question—Finances of St. John —The Terminus Delegation.

ST. JOHN, N.B., March 1.—The question of placing the harbor in commission was before the city council to-day. As a result of the deliberations a bill will be submitted to the Legislature asking for an act enabling the question to be submitted to a yea and nay vote of the electors. The election will be held on the 21st of May.

The chamberlain's report of St. John finances shows the debt of the city to be $1,142,786, being a decrease of over $3000 from last year. The cash investments of the city, ready to meet debentures when due, are $282,000, being an increase of $12,000 over last year.

The common council appointed Mayor Thorne, Aldermen Peters, Robertson and Smith as their delegation to proceed to Ottawa to present the claims of St. John as a mail steamship terminus.

NOVA SCOTIA NEWS.

Killed by Falling Down Stairs—Bursaries and Fellowships.

HALIFAX, March 1.—The customs receipts at Halifax for February were $120,000; increase $30,000.

George Fraser, ex-mayor of Halifax, fell down stairs in his own house at Truro a few nights ago and died from the effects.

It is rumored that the Provincial Government intend introducing a bill by which they will spend $6200 a year in bursaries and fellowships to students in the County Academy. Eight bursaries of $200 each are to be offered each year for four years, and one fellowship of $1,600 each year for three years. The limit is to be 23 bursaries and three fellowships. The bursary winners are to enter any Nova Scotia college or Mount Allison in New Brunswick, and holders of fellowships may study abroad for three years. Last year the Provincial Government reduced the grants to school teachers by about $8000, so that this aid to higher education, if adopted, will be practically at the expense of the poor teachers.

Over 2000 persons, mostly ladies, attended President Cleveland's final reception in Washington yesterday.

MURDER AT CALGARY.

A Dissolute Woman Killed and Horribly Mutilated—An Inquest Begun.

WINNIPEG, March 1.—A horrible murder was perpetrated at Calgary yesterday. The body of a woman known as Kemske was discovered in a room over the Turf Club saloon last night, where she had been with Wm. Fish during the afternoon.

Fish gave himself up to the police declaring that he knew nothing of the affair but that on suspicion might attach to him he wished to clear himself.

On entering the room the walls were found spattered with blood and the bed smeared.

The body was fearfully mutilated and cut with a blunt instrument.

An inquest was begun to-night.

The town of Blenheim yesterday voted to purchase a steam fire engine.

Debate on Mr. Morley's Amendment to the Address—The Amendment Lost by 70 Majority.

LONDON, March 1.—In the House of Commons to-night Mr. Gladstone resumed the debate on the address in reply to the Queen's speech. He said that there were three main issues raised in the amendment under discussion. The House was called upon entirely to disclaim the present administration of the Irish Government. It was asserted that to the system was due the aversion of the people of Great Britain, and finally the House was asked to adopt measures of conciliation. In conclusion Mr. Gladstone said:

"To continue the state of things under which so many representatives of this House are placed under a ban of proscription is impossible. You may deprive of its grace and freedom the act you are asked to do, but avert it you cannot. [Prolonged cheers.] To prevent the consummation of it is utterly beyond your power. It seems to approach at an accelerated rate but, come slower or quicker, it is surely coming; and many of you who have opposed it must already see in the handwriting on the wall signs of the coming doom." [Cheers.]

Mr. Goschen replied and was followed by Mr. Parnell, who was greeted with enthusiastic cheers, all the members of the Opposition rising and waving their hats.

Mr. Morley's amendment was rejected 330 to 260.

Suicide of Pigott.

MADRID, March 1.—An Englishman, supposed to be Richard Pigott, was arrested at the Hotel des Ambassadeurs to-day under the name of Ronald Ponsonby.

The man afterwards committed suicide with a revolver.

THE COMPANY EXONERATED.

The Rails Not Pinkerton'd—A Lot of Expert Evidence—The Broken Tire.

ST. GEORGE, March 1.—The inquest was resumed in the Mechanics' Institute at 10.30 this forenoon before Coroner Webster of Paris. Mr. Nelson was the first witness. He is road-master, has supervision of the work and was over that portion of the road the day prior to the accident. He said:

My beat is from Suspension Bridge to Paris on this line; there is a curve between the west switch and the bridge where the accident occurred; there are several other curves more abrupt than this one; there are two switches; the curve continues to opposite the depot; never heard of this part of the road being particularly dangerous; the road-bed and track is in first-class repair; I don't regard it as more dangerous than any other parts of the system; I examined the switches yesterday morning after the mishap; both were in first-class repair; the east switch had been damaged by the locomotive; had repairs attended to towards the bridge; the track had spread; the west switch and track are all right; about two weeks ago I made a personal examination of the place; the rails were spread by the accident about 300 yards east of the bridge; I think two wheels would be off the track when entering upon the bridge; there is no contrivance to keep the wheels on the track; have seen additional rails on bridges, but don't think it is any additional protection.

To a juryman—Cannot account for the tire breaking; am not an expert; there are guard tenders on either side of the track.

Mr. Hobson (recalled)—Made examinations last night and this morning from the west switch down to the bridge; there is a correction I want to make in my testimony of yesterday; had the switches measured; the distance from bridge to first switch is 353 feet; from first switch to the west switch is 871 feet; the total distance is 1224 feet from the bridge to west switch; as to curves, the east end of the curve is 120 feet east of the east switch; the other end of the curve is 250 feet west of the west switch; the radius of the curves is 11,460, that is to say, 900 feet more than two miles; it is an easy curve. Witness put in a plan of the bridge, switches, etc. Don't know of another curve that is so exceptionally easy as the one at this bridge; don't consider guard rails of use to prevent danger; we don't use them on the bridges; there is only one bridge where we have guard rails; the last precaution that can be used is to keep the track in perfect order and we do so. Witness gave the reasons why guard rails had been abolished. It was not a question of cost; it was safer without them; we have two bridges east of us larger than this; am not a mechanic and cannot express any opinion about the tire breaking.

John Plummer, baggageman, was re-called: He had said that it was a dangerous place; in approaching the west switch have noticed a lurch in the baggage car; I am always on my feet sorting letters and papers at this point, and probably feel it more than the passengers; there is one place trainmen consider more dangerous than this, namely, the Dundas grade, where the speed is reduced by order of the company; the speed is not reduced at St. George; the driver of the train was going on his time card rate, 45 miles per hour, when the accident happened; I consider the bridge one of the safest on the road; there are other switches which we strike as hard as this.

Dr. Patten testified with reference to the injuries of a number of those who were killed.

A. H. Smith (recalled): I examined the remainder of the tire this morning; found the other portion of the tire which I wish this make a complete tire. It was perfect so far as could be seen beyond the continuance of the mark or slight seam for the distance of ½ inch longitudinally along the interior face of the tire; the seam extends all the way across the face of the piece produced; this seam went about ½ inch into the remainder of tire; I cannot say that this mark was caused by the breaking of the tire or whether it was the occasion of the break; if it were established that this were an old flaw it might have been the cause of the break; the breaking of the tire was the cause of the accident; the tire has been turned down two or three times, I think twice; about ½ of an inch is generally taken off when turned down; could not say that the seam was in when turned down last; from existing circumstances I would say that the flaw existed before the accident; a tire will break sometimes before it has had any wear.

Panel No. 1, Wm. Snowball, foreman, returned this verdict:

They because dislodged from the rails of the said railway, caused by the breaking of the tire of one of the wheels of the said engine, by reason of which Wm. Wemp et al. received divers mortal wounds, of which the said deceased persons died. We also exonerate the railway company and their employes from any blame in the matter, but would respectfully recommend that the company cause all fast trains to slacken their speed when approaching the St. George station, especially east bound trains.

Parcel No. 2, Davis Cope, foreman, after reciting the death of Mrs. Higgins from the accident, continued their verdict as follows:

We would recommend that passenger trains should be slowed in approaching the bridge and go over the same at the rate of about 12 miles an hour.

MR. HITT'S RESOLUTIONS.

The United States House of Representatives Favor Commercial Union.

WASHINGTON, March 1.—Mr. Hitt's Commercial Union resolutions passed the House this morning unanimously. The resolutions are as follows:

"Be it resolved, That whenever it shall be duly certified to the President of the United States that the Government of the Dominion of Canada has declared a desire to establish Commercial Union with the United States, he shall appoint three commissioners to meet those who may be likewise designated to represent the Government of Canada, to prepare a plan for the assimilation of the import duties and internal revenue taxes of the two countries, and an equitable division of receipts, in a Commercial Union, and said commissioners shall report to the President, who shall lay the report before Congress."

Nebraska Notes.

The City of Lincoln—Extracts from a Letter from Mr. D. J. Fitzgerald—Fen Picture of a Western City—A Cis-Atlantic Home Rule Centre.

The following are some extracts culled from a letter to Mr. J. W. Fitzgerald, town, from his son, Mr. D. J. Fitzgerald, who has for some time been with Hon. John Fitzgerald, who has for some time been President of the Irish National League of America at Lincoln, Nebraska. The extracts give an idea of affairs in that western country, and indicate the cis-Atlantic relations to the great Home Rule struggle beyond the seas:

"Everything is hurry and bustle here. Building is all the rage, and Lincoln is fast becoming one of the finest cities in the West. Twenty years ago Lincoln was but a hamlet; to-day she is peopled by 50,000 inhabitants, all of whom vie with each other in their endeavors to hurry her on to greatness—a goal towards which she is making gigantic strides. Lincoln is the capital of this flourishing state; it has a magnificent State Capitol with large, beautifully arranged grounds, a handsome postoffice, built by the National Government, also surrounded with spacious grounds, in the centre of which is one of the finest mineral springs in the West; a state asylum for the insane, and a penitentiary, where any trade may be learned.

These buildings are all cut stone and are living monuments of the go-ahead-itiveness of the American people. There are miles of street railways propelled both by steam and horse power. The state fair grounds here are the most complete I have visited anywhere and the track is a favorite with western horsemen. Lincoln has a magnificent waterworks system which supplies the city with good clear water. Four railways traverse Lincoln, the Burlington and Missouri railway (a part of the C. B. & Q. system), which has large shops, offices, freight sheds and a beautiful depot of brick and stone; the Missouri Pacific Railway; the Union Pacific Railway; and the Freemont, Elkhorn and Missouri Valley Railway. Large packing houses, stock yards, brick yards, factories, &c., dot the outskirts of the city. Wholesale houses, handling their special wares are plentiful. Lincoln is also a Catholic see, the diocese being under the fostering care of Bishop Bonacum, a very devoted and learned man. The press is flourishing and Lincoln has several good newspapers.

The climate of Nebraska is healthy and invigorating, possessing the grittiness of colder latitudes with the gentle warmth of the south, and her soil is indeed rich, as her abundant crops yearly testify. Foremost amongst Lincoln's thriving sons is our friend Hon. John Fitzgerald, President of the Irish National League of America, and your humble servant's generous employer. There is hardly an enterprise started in this locality with which he is not largely associated. He is the largest railway contractor in the west, has several flourishing banks throughout the state, one stock farm of 20,000 acres, and another of 10,000 acres, over which tramp the finest cattle I ever saw. He is president of the stock yards and packing house company, is owner of the rapid transit railway (a street car motor system), he has large wholesale and retail houses in this and other cities, besides being largely interested in real estate in the east. He diligently superintends his gigantic whirligig of enterprises, and the fact that he is always consulted by the shrewdest business men is ample proof of his wonderful business capacity and executive skill. His whole time is engrossed in his businesses and in aiding the Irish Cause. He is always willing to help a deserving cause, and no man is more generous than he. He lately presented the nuns with magnificent grounds valued at $50,000.00, and the other day he subscribed a second time $5,000 to St. Patrick's church in Rome. Everyone knows of his munificent donations to the cause of Home Rule. Mr. Fitzgerald is a true follower of Charles Stewart Parnell. Constitutional agitation, backed by the moral opinion of the civilised world, is his weapon; he has no sympathy with wild filibustering Irishmen, who, by voice and action, retard rather than help Ireland's sacred cause. He is waiting the day when College Green shall again have her own parliament, when the sound of Home Rule shall be heard from ocean to ocean, then he will go home to see his native land, and I to my Fatherland, to behold the British lion pulled slowly away by the moral command of civilisation, and pure, virgin-like, suffering Erin will arise, and in the language of a goddess exclaim, "Repair ye to my darling's grave, inscribe on his tombstone," 'Sacred to the memory of Robert Emmet my most disinterested patriotic and loving son,' As his last words were, 'When Ireland takes her rank among the nations of the earth then and not till then can my epitaph be written,' so my first act, now that this hope has been realised, will be to fulfil his command."

One of the best branches of the Irish National League is situated here, and the meetings which are held every alternate Sunday are filled with the elite of Lincoln all zealous in their sympathies for a suffering country. Lincoln holds a great triumvirate of Irishmen John Fitzgerald, Patrick Egan and John P. Sutton. Irishmen, the world over can rest assured that Ireland's interests in America are in loving hands. Patrick Egan is now a full-fledged American citizen, having taken out his final papers a few months ago. He has succeeded well and already his clever pen and master mind are being felt and heard in the politics of his adopted country as of his mother country. Yes, he is now as free as Col. King Harman and is "Under Secretary" to no one. No man in this country is better acquainted with Ireland's history, past and present, and no one labors more devotedly for his mother country than he. Every true American is with Ireland in her struggle for liberty; it is only human nature. There are some people, who never having studied Ireland's right to Home Rule from prejudice, assail it; there are none such in the west. Washington and New York have a few; these few were Mr. Chamberlain's slaves and devotees during his late visit to this country. Mr. Chamberlain was, I believe greatly surprised when in his sojourns in New York, Washington and elsewhere, he met Irishmen, as free, rich, happy and as highly educated as the society in which he is wont to move in at home. Had Mr. Chamberlain travelled from the Atlantic to the Pacific and beheld the millions of Irish Americans, true aristocrats, imbued with, and born of the anored blood of liberty, who are ever watching their mother's home across the sea, he would then know how futile his onslaughts against Ireland must be. The end is near, "Bloody Balfour's failure is another victory; steady concerted, constitutional, agitation must break down all barriers even though they were shapened like Chinese walls and decorated with Gibraltars. It is difficult to hold some ardent Irishmen down, but the calm words of their patriotic leaders, the voices of their ever true and devoted bishops and priests, have taught them patience, courage and confidence in the glorious destiny that in the near future awaits dear old Ireland."

ANOTHER RAILWAY TRAGEDY ON THE GRAND TRUNK.

A Freight Train Crashes into a Passenger Car at Paris—Two Persons Instantly Killed—The St. George Disaster.

PARIS, Ont., March 1.—Paris had not yet recovered from the excitement and horror attendant on the fearful catastrophe at St. George on Wednesday, when the town was again startled by the news of another fatal accident. The mixed train running from Brantford to Stratford was standing at the Paris station when the passenger car at the rear was run into by a freight. Two flat cars attached to the mixed train were driven right through the passenger coach, which was completely wrecked, one flat car being piled on top of the other.

There were at the time three passengers in the coach—Mrs. Law, a widow lady, and her 10-year-old grand-daughter of Drumbo, and Mr. Inglis of Brantford. Mr Yates, a friend who accompanied Mr. Inglis, got off at the station and was walking up and down the platform, when he saw the freight coming at a high speed. He cried out to those in the coach:

"Jump for your lives!"

Mr. Inglis rushed to the door and got off just in time, but the other two were unable to do so and were crushed in the wreck, death probably being instantaneous.

Mrs. Law was a sister of Mrs. Bell, a Paris baker. She came to town yesterday to attend the induction services of Rev. Mr. Cockburn, pastor-elect of Dumfries-street Presbyterian Church here, whom she had known when a boy. She was on her way home and had been on the car but a few minutes when she met her awful death.

The driver of the freight had never been on this road before. His run is on the main line, but since the St. George accident the main line trains go round by Brantford. There is a heavy grade just east of Paris station and as Brantford the driver was told to put on all power in order to clear the grade with his heavy train. The mixed should have left Paris an hour-and-a-half previous, and the freight driver, supposing the road clear, had on a full head of steam.

When he saw the semaphore up he shut off steam and put on the brakes and as soon as he saw the mixed he reversed his engine, but the speed was so great he could not stop.

Coroner Webster was summoned by telephone from St. George, where he had just closed the inquest on the St. George accident. A coroner's jury was soon empanelled and appointed Mr. John Allan as foreman. The jury viewed the bodies, Dr. Sinclair made the examination and the jury adjourned to meet at 9 a.m. to-morrow.

THE ST. GEORGE DISASTER.

Death of Fireman Angles, the Eleventh Victim—The Latest Particulars.

LONDON, Ont., March 1.—Fireman Henry Angles, who was injured in the late accident to the St. Louis express at St. George, died at his home here at 1.30 this morning. Angles had been in two serious accidents before and escaped. He was firing for Engineer Cox when their engine struck an open bridge at Merritton. He jumped and was saved while Cox was killed. When the Port Stanley excursion train dashed into an oil train at St. Thomas in July, 1887, and many were burnt and killed, Angles was firing for Engineer Donnelly. Angles escaped by jumping but his mate was killed. In Wednesday's disaster the engineer stuck to his post and escaped injury while Angles again jumped, his head striking an abutment of the bridge in his descent.

The death of Angles swells the death roll to eleven.

The Unknown Victim.

ST. GEORGE, March 1.—The interest and excitement was but little abated to-day. Visitors from the surrounding country and towns have been pouring in all day to witness the scene of the wreck. The railway company have 200 men employed repairing the bridge and it is expected by working all night that trains can pass safely over to-morrow.

No one has yet succeeded in identifying the lady taken from the dining car. Her remains had been sent to Brantford as Miss Moore, then sent to Ingersoll as Miss McLeod, where they now remain. There was nothing in her pockets to identify her, and the conductor has no recollection of her. She was about 30 years of age and had dark hair and rather thin features. Her cloak is at the station.

The Injured Doing Well.

ST. GEORGE, March 1.—The medical staff's report on the victims of the bridge accident is on the whole encouraging in every case, although at this early date it is impossible to forecast results with any degree of certainty. Mr. W. Benedict passed a good night. Dr. Lequesne is somewhat easier. Mr. and Mrs. Marshall are doing well. Miss Andrews has slightly improved during the night; her case is very serious. Miss McLeod and Miss Chaffee and Mr. and Mrs. Badden are doing nicely. Mr. McLaughlin is somewhat better. Mrs. Jennings and daughter are favorable. Conductor Revell and Mr. Douney are doing well. George Forbes is doing better; in Mr. Hilson improvement is hardly noticeable. W. J. Hyslop is still in a very bad condition. He is a member of the Bricklayers' Union. Mrs. Sendall is doing favorably. The others are all improving as well as can be expected.

The lady reported as Captain Moore in the list of killed is an error. Captain Moore was here yesterday. The deceased lady had a refined appearance, and was apparently married. She had a wedding ring on her hand. No enquiries have been received, and there is nothing so far to identify her. She was taken from the dining car a few minutes after expiring.

The G. T. R. Company are working unceasingly, and will have the bridge repaired in a short time. All postal, express and passenger traffic are done through the regular bus accommodation to Harrisburg.

PORT HOPE, March 1.—The body of the late Mr. Thos. McLean of Detroit, who was killed at St. George on Wednesday night, was brought here to-day. The funeral takes place to-morrow at 4 p.m. from the residence of Mr. James McLean. The deceased, who lost his wife some time ago, leaves three small children, whom he was on his way to Port Hope to see when he was killed.

NOT A PIMPLE ON HIM NOW.

Had with Eczema. Hair all Gone. Scalp Covered with Eruptions. Thought his Hair would never Grow. Cured by Cuticura Remedies. Hair Splendid and Not a Pimple on Him Now.

I cannot say enough in praise of the CUTICURA REMEDIES. My boy, when one year of age, was so bad with eczema that he lost all of his hair. His scalp was covered with eruptions which the doctors said was dead head, and that his hair would never grow again. Despairing of a cure from the doctors, I began the use of the CUTICURA REMEDIES, and I am happy to say, with the most perfect success. His hair is now splendid, and there is not a pimple on him. I recommend the CUTICURA REMEDIES to mothers as the most speedy, economical, and sure cure for all skin diseases of infants and children, and feel that every mother who has an afflicted child will thank me for so doing.

MRS. M. E. WOODSUM, Norway, Me.

A Fever Sore Eight Years Cured.

I must extend to you the thanks of one of my customers, who has been cured, by using the CUTICURA REMEDIES, of an old sore, caused by a long spell of sickness or fever eight years ago. He was so bad he was fearful he would have to have his leg amputated, but is happy to say he is now entirely well.—send us a dollar. He requests me to use his name, which is E. H. CARON, merchant of this place.

JOHN V. MINOR, Druggist, Galveston, Texas.

Severe Scalp Disease Cured.

A few weeks ago my wife suffered very much from a cutaneous disease of the scalp, and received no relief from the various remedies she used, until she tried CUTICURA. The disease promptly yielded to this treatment, and in a short while she was entirely well. There has been no return of the disease, and CUTICURA ranks No. 1 in our estimation for diseases of the skin.

"People like to be cheerful, I suppose, and people like others to be like themselves, I know. It is true that I have been unhappy—that my life has been morose and solitary. How much this has been my own fault and how much that of others, need not be said. But it is also true that of late I have been far happier. Shall I tell you why?"

His voice was deep and earnest, and something in his eyes made the girl crimson again, and turn her own to the distant hills.

"If you please," she faltered, in her low, musical contralto.

"Shall I tell you too why I have built cottage you are looking at?" he went on with increasing earnestness. "It is because it has been my hope, my prayer, that this sad, lonely life of mine was nearly over. It is because I have believed that after much pain, and doubt, and bitterness my trust in men might be brought back through my love for a woman. The cottage—it is for you, Jane. I love you, Jane. Do you hear me? From the moment I saw you, I loved you. I resolved to ask you to marry me. Jane, will you do so?"

While he spoke the color had been fading steadily from her face, and when he stopped the girl was ashy pale. He looked at her anxiously and impatiently.

"I—I—am—so sorry," she muttered at last, as if each word were a separate pain.

"Sorry? God! Why?" Then with swift suspicion, "Jane, do you care for—are you engaged to some one?"

She shook her head mournfully.

"Do you see that sun going down over the hills?" She turned her beautiful eyes full upon Harding as she spoke, with a look of ineffable tenderness and sorrow. "Well, you must let what you have said go down with that sun, and never think of it—never speak of it again."

It was Harding's turn to blanch now, and the blood retreated from his swarthy cheeks until they looked almost ghastly.

"Why?" and his voice came involuntarily, almost in a whisper.

"Do not ask me—have pity—do not ask me."

"I must ask you," he cried impetuously, "but yet I need not perhaps. You care for no one else? Then it must be that you do not, you cannot, care for me. Is that it, Jane?"

"That is not it."

"Not it!" he cried joyfully. "Then you do care for me a little—just a little, Jane?—a little which is to grow into a great deal by and by! Oh, child, child, think how wrecked I have been all these years! Think how I have waited and waited. I lived for twelve long months, Jane, alone, without a soul, without even a dog, in a tent on that knoll; and so hungry, Jane—so hungry for sympathy, for love. It comes to me at last, dear Jane, what I have longed for and begged for so long. Don't, don't—as you hope for mercy, don't take it away again!"

"You are good," said she softly, "whatever they may say. It is good and noble of you. Why should I tell you lies? I do like you very much, for all," looking down with a faint blush, "we have met and known each other so little. But all the same, it cannot be."

"Cannot again," he cried impatiently. "Once more, I ask you, will you tell me why not?"

She looked at him half frightened, for there was something of mastery in his tone; then, standing erect, and with a positiveness as strong as his own, she answered, "Because I should disgrace you."

"Because you are on the stage!" he exclaimed disdainfully. "Is that it?"

"That is something," returned Jane humbly, "but perhaps not much. I am hardly important enough to be worth even that sort of reproach. And besides the people of California are too liberal to apply it. I know I am only a ballet dancer"—and the poor girl tried to smile here—"and a pretty bad one at that. But I work hard for an honest living, and no one can say I have ever disgraced myself."

"Then how can you disgrace me?"

"I have begged you not to ask me."

"I must!" cried Harding, passionately; "and I have the right to do so. Would you have me take your cool 'no' when you care for no one else and do care for me, and to go my way satisfied? I can't—I won't!"

"You will be sorry," said Jane pitifully.

"Let me be. Anything rather than the doubt. Give me the truth."

"Well then." She turned her back now and looked from the window with her grave, sad face, and spoke in a dull, measured way, like the swinging of a pendulum. "I am a convict's daughter.

"I am a convict's daughter."

My father is in the state prison of New York at Auburn."

"For what crime?"

"Murder. It was in the first degree. The sentence commuted it to imprisonment for life. There were extenuating circumstances. I went down on my knees and prayed that he might be saved from the gallows."

"And his victim?"

"Was his wife—my mother."

CHAPTER IV.

A MYSTERY AND A PARTING.

The troupe of which Miss de Montague and Mr. Bellario were prime stars, made a [illegible] at Bullin's Children's Theatre, Fletcher's Castoria

First; so profound, in truth, that before their three nights were over a fresh engagement was made for their return a fortnight later. It was agreed that at that time, and on their return from other points, they should appear for an additional three nights, and thus afford their admirers opportunities for which the first essay had been insufficient. This arrangement was highly agreeable to Miss de Montague and Mr. Bellario for reasons largely connected, respectively, with the excellent cuisine and bar of the Bella Union. "Why, my dear," observed the lady, "when I first come up to do the 'legitimate,' fifteen months ago, love nor money could buy a morsel of supper after the play. We had to do with a pot of ginger, and dig it out with the Macbeth daggers, and wash it down with bad beer."

The arrangement was also satisfactory to Miss Tinsel. It seemed well to her that she should be absent for a time; and yet she could not deny a feeling of joy over the thought of returning. Her lover had been greatly shocked by the dismal tale she had recited; but, to the credit of his manliness, he had refused to accept the facts as conclusive arguments against his suit. "Was it her fault," argued he, "that her father was a scoundrel?" Why should stigma or disability of any sort attach to her for that which she had no hand in, and had been powerless to prevent? On the contrary, should not the world, or any part of it, that might come in contact with her, treat a helpless and innocent girl with even greater tenderness and commiseration because of the undeserved and terrible misfortune that had befallen her?

Jane had resolved that she ought not to be moved by such arguments, and yet she could not help liking to hear them. It was in the end agreed between them—by Harding's earnest entreaties—that she should think the matter over, and that her final decision should be withheld until the return of the troupe to perform its second engagement. Jane had talked with Miss De Montague, who, in spite of some foibles, was a kind hearted and right minded woman, and Miss De Montague had strongly urged that Jane's sensitiveness was overstrained. If Mr. Harding had been told all the truth without reserve and he still wished to make Jane his wife, and Jane wished to marry him, that was enough. To stand about and moon over it, and wonder or care what people would say, was all fiddle-faddle, and all sensible people would call it so. Besides, California was different from other places. It was the custom there to give everybody a chance, and value them for what they did and what they were now—and not for what other people, or even they themselves, had done before. It is right to admit that the amiable lady's passion for Mr. Bellario—whose similar feeling for Miss Tinsel was more than suspected—had something to do with inspiring all these sage suggestions; but the suggestions were not deprived of good sense by that.

During the fortnight that passed between Jane's departure and her return the cottage that Harding designed for her future home fast approached completion. Meanwhile its owner's claim was doing better, and his coffers were consequently fuller than ever before. He resolved that, come what might, Jane should become his wife; and it was in this frame of mind that Harding walked out by the riverside on the night the troupe returned. As before, he resolved not to hurry in his suit, and therefore determined to omit calling until the following day.

Obituary.

On Saturday Mrs. Elizabeth Gardiner McBurney, relict of the late Mr. John McBurney, passed away at the residence of her son-in-law, Mr. John Nugent, druggist, at the advanced age of 82 years. The deceased lady removed from the township of Hope, where she has been long respected as one of the oldest and most worthy residents, about nine or ten months ago. She was a native of County Fermanagh, Ireland, and came to this country many years ago, settling in the township of Hope, where she has remained until within the past few months. The funeral takes place from Mr. Nugent's residence, No. 205 Brock street, to the Midland station at noon on Tuesday. The interment will take place at Canton Cemetery, Hope township.

The Evangelistic Services To-morrow.

The Rev. Mr. Crossley will preach in St. Paul's church at 11 a.m., and the Rev. J. E. Hunter in George street church at the same hour. In the evening both the evangelists will take charge of the evening service in the George street church. In the George street church there will be an early prayer meeting commencing at 7 p.m. At 9.45 a public fellowship meeting will be held, which will close in time for persons to attend their respectable churches. The two last named meetings will be conducted by the pastor of the George street church. During the meetings the pews in the church will be free. The doors of the church will be open to-morrow evening at 7.30 o'clock. Entrance to the church will be by the front doors. Unconverted persons are specially invited. The evangelists have just closed their services in Detroit where hundreds have been saved.

The Children's Drive.

Over thirty large sleighs were required to contain the pupils of the George street Methodist Sunday school who turned out for the drive Friday afternoon. Three hundred hilarious youngsters and a hundred or more older and more sedate pupils were on hand and apparently enjoyed the drive immensely. The long procession was headed by the band, who played hymns and sacred songs. Each sleigh flaunted a large flag, and altogether the turn-out created quite a sensation. The little folks made the street echo with their merry shouting. The drive lasted from about 4:30 till six o'clock. The committee of management proved themselves equal to the task in preparing for the drive and everything passed off pleasantly. After the return from the drive and other refreshments, Mr. Edgecombe presented the youngsters with a barrel of apples which disappeared faster than the winter snow is melting to-day.

The Big Timber Limit Case.

An attempt was made yesterday, the Empire says, to settle the suit of Scott v. Benedict, the trial of which has occupied Mr. Justice Street and several of the best counsel of this province for the last week or two. The negotiations were begun early in the day and at ten o'clock, the regular hour for the opening of the court, they were still in progress. Mr. Justice Street waited for more than an hour in order to give the parties a good chance to bring things to a head, but it was all of no use. After consultations of all sorts, proposals and counter-proposals, the only decision the parties could come to was that they were as yet unable to agree. About noon the trial was taken up again, and things went on much the same as usual. A rather laughable basis of settlement was current about the hall during the most of the day. It was a proposal to divide the timber limits forming the subject of dispute in four parcels, and to distribute these parcels among the several learned counsel who are at present engaged in the action.

Death of Mr. W. S. Robinson.

The Toronto World on Tuesday had the following reference to a deceased brother-in-law of Mrs. Chas. Robinson, of this town :—Mr. W. S. Robinson, the well-known North Toronto druggist, died at his residence, 732 Yonge street, yesterday morning, at half-past 6 o'clock. The cause of death was paralysis, the deceased gentlemen having had a shock about a fortnight ago, from which he never recovered consciousness. Mr. Robinson was 55 years of age at the time of his death, and was one of the oldest residents of the old village of Yorkville. He was born in Grimsby, Lincolnshire, England, and came to Canada about 37 years ago. He was a Past Master of Ashlar Lodge A.F. & A.M., Past Prior Z of the Royal Arch-Chapter, a member of the A.O.U.W., and also an Oddfellow. Although never an active politician, Mr. Robinson took great interest in public affairs, being exceedingly well informed on both Dominion and municipal matters. Immensely popular among his neighbors, he could often have held municipal office had he so desired. An affectionate and loving husband, a kind father, and a citizen against whose name no man can say ill, he leaves a wife, two sons, a daughter and legions of friends to mourn his death.

The Great Play Michael Strogoff.

Few dramas on the stage give the scope for scenic splendor that is found in this powerful representation of the romantic career of the courier to the Czar. The pomp of the imperial fetes, and picturesqueness of the frontier stations, and the crimson tide of battle, all pay tribute to its splendor, and are presented with a fidelity and realism that surpasses anything of the kind ever seen. The mis en scene revels in the glint of despotic play, the richness of barbaric color, and the delights that come only with lavish expenditure and careful study of the effects of manner. The drama is one that not only appeals to every admirer of the sturdy patriotism of the Sclavonic race, but it is strong in interest to every one. It is thrilling from beginning to end, and the rapid succession of its exciting episodes gives it an absorbing character which even a knowledge of the plot and denouement does not interfere with. In fact, the absorbing character is intensified by the somewhat florid treatment it has received in dramatization. The painter's art, as well as the costumer's ingenuity, have been brought into prominence in the scenic illustrations that assume a marked distinction seldom seen in stage productions. These pictorial features are especially remarkable. The characterizations are all of them strong. The title role is one to excite the warmest sympathy and applauses.—Philadelphia Record. Chas. L. Anderson's Michael Strogoff company will appear at Bradburn's Opera House, March 12th. 1d

The Ottawa Deputation.

Civility Received—"Freemasonry" Treated.

The combined military and civil deputation, which was at Ottawa, consisted—the military wing—of Col. Rogers, Major Bell, Major and Paymaster Howard, Capt. Langford, Capt. Brennan and Capt. Donaldson; the civil branch was composed of Messrs. J. J. Hartley, Wm. Langford, R. S. Davidson, Adam Hall, A. Rutherford, J. D. Baptie, A. Dawson, T. Cahill and J. E. Belcher, C.E., town engineer. Mayor Stevenson took the party in charge and arranged an audience with Sir Adolph Caron, Minister of Militia, who courteously received the deputation. After listening to the representations of Col. Rogers and Mr. Rutherford in reference to a new armory and other needed improvements, the Minister stated that it was the settled policy of the government to enforce a rigid retrenchment in every department. With regard to the affairs of the 57th he would do his utmost to have a grant for the purpose indicated placed in the Supplementary Estimates. Mr. Rutherford added to what had been urged that it was the intention of the town to provide a site for the purposed armoury. Sir Adolph asked about what sum was required and Col. Rogers stated that $4000, would be something near the needed figure, for a brick armoury. He also pointed out that unless the Dominion Government took action, the government stores would be destroyed, not only by wet but there was the additional danger of theft and fire. The mayor suggested that if the government would make an appropriation of $2000, the balance required might be supplemented by local subscriptions and a town grant. Sir Adolph stated that the government was besieged by requests of this kind. A demand was made for Brantford, for assistance which had offered that the government grant should be supplemented by $10,000 from local sources. Col. Rogers pointed out that Brantford had only one battalion which Peterborough had a battalion of the same strength and also a troop of cavalry and half a battery of artillery. Sir Adolph, assured the deputation that he would bring the matter before his colleagues, and urge upon them the granting of half, if not the whole, of the amount required. The deputation retired and half an hour later had an audience with Deputy-Adjutant-General Powell, upon the subject of their visit to the capital.

THE CIVIC REQUEST.

The deputation also visited Sir Hector Langevin, Minister of Public Works, with reference to the dredging of the Little Lake. The conference took place in the committee room of the House of Commons. Sir Hector said that the government was willing to do all that was right in the matter, but as this was an almost entirely local affair he considered that the town should assist. He would guarantee that whenever the town granted a sum of money for this purpose the government would add a like amount. This was tantamount to the government offering to pay half the expense of the work.

As regarded the Customs House, Sir Hector said it had already been decided to build one in Peterborough this year.

Late in the evening an interview with Sir John Macdonald was secured through Mr. Stevenson, M.P. The Premier listened attentively to the statement of the case, and while not prepared to give any definite assurance he urged the town to send in a formal petition regarding the dredging of the Little Lake and he would give it his best consideration.

At these interviews the chief spokesmen were the Mayor and Messrs. Cahill and Rutherford.

The Governor General's Trophy Lost by a Single Shot—A Sweeping Victory Over Belleville.

Peterborough was defeated by Lindsay at Ottawa yesterday in the competition for the Governor General's cup by a single point. The match was played on the Rideau Hall curling ice, one rink playing in the forenoon and the other in the afternoon. In the forenoon skip Rutherford tied at 19 with skip McLennan of Lindsay, and after lunch skips Ferguson and Hughes tussled for the majority, Peterborough at the conclusion of the game getting the small end of 24-23 score. Following is the score :

Lindsay.	Peterborough.
P. Morgan,	R. M. Desmiteun,
J. A. Bucknell,	T. E. Bradburn,
W. S. Milner,	C. McGill,
W. McLennan, skip. 19	T. Rutherford, skip. . 19

A. MacDonell,	R. S. Davidson,
S. Hughes, skip . . . 24	W. G. Ferguson, skip. 23

The curlers all lanched at Rideau Hall, but in the absence of His Excellency at Montreal, were entertained by the staff. They spent a most enjoyable time at the capital, and returned home this morning.

BELLEVILLE SNOWED UNDER.

Two rinks of the Bay City curlers played here last night, and met with a sweeping defeat. Yesterday morning they played at Campbellford and won a victory; in the afternoon they succumbed to Keene by a small majority. Following is the record of last night's game :

Belleville.	Peterborough.
John Bonar,	J. H. Burnham,
F. Dolan,	T. P. Atrill,
Geo. Easton,	W. H. Budden,

Previous to the last number, Messrs. Allum and Pankeon, in neat, complimentary addresses, moved and seconded the usual votes of thanks. The entertainment throughout was a splendid success.

News Nuggets.

—A Bridgenorth man says that a seed-oats "hay forker," is canvassing the farmers in that vicinity.

—At the police court this morning Chas. Beavis was fined $2 and costs for being drunk.

—During March there were registered at the town clerk's office 25 births, 8 marriages, and 7 deaths.

—Lakefield will grant no wholesale liquor licenses, and only four hotels are to be licensed at $200 each.

—Mr. John Carlisle to-day sold two white brick houses on Division street to Mr. W. B. Kelly, of Bridgenorth, for $2,400.

—The flags that adorned the Sunday school parade Friday afternoon were very kindly loaned by Mr. J. J. Turner, to whom the committee of the Sunday school are greatly indebted.

—Tuesday evening Messrs. Robt. Stockdale and John McKinty of Harvey had a pig stolen from their sleigh in a Lakefield hotel yard. Next morning the porker was found in a neighboring field nicely cut up.

The Late Dennis Martin.

In the usual place in this issue will be found the notice of the death at Virginia city Nevada of Mr. Dennis Martin, son of Mr. James Martin of Peterborough and brother-in-law of Mr. John Delaney, town. On Sunday night last Mr. Martin's friends in Peterborough received a telegram apprising them of the death and asking instructions as to the disposal of the remains. A telegram was at once forwarded requesting that the body be sent on to Peterborough for interment. On Monday another telegram was received stating that the remains had not yet been shipped, and intimating that there would be further telegrams to relatives here. The latter, after waiting three days received a telegram stating that the remains of the late Mr. Martin had been interred in Virginia City. The friends of the late Mr. Martin who expected to have an opportunity of following his remains to their last resting place here, are thus apprised that the burial took place at his late home as intimated above. Mr. Martin left Peterborough about 26 years ago. Further particulars respecting his illness and last hours are expected.

INVALID READERS will find that one dollar expended for Dr. Parker's great medical work, the "Science of Life," will be of more value to them than ten thousand dollars expended for proprietary medicines, electric appliances, etc. The book contains over one hundred and twenty-five invaluable prescriptions for all diseases that human flesh is heir to. See advertisement.

An Apt Quotation

From a letter by Mrs. Sullivan, 124 West Ave., Hamilton, Ont.:—"After trying a number of medicines for liver complaint, from which I suffered for years, I bought two bottles of Burdock Blood Bitter and found it a complete cure. My house is never without it." 2w8d

CLEVELAND'S
SUPERIOR
THE PUREST AND BEST

Is made only of strictly pure grape cream of tartar, strictly pure bicarbonate of soda, and a small portion of flour as a preservative, nothing else whatever, and is warranted entirely free from alum, ammonia, phosphates, lime, and all the adulterants frequently found in baking powders. The character of materials used, their purity, and the nicety of their combination, render Cleveland's superior baking powder the most healthful and most economical in use, and it always affords wholesome, nutritious, and delicious food.

It is recommended for purity, healthfulness and efficiency by Government and State chemists, chemists of Boards of Health, and professors in institutions of learning throughout the country.

Sold only in cans, full weight.

DINNER

is always a subject for sighs with a housekeeper and she often wishes that the law settled the question of "What shall we have for dinner,' and prescribed certain dishes for certain days. Such a law would certainly save a great deal of worry and questioning to many tired women. But it is not such a difficult problem to solve after all especially in Peterborough, where we have such a good market, besides at China Hall you can secure full Dinner Sets that will grace any table for so little money that anyone can afford the outlay.

TURNBULL'S

The Flood of the Season's French and English Printed Calicoes is rolling in—white capped and aglow phosphorescent, color play. How the Priscellas of the past would joy to see them? Pretty as you have seen them, they were never so handsome before. Persian designs, leaves, buds, flowers, polka, dots, plain stripes, scrabbles and scrawls, angles and tangles. More than 300 different styles, small figures, large figures, and mourning designs, better printing was never done 'exquisite.' If you don't want to buy, don't pass the window or come in. Prices range from 6 to 15 cents.

The trouble with low grade Marseilles Bed Spreads has been loose threads at the back—face, all right, but you didn't like the fiddle-string arrangement at the back, needn't. Here are $2.50 Marseilles Bed Spreads, full size and handsome patterns, with backs firm and well finished. Look at this honey-comb quilt for $1, which needs no apology for either size or weight.

Flannelettes—what are they? Are they all-wool? No they are mostly cotton, finished to imitate a Flannel, and especially adapted for childrens' dresses and ladies' wrappers. They consist of Cream Grounds, with pink, blue and cardinal Stripes, blue and white, pink and cream, pink and blue, and pink, cream and grey, some 18 patterns in all—the best quality being only 12½ cents a yard.

Opened out this week, a line of Linen Tablings, the maker of which is noted the world over. They are specially suited for every day wear—the warp is well twisted and they wash and iron well.

Before you hear from us again, I will have visited the wholesale markets where I will be on the look-out for Bargains for my Customers.

Thirty Years Paying Rent in Peterborough.

I frequently hear statements akin to above, followed by remarks of deep regret for having missed many golden opportunities of buying whole lots at a price they would now have to pay for one foot of the same land. Buying property in Peterborough is the safest kind of a safe and profitable investment. I have at present cheap homes, medium class homes and a few exceedingly fine Residences and grounds some of which were built for home comforts, regardless of cost. Uncontrollable circumstances have now caused these to be offered for immediate sale much under value. I commence at $675, for good house and large lot. I can suit any reasonable buyer. I have also good value in Market Gardens and Farms.

DOWN AMONG THE FISHES.

HOW OUR NAVY LOOKED AFTER THE TOOTHSOME MACKEREL.

The Protection Fleet and the Modus Vivendi—The Cost of the Service Was $87,102 for the Season of 1888.

OTTAWA, March 4.—The report of the Fisheries Protection Service of the Dominion for 1888 has just been issued. The cost of the service for the year was $77,102 out of an appropriation of $125,000 voted by Parliament. Each vessel cost for wages, provisions, etc., as follows:

Acadia	$23,851	C. J. Brydges	$3993
La Canadienne	17,338	Critic	3333
Cruiser	4,666	Ormoc	412
Dream	7,881	C. H. Tupper	4291
Advance	4,372	Vigilant	6813
General account			$1466
Total			$77,102

The following are the important portions of the instructions which were issued to the commanders of the different vessels at the beginning of the fishing season:

Under the modus vivendi and until further instructions fishing vessels of the United States are to be allowed to purchase bait, ice, salmon, lines and all other supplies and outfits to transship their catch, and to ship crews in ports of Canada and Newfoundland, upon procuring an annual license therefor, upon the payment of the fee of $1.59 per ton of the vessel's registered tonnage.

You will in no way hinder the access to Canadian ports of any United States fishing vessel whose master or owner declares his intention of procuring such license, nor interfere with any United States fishing vessel whose master or owner produces such license, in so far as the carrying out of the purposes of the license is concerned.

The possession of this license gives no right to the holder thereof to fish or prepare to fish in Canadian waters, or to violate any of the laws of Canada, and to do aught but carry out the objects for which the license is given.

United States fishing vessels which enter Canadian bays and harbors for any of the four purposes mentioned in article 1 of the Convention of Oct. 20, 1818, are not to be required to enter or clear at customs, provided they do not remain therein longer than 24 hours, and do not hold any communication with the shore.

The season has been an uneventful one, the better understanding on the part of the masters of United States fishing vessels as to just what rights they had in Canadian ports; the familiarity of the captains of cruisers with their duties, together with the issue of licenses under the modus vivendi of the Treaty of Washington, all tended to harmonize the work of the protection vessels.

Thirty-six licenses were issued during the year, which realized a total revenue of $3831.

It was agreed with the Government of Newfoundland, the Legislature having adopted the Treaty of Washington, thus giving effect to the modus vivendi, that licenses issued to United States fishing vessels by that colony should be recognized in Canada, and those issued by Canada should be recognized in Newfoundland. The department is not yet advised of the number of licenses issued by the Government of Newfoundland, but it must be considerably in excess of that issued under the authority of the Dominion Government since the privilege of purchasing bait was freely taken advantage of by a large proportion of the fleet of the United States fishing vessels engaged in deep sea fishing on the banks.

The total number of United States fishing vessels in the Gulf was 83, which is less than was ever known to be there in any previous season; the catch of these vessels is reported at 10,428 barrels, as against 17,508 barrels in 1887.

The number of Canadian vessels engaged in the mackerel fishery during the past season is estimated at 120.

The hook and line fishing inshore was carried on to a much larger extent than in former years, and to many of the fishermen engaged therein proved remunerative the high price which they obtained for their fish compensating many of them for the paucity of their catch.

The only seizure during the season was that of a small sloop rigged boat found fishing in the Bay of Fundy near Campobello; the boat was subsequently given up to the owners upon the payment of expenses incurred in the safekeeping of the same.

Lieut. A. R. Gordon, R.N., in command of the fisheries protection service, makes this interesting allusion to the movements of the mackerel, which fish the fleet was principally engaged in protecting in the Gulf of St. Lawrence.

The mackerel appeared on the Nova Scotia coast early in June. They were accompanied by a large fleet of United States seiners harrassing them and thus preventing them lingering on the coast. Some large catches were made off Chedabucto Bay and the fish were followed round Scatterie to Cape North, where they were lost sight of. The Bradelle and Orphan Banks were then searched and some vessels went to the Labrador, but the fish did not show up again in any quantity till late in July, when for a short time they "schooled" freely between Escuminac and North Point, some fair catches being then made. During the rest of the season the fish showed fitfully, but in small schools and very wild. In September most of the fish taken were raised by trolling be it, and when the fish rose, the seine was shot round both fish and vessel, making a small catch. Canadian seiners practised this method to some extent, and also reverted successfully at the close of the season to the old method of hook and line.

The change in the habits of the mackerel and their almost complete extinction in places they used to frequent is undeniable; and the investigation of the causes of the change is most desirable, as it affects one of our most valuable inshore fisheries.

The following figures present in startling intensity the decreased productiveness of the west Atlantic mackerel fishery:

	1885.	1886.	1887.	1888.
Catch, U.S. seiners	320,000	80,000	78,000	40,000
Canadian catch	156,480	168,288	151,653	*80,000
Total product, brls	476,480	248,288	229,653	120,000

*Estimated.

I believe this decreased productiveness to be largely due to the increased destructiveness of the means of capture and the use of these means at improper times. The whole treatment of our deep sea fisheries has been hitherto conducted on the idea that the supply of fish of every kind there is inexhaustible.

We find the inshore fisheries of the United States depleted and the government of the country undertaking, at great expense, the doubtful experiment of restoring these fisheries by the artificial propagation of cod and mackerel.

In all cases of the destruction of a species there must come a critical point after which the diminution will proceed with great rapidity. In regard to Canadian mackerel we are approaching this point, and if the fishery is to be maintained protective measures of some kind must shortly be taken.

And the Earth Quaked.

HUACA, Ecuador, March 3.—A sharp shock of earthquake was felt here at 11.15 o'clock last night, lasting about 15 seconds. It was followed a few moments later by four others less violent. Several other shocks were felt during the night and the trouble still continues.

GUAYAQUIL, March 3.—A violent shock of earthquake occurred here at 11.08 o'clock last night. During the night and this morning 13 others less severe were felt. Clocks stopped, the telephones are down and panic prevails.

The Irish Bishops' Lenten Pastorals.

LONDON, March 3.—Lenten pastoral letters from the bishops read to-day in Catholic churches in Ireland express sympathy with the Pope's position. They denounce both the action of the Italian Government regarding the Vatican and tyrannous government in Ireland. The letters also contain counsels from the bishops to their flocks against committing illegal acts.

FOUND ON PIGOTT'S BODY.

A NOTE BOOK AND A LETTER FROM MR. LABOUCHERE.

The Significant Telegram Sent by the Forger to The Times' Dublin Solicitor—General Cable News.

LONDON, March 3.—Besides Pigott's check-book a letter addressed to Mr. Labouchere and a license to carry arms in Ireland were found on his body. The letter addressed to Mr. Labouchere says the first batch of letters sold by him to The Times were genuine but that in the second batch there were several forged letters, including two ascribed to Parnell and one each to Davitt, O'Kelly and Egan. Pigott further says: "I am deeply sorry for all these I have injured and am ready to place at their disposal all means in my power to remedy all that I have said that was false. Everything written under oath was true."

The license to carry a revolver was dated at Dublin. A check book of the Ulster Bank was also found on the body. Pigott tried to negotiate a check at a Madrid bank, but in the absence of proof of his identity the bank refused to cash it. A note book full of interesting notes was also found.

The body lies with four others in the morgue. The dead man's beard is stiff with blood. The bullet entered the mouth and came out at the back of the head near the neck on the right side. The body will be photographed to-morrow and will be buried Tuesday, after it has been identified by a British detective. The British embassy at Madrid has given orders for a decent burial.

What Had "S" Promised?

LONDON, March 3.—This telegram Pigott sent from Madrid on Thursday to Mr. Soames' office in this city was addressed to Mr. Shannon, The Times' Dublin solicitor. It read as follows:

Please ask Mr. "S." to send me what you promised. Write. ROLAND PONSONBY.
Hotel des Ambassadeurs, Madrid.

Mr. Balfour Was Warned.

LONDON, March 3.—Archbishop Walsh of Dublin has sent a telegram to Cardinal Rampolla, Papal Secretary of State, instancing the case of Pigott as proving that the Parnellites have been misrepresented to the Vatican.

It is stated that a Fenian in Paris is prepared to divulge the source of the first batch of the Parnell letters.

Mr. MacLean, a Conservative member of Parliament, says that Mr. Balfour warned The Times a year ago that Pigott was unreliable.

Parnell Grasps a Great Opportunity.

NEW YORK, March 3.—Mr. Smalley in his cable from London to The Sunday Tribune says, with reference to the speech of Mr. Parnell on Friday night: The House of Commons received him last night with such a demonstration as perhaps never before was offered to a member who had never held a great office of State. Mr. Gladstone himself led the cheering, which lasted for many minutes—a scene of tumultuous enthusiasm. Mr. Parnell alone stood unmoved, pale, impassive; all ice amid the general flame. He spoke for twenty minutes in his usual tone, without one word of allusion to himself or to his victory.

So much for his personal demeanor. But his speech may mark a new departure in Home Rule. He is a politician who sees that moments like this are to be used, not to embasse but to modify his demands. He has at last the ear of the people of England, and his first word to them is one of conciliation and concession. "We ask," said Mr. Parnell, "that Ireland shall have the power of dealing with all those matters which concern herself and herself alone."—he has said that before, but he now adds, with singular emphasis—"without the slightest shadow of danger or risk to the interests of the Empire." Then he goes on:

All I ask is that you on your side should be willing to consider and deal with this question as if it were an open question: that you should consider how far you can give to Ireland the right to legislate for herself with safety to your own greater and undoubtedly more overpowering influences. It is legitimate and right that we, being the smaller country, should endeavor to conciliate you in every possible manner, to yield to you, and to agree to such safeguards as you may think necessary or desirable for the security of your own interests.

Such words as those open, or may open, a new future for Ireland and England. They are doubly significant, coming at such a crisis as this. They will be taken to mean that Mr. Parnell is now willing to approach Home Rule from the English point of view, if they on their side will give a fair hearing to the Irish view. He says expressly that it is an open question. He even appeals to the English to regard it as an open question. It is as if Mr. Parnell had said: "Let us begin over again. Let us try together to find a solution acceptable to both."

I shall perhaps be acquitted of overreadiness to praise Mr. Parnell, but if I understand rightly what he now proposes, I should say that no leader ever seized a great opportunity in a more statesmanlike spirit. If the English will meet him half-way, if on both sides a spirit of reason, of prudence, and of compromise, which Burke called the essence of politics, shall prevail, this eternal Irish question may cease to be eternal.

The Police at Clonmel Stoned.

DUBLIN, March 3.—Dr. Tanner, member of Parliament for Cork, arrested in London Friday, arrived at Clonmel early this morning. Tanner refused to enter the prison wagon whereupon three constables forced him in and held him on the seat. A crowd followed the wagon greeting and throwing stones at the police, both before and after the prison was reached. Six persons were arrested but were liberated.

A Vote of Confidence.

PARIS, March 3.—In the Chamber of Deputies yesterday M. Laguerre asked the Government to explain its prosecution of the Patriotic League and why he had not been included with those who were prosecuted. M. Tirard justified the measure. The Government, he said, would not falter before the intrigues and threats of the enemies of the republic. M. Tirard's remarks were greeted with applause. M. Thevenet, Minister of Justice, contended that the arrest of the leaders of the league was legal. He stigmatized the league as a hypocritical association whose real object was to raise one man to power. When justice required the prosecution of M. Laguerre he would be prosecuted.

The old-fashioned armchair in which George Washington was inaugurated in 1789 will be used by Gen. Harrison during the ceremonies to-day. It belongs to E. H. Southwick of New York. The chair was used at the second inaugural of Grant and at the inaugural of Garfield.

General Boulanger at a reception which he gave to members of the Revisionist Committee and league of patriots yesterday denounced M. Tirard for striking down the latter organization.

M. Laguerre amid an uproar moved an order of the day condemning the prosecution of the league. The motion was rejected and the Chamber by a vote of 345 to 220 approved an order expressing confidence in the energy of the government.

The Pope's 79th Birthday.

ROME, March 3.—Yesterday was the 79th anniversary of the birth of the Pope. He received a number of cardinals, who tendered their congratulations. The Pope replying to the cardinals said it was impossible for him in the present position of the papacy to perform his duties at the head of the church in an independent manner. He complained of the delay in the granting of the royal exequatur to the Italian bishops and said his appointments were subject to scrutiny. He referred to the oppressions of the new penal code and the suppression of the funds of the fraternities. His Holiness was in splendid health and spoke vigorously.

ROME, March 3.—Signor Crispi has been charged with the formation of a new cabinet. He consulted with several political leaders to-day.

Hydrophobic Brains.

LONDON, March 3.—It is reported from St. Petersburg that the physiologist, M. V. Anrep, has succeeded in extracting from the brains and marrow of rabid rabbits poisons of an extremely poisonous character. The contradictory behavior of this poisons in great and small doses is singular. When given in small doses only does it give rise to symptoms of hydrophobia.

THE RAILWAY DISASTERS.

VERDICT OF THE CORONER'S JURY AT PARIS.

Engineer, Conductor and Company Censured—Nearly all the Injured at St. George Reported Out of Danger.

PARIS, March 3.—The inquest on the bodies of Isabella Law and Mary Law, the two victims of Friday night's collision at the station here, was terminated late last night. The main facts elicited were that the driver had never been over this branch of the road, that he had been advised his train might stop coming up this curve unless he gave her full steam, that he was running at a rate of twelve miles an hour and was unable to see the semaphore, which gave the track ahead to the other train, in time to slow up, so swift was his speed and so sharp the curve, and that he might have had a pilot if he had asked for one.

The jury brought in a verdict stating the circumstances and fatal result of the collision and adding their belief that:

The driver, Wm. Mapplebeck, not being acquainted with the grades and peculiarities of the said railway track, being a stranger thereto, should have applied for a pilot at Brantford to instruct him concerning said road, and the conductor, Joseph Reed, in charge of the train should have insisted upon a pilot being supplied when his engine driver was uncertain as to his knowledge of the track; and we also consider the Grand Trunk Railway Company should adopt more positive regulations for securing this object other than those appearing in the instructions filed in evidence. And the jurors aforesaid upon their oaths say from the evidence and examination of that portion of the road from the bridge over the Grand River on the Buffalo and Lake Huron division that the position and location of said semaphore and the arrangements for giving warning to the drivers of trains approaching from the direction of Brantford, both in the deep cut and the curve near Paris station, are not sufficient to protect the traveling public from the danger of collision, and the jurors aforesaid also condemn the practice of placing flat cars in immediate connection with passenger coaches.

THE INJURED AT ST. GEORGE.

Nearly All Out of Danger—The Bridge Repairs Completed.

ST. GEORGE, March 3.—The report of the medical staff to-night on the victims of the late accident is: W. Benedict, doing well; Mr. and Mrs. Marshall, Miss Chaffee, Mr. and Mrs. Beadles, Mr. McLaughlin, out of danger; Mrs. Jennings and May Jennings, doing favorably; Conductor Revell, very much better; Geo. Marquette, improving slowly; T. L. Doutney, doing favorably; J. McKinley, doing well; George Forbes, out of danger; Robert Hilton, improving; James Hyslop, not much improvement; Mr. Martin, doing favorably; Mrs. Sendall, doing well; Dr. Lequesne, a little more favorable; Miss Andrews, Miss McLeod, resting nicely.

The bridge repairs were completed Saturday in time to allow the Atlantic express to pass over at 2 p.m. This was quickly followed by a special from Detroit with a full complement of passengers bound for Washington to take part in the inauguration festivities.

No identification of the remains of the lady taken from the dining car has yet been made. The railway officials think from her appearance and dress that she is a foreigner.

The Funerals at Woodstock.

WOODSTOCK, March 3.—To-day the incidents in connection with the sad death of Reeve Francis and Councillors Dr. Swan and Jos. L. Pears, culminated in the consignment of their remains to the "narrow house appointed for all living." The deep sorrow of the whole community, which has flowed out so spontaneously and universally to the families of the deceased found vent to-day in what was without a doubt the most imposing spectacle ever witnessed in this town. Though the walking was about the worst that could be imagined, yet it is estimated that fully 1500 persons were in the cortege. The procession began at Old St. Paul's Church, at the extreme east of the town, where a short service had been held over the remains of Mr. Pears. Proceeding westward it was swelled at New St Paul's by a large concourse who had attended the service for Mr. Francis. It was next joined at the Methodist Church by those who were at the funeral of Dr. Swan, and slowly proceeded to the cemetery.

A large body of the 22nd Battalion turned out in honor of their deceased surgeon-major and fired a volley over his remains. In the cortege there were representatives of nearly every secret and benevolent society in the town, as well as the town and county councils and officials, and representatives of other municipal bodies. The whole town is heavily draped in mourning and all business operations were suspended for two hours.

Mayor Karn's Condition Critical.

WOODSTOCK, March 3.—Mayor Karn's condition is critical. Messrs. Knight and Peacock are both doing well and no serious results are anticipated. Mr. Martin's condition is still hopeful but not altogether satisfactory.

TOPICS FROM THE CAPITAL.

Sir Charles Tupper Talks on the Fisheries and Other Questions.

OTTAWA, March 3.—Sir Charles and Lady Tupper arrived at the Capital this afternoon and went directly to the residence of Hon. C. H. Tupper, where they will stay during their visit in Ottawa. Sir Charles is looking well. He said that he was here solely to give evidence in the Onderdonk arbitration and expects to return to England within two months to resume his official duties. "The American papers," added Sir Charles, "see much significance of various sorts in my visit, but I assure you they are mistaken."

Sir Charles saw Hon. Mr. Chapleau in Paris. The Secretary of State is much improved in health, but will not return before undergoing further treatment.

Regarding the negotiation of a commercial treaty with Spain in relation to trade between Canada and the Antilles, Cuba and Costa Rica, Sir Charles said the matter had been deferred for the present owing to the increase of the protectionist element in the Spanish Cabinet.

Sir Charles is hopeful of an early amicable settlement of the fisheries question but expects negotiations to be re-opened from Washington. There are no new developments in the Behring Sea fishery question. The appointment of Sir Julian Pauncefote as British Ambassador at Washington Sir Charles considers an excellent one.

"As to annexation," said Sir Charles, "the last question which I or those who come after me will ever see submitted to the consideration of the people of Canada will be the question of annexation to the United States."

Premier Mowat of Ontario, Hon. P. Garneau, representing the Province of Quebec, and Sir John Macdonald had a conference here to-day and came to an amiable basis for the settlement of the boundary question in the vast territory beyond the height of land and adjacent to Hudson Bay. This settlement does away with the necessity for litigation.

The following are the Customs decisions for the month of February:

Creolin, an antiseptic and disinfectant, 30 per cent.

Cotton wool, raw, dyed, not to include wadding, batting, batts or jewelers' wool, 30 per cent.

Iron, round rods, galvanized, 30 per cent.

Iron bars, galvanized, 30 per cent.

Ivory soap, 10 cents per pound and 10 per cent.

Preserved ginger, 1½ cents per pound and 35 per cent.

Shells, marine, ground and broken, 20 per cent.

Syrup of phosphates of iron, lime, potassa and soda, 30 per cent.

The New U. S. Cabinet.

NEW YORK, March 3.—The new cabinet will almost certainly consist of the following gentlemen:

Secretary of State—Mr. Blaine.
Secretary of Treasury—Mr. Windom.
Secretary of War—Mr. Proctor.
Secretary of Navy—Mr. Tracy.
Secretary of Interior—Mr. Noble.
Postmaster-General—Mr. Wanamaker.
Attorney General—Mr. Miller.
Secretary of Agriculture—Messrs. Rusk or Furness.

QUEBEC, March 3.—Mr. Belmer has successfully floated the Lake St. John Railway bonds in the English market. Ninety-six is said to be the figure obtained.

The Woodstock Mayoralty.

WOODSTOCK, March 3.—The quo warranto proceedings against the election of Mayor Karn have been dropped.

The Great Veteran's Last Vote.

WASHINGTON, March 3.—The President yesterday afternoon vetoed the Direct Tax Bill.

Diocesan Circular.

Bishop Dowling to the Clergy of Peterborough and Hamilton.

The following circular has been sent to the clergy of this diocese :—

To the Rev. Clergy of the Diocese of Peterborough :—

REVEREND AND DEAR FATHERS,—An official information from Rome, respecting changes in diocesan government, has at length arrived, I now beg to inform you officially, and to request you to inform the faithful committed to your care, that it has pleased our Holy Father, Pope Leo XIII., by Apostolic letters, dated January 11th, 1889, to translate me to the Episcopal See of Hamilton, and to appoint in my place the Right Reverend Richard Alphonsus O'Connor, as Bishop of Peterborough.

Whilst I readily submit to the desire and decision of our Holy Father, and recognise in the voice of the Vicar of Christ that of his Divine Master, I wish to state that my translation to Hamilton was effected without any desire whatever on my part. On the contrary, upon learning that my confreres in the hierarchy were urging the appointment, I hastened to inform the Holy See that I had no desire of change, as I was quite happy in Peterborough and deeply attached to the faithful priests and people of the diocese, who had always cordially and generously co-operated with me in all good works In reply to this letter, our Holy Father, through his eminence, Cardinal Simeoni, was graciously pleased to express to me his sympathy for me personally, and for the clergy and faithful of this diocese; adding, that after due deliberation, it seemed desirable to send me back to take charge of a diocese with whose wants I was supposed to be well acquainted, on account of my former long residence, experience and intimate knowledge of priests and people. Accordingly, however pained I may naturally feel at the thought of separation from a priesthood and people so endeared to me as the good exemplary clergy and faithful laity of this diocese, I feel, notwithstanding, that it is my duty to submit my will to that of the Chief Pastor of the Church of Christ, to whom our Lord has committed the care of His whole flock, Bishops, Priests and people. But whilst parting from you with regret and sorrow, I rejoice and thank God, that in the person of Monseigneur O'Connor, He has sent you a Bishop who is an old and devoted friend and college companion of mine, and one whom you will soon learn to love and revere as a prelate eminently qualified, by his virtues, learning and ability to rule with wisdom and prudence, the diocese over which the Holy Ghost has placed him as Chief Pastor.

Bishop O'Connor has been pleased to appoint me Diocesan Administrator until he assumes charge, and directs me to inform you that he has selected Wednesday, the 1st of May next, as the date of his Consecration, and that the Consecration will take place about 10 o'clock that morning in the Cathedral at Peterborough.

The Bishop further requests me to ask you, in your charity, to offer prayers to Almighty God in his behalf, that, (in his own words) "he may obtain the graces necessary to faithfully and zealously discharge the sacred and onerous duties of the episcopate." In accordance with his pious wish, therefore, the Clergy are hereby directed to say at Mass, until the installation is over, (as often as the rubrics permit,) the prayer to the Holy Ghost, to be found in the Mass "De Spiritu Sancto," and to recite with the faithful for the intention of the Bishop, every Sunday, immediately after Mass, the Litany of the Blessed Virgin.

In future, the clergy, when making a memento for the Bishop at the Canon of the Mass, are reminded to pronounce the name of the Bishop elect, viz. :—Richard Alphonsus.

The Clergy are also hereby informed that, by virtue of Apostolic Letters, dated January the 11th, 1889, they are to continue to exercise their ordinary faculties, (a printed copy of which will soon be forwarded to each of the diocesan priests.)

The rules and regulations for Lent, (a copy of which accompanies this circular), are the same as last year. This circular shall be read at Mass on Quinquagesima Sunday, or on the first Sunday after its reception. All applications for dispensations, &c., are to be sent to me, at Peterborough, until the installation of the Bishop elect.

Cordially thanking the good Priests and people of the Diocese of Peterborough for their constant kindness, generosity, and fidelity to me, hoping they may always extend the same to my successor, asking a share in their holy prayers, and promising, in return, often to remember them at the Altar, I pray God to bestow on you, Rev. and dear Father, and on the flock confided to your care, His choicest blessings.

Your faithful servant in Christ,

†THOMAS JOSEPH DOWLING,
Administrator of the Diocese of Peterborough.

IN HAMILTON.

A circular from Bishop Dowling was read at Mass in all the churches of the Diocese of Hamilton on Sunday, in which he says :

You are hereby officially informed, and respectfully requested to inform the faithful confided to your care, that it has pleased our Holy Father, Pope Leo XIII., by Apostolic Letters, dated January 11th, 1889, to translate me from the See of Peterborough, and to appoint me, without any merit on my part, Bishop of Hamilton.

This unmerited appointment, with its increased responsibilities, was not indeed sought by me, as I was quite happy in the discharge of less onerous duties here, and in my cordial relations with the clergy and people of Peterborough, who have from the beginning faithfully and generously co-operated with me in every work undertaken for the glory of God and the salvation of souls.

In going back to Hamilton, however, it is a consolation for me to know that I am not a stranger to the Diocese, that I am returning, as it were, to the home of my childhood—amongst kind and esteemed friends of the clergy and laity, endeared to me by a thousand holy and happy recollections; in a word, that I return to a Diocese associated with all the scenes and struggles of my priestly life, and to a Cathedral where I had the happiness of receiving ordination in August, 1864, from the hands of your first Bishop, and subsequently, Episcopal consecration at the hands of the late Archbishop of Toronto, on the 1st May, 1867.

As I left Hamilton on the 2nd of May, 1887, so, with the help of God, I shall return to you to be installed as your Bishop, on the anniversary of that event, viz., on the 2nd of May, 1889. The month of May, ever bright and beautiful, is doubly dear to Catholics as being, in the language of the faithful, the month of Mary.

Retiring from Business.

Owing to ill health we regret to say that Mr. John Braden is compelled to retire from the grocery business. By reference to his advertisement, the public will learn that he is selling his entire stock of the very freshest groceries, canned goods and provisions at cost. His sale will only last for two weeks. Everything must go as he is giving up immediate possession of his premises. d

A Forcible Fact.

Constipation is the most frequent cause of headaches, bad blood, humors, dizziness, vertigo, etc., and because of this should never be allowed to exist. It may be readily cured by using Burdock Blood Bitters, which never fails to cure even the most obstinate and chronic cases. 2w8d

TORONTO TOPICS.

A Big Timber Suit Settled—Bill Easby's $100 Bill Stolen While He Slept

TORONTO, March 4.—After ten days' hard fighting a settlement has been arrived at in the big timber suit of Scott v. Benedict. The limits in question are valued at half a million, and the terms of the agreement are practically that the plaintiff and, through Nelson & Co., have the right to redeem the property upon payment to the defendants and the Rathbun Company of $270,000. Each party is to pay their own costs. This settles probably one of the heaviest law suits that has occurred in Ontario for a decade, and which has been before the courts in one form or another during that time.

The World this morning says: "A claim will be set up that the Jesuit grant which has caused so much discussion should be portioned out among the Jesuits of the various provinces of the Dominion for the education of Roman Catholic youth. Ontario is likely to be the first to move in the matter. The position of Roman Catholic Ontario in the matter is simply this: When the Pope dissolved the Order of the Society of Jesus he in his bull declared expressly that the property held by the order in Quebec should be handed over to the ordinaries, that is the bishops, to be held in trust for the educational interests of Canada—not merely of Quebec. Is is on this clause that the Ontario claim is based. Of course as soon as the Ontario hierarchy is heard from it will be but a question of time when Manitoba, British Columbia and the Maritime Provinces will have something to say."

W. L. Palmer, a young man of 23 and Emma Wilson, an inmate of a house at 89 Richmond-street west, are in custody charged with having stolen a $100 bill from William Easby who lives in Vanauley-street. It appears that on Saturday Easby drew $300 from a bank and getting too much to drink was drawn into a game of matching in a poolroom, losing $80 at the rate of $2 a clip. Palmer, who had met him before, had induced him to go to 89 Richmond-street west where he "floated" the big bill and went to sleep. It is alleged that Palmer and the girl took the money from him while he was asleep and drove to Palmer's house, where the money was secreted, and then returned. When Easby discovered his loss he reported the matter to the police, with the result that last night Detective Burrows and Davis arrested Palmer in McGee's dive in York-street and the woman at the Richmond-street house. They found the bill at Palmer's home in Arthur-street.

CHAMPION O'CONNOR.

The Toronto Sculler Defeats Gaudaur at San Francisco.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 4.—The 3-mile boat race between Wm. O'Connor of Toronto and Jake Gaudaur of St. Louis for $1000 a side and the championship of America was rowed yesterday afternoon over the Alameda course, an arm of San Francisco bay, about 5 miles from this city. A stiff breeze was blowing and the water was rough. O'Connor won the choice for places and was given the inside course, where the water was much smoother than Gaudaur's course.

The men were sent away at 4 o'clock. O'Connor caught the water first. At the start both rowed 36 strokes per minute. About 300 yards from the starting point Gaudaur lost his stroke owing to rough water, but regained it and made a spurt till ten quarter was reached when he again lost the water and gave up the race. O'Connor steered somewhat wildly about the half-mile point but regained a straight course and made the turn, a mile and a half in 9 mins. and 20 secs. On the home stretch he quickened his stroke and made the starting point in 19 mins. and 45 secs., and was declared the winner.

Only a small crowd witnessed the race because of a report that the race was already "fixed." Outside money was offered on O'Connor with odds of 2 to 1 but there were few takers.

Eight "Good" Indians.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., March 3.—News has just reached here from Okeechobee of a bloody affray among the Seminole Indians in the Everglades. "Jim," a young buck, went crazy and with a Winchester rifle started on the warpath through the camp and settlement. He first sent a bullet through the brain of "Wauhoo Micco," chief of the Miamis, killing him instantly. He next killed "Old Tiger," "Young Tiger," a son of "Old Tiger" and probably the finest Seminole living, physically, stepped out of his wigwam just in time to see his father drop to the ground a corpse, and with a blood-curdling war whoop he sprang on the maniac and a hand-to-hand fight for the possession of the rifle followed. Tiger was the superior in strength but was at the wrong end of the gun and before he could wrest it from his antagonist he was shot dead. The maniac then killed two papooses of his sister and attacked bucks, squaws and children indiscriminately. He was finally cornered and shot dead by "Billy," another Seminole brave. In less than half an hour eight Indians were killed.

MUNCASTER'S

MISS TINSEL.

By HENRY SEDLEY.

The night was clear, the stars shining brightly, and the stream ran gurgling forward with a pleasant sound. Suddenly, as Harding strolled musing along the bank, some one touched him on the shoulder from behind; and turning, he beheld the "Blood Red Demon," Mr. Bellario. That gentleman wore a long cloak, tossed across his breast and left shoulder, and a slouched sombrero; and his white, pasty face wore a look of inscrutable mystery.

"Hist!" he enjoined in a stage whisper; "all is discovered!" Then he drew back, with finger on lip, as if to watch the effect of his revelation.

"What's the matter?" said Harding. "What do you mean?"

"Mean! Ha! ha!" and the "Demon" laughed witheringly. "He asks me what I mean! Mark me," proceeded he, with a sudden transition, "I know your secret!"

"Oh, you do, do you? Which one do you mean?" questioned Harding scornfully.

"I have neither time nor heart to trifle," said "Demon," waving his arm with an air of ineffable majesty. "I shall be brief and to the point."

"You'll very much oblige me."

"Enough. What prompts me to this midnight deed, 'twere bootless now to ask, and idle to reveal. Therefore to my tale. You are in love with Aurora—with Miss Tinsel?"

"By what right"——

"Spare your reproaches. I am in love with her too!"

"You?"

"Is that so strange?" Long ere you crossed our path I knew and loved her. But this is neither here nor there."

"I should think not."

"Professionally," continued the "Demon," with great dignity, "she is, of course, my inferior. Socially—well, you know, I think the damning family secret"——

"Whatever that may be, it is no sin of hers. I think you may wisely leave it a secret—so far, that is, as to omit crying it on the housetops."

"Save to yourself and Miss de Montague, no hint of the tragedy has passed my lips. But to the business between us"——

"My good sir," said Harding, with irritation, "I know of none, so far. If you have anything to say to me I'll listen. If not, I'll pass on."

"Ha! ha! ha!" laughed the "Demon," with bitter mockery. "I come to serve ye, and ye would spurn me from 'yer path! Poor, poor humanity! Why, why should I laugh when I should rather weep?"

"I don't know, I'm sure," answered Harding simply, "and I don't want to be uncivil. But it certainly isn't asking too much to want to know what you mean."

"No," responded the "Demon," with melodious sadness—"not too much. Though every word be torture, yet I will e'en go through the ordeal. Sir, what I have to say—and it cuts me to the heart to say it—is that this lady—this young girl—this Aurora Tinsel—is worthy of neither of us."

"What!"

"She is unworthy—lost—and capable of the worst deception!"

"That's false!"

"How, sir?"

"That's false. And you or any one else who says it is a liar!"

The "Demon" drew suddenly back, clapped his hand to an imaginary sword hung at his left side—and then thought better of it.

"Pshaw!" he exclaimed lightly, but keeping at a wary distance from Harding's reach. "Why should I yield to rage? My prowess is well known—and, after all, this worthy gentleman speaks in ignorance. Sir," he added, changing his tone with elaborate and chivalrous grace, "I speak of what I know, and speak only with the best of motives. But it is due to you that I offer to make good my words. I can absolutely prove that what I have said is true."

"Prove it, how?"

"By enabling you to witness for yourself that which justifies what I say."

"And you can do this?"

"Almost to a certainty, and probably this very night."

Harding hesitated. To take the course proposed seemed like doubt, and doubt was unworthy. To refuse to take that course might subject Jane to calumny, which he might on the other hand nip in the bud. Presently he spoke.

"What do you propose?"

"That you go with me at once, and judge for yourself. We may fail to-night, but if so, our success to-morrow will be all but certainty."

The man's air of conviction was impressive, and Harding, fearful, yet hoping that he might unearth some strange mistake or deception, agreed to the plan proposed. It was settled that the two should meet an hour later at the "Bella Union," and they parted now with that understanding. Bellario, however, took occasion before leaving his companion to make his insinuations so far specific as to tell him that Miss Tinsel had made the acquaintance of a certain handsome, dark eyed man, who had followed the troupe ever since it had last been at Bullion Flat; that this man evidently admired the girl very much, and that she had encouraged his advances in the most unmistakable manner; that she had gone so far as to receive her admirer at her room in the hotel, and that at so late an hour as to excite the censure of the not over prudish Miss De Montague; and that, in fine, Miss Tinsel's hitherto spotless name had been so tarnished by the events of the last fortnight as to make it certain none would ever again think her the pure girl she had always hitherto been held to be.

With the blood tingling through every vein, with nerves at extreme tension, and a heart full of bitterness, Chester Harding passed away. Something told him that the tale, black and dismal as it was, was likewise true. When Jane told him the story of her father's crime and its punishment, Harding felt as if there had fallen between him and his prospect of happiness a veil that made it look doubtful and unreal. The girl's firmness in telling him the truth, and the assertion of her opinion as to the proper bearing and consequence of that truth on her relations with Harding, had assuredly deeply impressed and comforted him. It was something to face, after all, and even in California, this wedding the child of a murderer and felon. Yet her own perfect goodness was the justification and would be the reward of such an act. But when Jane's goodness itself was in question it was no wonder that Harding's heart sank within him. He was no coward, but his experience had taught him distrust; and he waited for the stipulated hour to pass in an agony of doubt and pain.

The "Bella Union" had two long wings, perhaps thirty feet apart, running at right angles with its facade toward the rear. In the second story of one wing there were sleeping rooms. Both stories of the opposite wing were occupied by the theatre. The latter was quite dark, and hither Bellario conducted Harding after they had met in the saloon below.

"Be silent," whispered the "Demon," when they met—"be silent and follow."

Up two winding staircases, then through a long passage, and they stood in a gallery over the stage and directly facing the other wing.

"Look!" said the "Demon;" "he's there now!" He still whispered, for the night was hot and windows were everywhere open. Through one of these directly opposite Harding distinctly saw Miss Tinsel. She was talking earnestly with some one not in sight. Harding gazed breathlessly and listened. Presently a second figure came between the window and the light within. It was that of a tall, handsome man with dark eyes. He replied to the girl with earnestness equal to her own, but in tones as carefully suppressed. As the eyes of the observers got used to the situation, they descried a bed on the further side of the room. On this Miss Tinsel, after a time, sat down. The man followed and seated himself by her side. A moment or two more, and he took both her hands and clasped them in his own. They still talked, obviously with deep feeling, and at last Miss Tinsel threw her arms around her companion's neck and kissed him.

"Enough," hoarsely exclaimed Harding. "Enough—and more than enough!"

"You'll wait no longer?" asked the other.

"Not an instant. Can't you conceive, man—you who profess yourself to have cared for her—what a hell this is?"

"I've been through it before," muttered the "Demon," "and the wound isn't quite so fresh."

They descended in silence to the saloon, and there Harding spoke more freely:

"See here—you've saved me from a great peril—and although I think I had rather you had shot me outright, you deserve no less gratitude. If you want help—money—for instance"——

The "Demon" waved his hand in lofty refusal.

"As Claude Melnotte says, sir, I gave you revenge—I did not sell it. There are better men than I in the world, and lots of them. But I try to do as I would be done by—at least in a scrape like this. I wish you good night, and I hope you'll take comfort. After a little it'll seem easier to you. Certainly the ill news should come easier even now than it would afterward. As Othello says, 'Tis better as it is.'"

The First Case.

One case of diphtheria, the first of the kind since last fall, was reported to Medical Health Officer Dr. Clarke on Sunday from Donegal street. The house was placarded and every precaution taken to prevent the contagion from spreading.

Assigned.

Messrs. Porter Bros., carriage builders, have made an assignment to Mr. R. H. Fortye. A meeting of the creditors is called for Friday, March 15th, at 2.30 p m., at Messrs. Hatton & Wood's law office.

Important Meeting.

The regular monthly meeting of the Peterborough Branch of the Land League will take place to-morrow (Tuesday) evening at 8 o'clock in the Murray street Separate School, when arrangements will be completed for the concert and lecture on the 17th, March.

Willow and Wicket.

A meeting of the Cricket Club was held Saturday evening. Mr. S. Ray was elected captain and Mr. W. A. Stratton, vice-captain, the two to have the power of selecting teams for matches. It was also decided to recommend the Association to re-engage Mr. Harry Day as groundsman, the club agreeing to pay him for his services as coach.

Curling Under Difficulties.

The soft spell has put a damper upon curling, as the rink of juniors who went to Millbrook Saturday know to their sorrow. They received a terrible drubbing. The water was dripping through the roof of the rink and most of their stones fell short. Their opponents were all seniors. The Peterborough juniors are looking forward to a return match when the ice is in good condition to recover their laurels, which they feel confident of doing. The score of Saturday's game was 21 to 6 against the visiting rink, which was composed of V. McGill, E. A. Pearson, J. Crane and W. F. Hamilton, skip.

A Wise Precaution.

Messrs. Wilson and Morrison received the following letter from St. John's, N. B., written by a member of a Toronto firm: "SIRS.—Enclosed find my application for $10,000 in the Manufacturer's Accident Ins. Co. I did not intend to put this on until I saw you, but that terrible accident in Western Ontario makes me feel that railroading is getting to be a pretty dangerous business. These men from Woodstock who were killed were coming to Toronto on our business." * * * See Mr. Joseph McClelland who has charge of our accident department for full particulars as to rates.

Exhibition Directors.

A meeting of the directors of the Central Exhibition was held Saturday afternoon at the Morgan House. President Rutherford occupied the chair, and there were present Messrs. Fair, Tully, Morgan, Fitzgerald, Matchett, Elliott and Bapti. The date of the spring show was changed from April 13th, to April 27th. The Secretary, Mr. Wm. Collins, was instructed to write the Belleville Association asking them to change the date of the Bay of Quintie exhibition to the 1st week in Oct. so as not to clash with the Peterborough Central Exhibition, which will this year be held on the old dates, Sept. 24 to 27, but which the Belleville men have also selected. In any case the dates of the Peterborough show will not be altered, the directors considering that they have a right to them. The directors meet again on the day of the spring show.

News Nuggets.

—A couple of lads who were arrested by Chief Ressel Sunday for acting disorderly on the street, were dismissed with a warning by the police magistrate this morning.

—"Laboring Jack" Sullivan was again up for drunkenness. John promised that it should be his last offence of the kind in town, and, on agreeing to leave for the lumbering chanties at once, was let go.

Personal.

Mr. John Miller, B.A. of Toronto, spent Saturday and Sunday in town.

Mr. C. A. Mitchell, of Gildersleeve's agency, Kingston, and Mr. J. Cunningham, purser of the steamer Norseman, spent Sunday with Mr. G. H. Allen inspector of the Standard Life Assurance Co., town.

The many friends of Mrs. Louis Laplante will be pleased to learn that her condition has greatly improved, and that she is recovering as speedily as can be expected under the circumstances.

A GREAT CASE CONCLUDED

The Scott-Benedict Timber Limit Case Settled.

A Victory for the Peterborough Syndicate—A Great Chance for Peterborough—A Cut of Ten Millions a Year For Twenty Years to be Diverted From Peterborough.

The now celebrated case, Scott vs. Benedict, which involved the title to one hundred and forty square miles of timber limit in this county, after years of costly litigation, was on Saturday night settled by mutual arrangement between the several parties to the suit. The settlement gives the limits in question to the Peterborough Syndicate, composed of Messrs. Geo. A. Cox, J. B. McWilliams and T. G. Haslitt. A brief sketch of the case will not be without interest.

The late W. A. Scott owned extensive timber limits in this county, situated in the townships of Cavendish, Harvey and Sherbourne, consisting of about 140 square miles, or 90,600 acres. They are considered, in point of quality of timber, convenience of working and accessibility to market, to be the most valuable timber limits in the province. In 1871 Mr. Scott's mind became unbalanced. He gave a bill of sale of the limits in question to J. Benedict & Son, Albany. The limits formerly stood in the name of Walter Scott, father of W. A. Scott, and when the former assigned his interest in the limits to W. A. Scott, there was a balance due of $27,000 of purchase money. In November, 1871, Walter Scott died, before the balance of purchase money was paid. Then the heirs entered suit to have the claim of the father to $27,000 interest in the limits, recognized as having priority to the claim of the Benedicts. This suit occupied the courts for a number of years, passing through various stages till which decided that the Benedicts had a first mortgage, and that the Scotts had the right of redemption. Subsequently the agents of Messrs. Rathbun & Co., Deseronto, came to Mr. J. B. McWilliams, as a friend of the Scott family, authorizing Mr. McWilliams to give the sum of $15,000 to the Scotts for their interest in the equity of redemption. Before anything was settled in this respect, the Benedicts issued an execution on account of a small amount of costs incurred in previous litigation, and endeavoured to force the Sheriff to sell out the Scotts' interests for $100. Mr. McWilliams was present and forbade the sale, which the Sheriff adjourned. Mr. McWilliams notified Mr. Thomas H. Scott of the circumstances and he applied to Chief Justice Wilson, who set aside the execution. Then Mr. McWilliams made a personal examination of the limits, and, finding that they were valuable, he, with Messrs. Geo. A. Cox and T. G. Haslitt, agreed to purchase the limits from Mr. Scott for $250,000. The Benedicts refused to be redeemed, and legal proceedings were set in motion, which led up to the present suit, which has been before the courts since the fall of 1887. The two wealthy firms representing the defendants employed all the means which their great financial resources and the best legal talent comprised. On their side were ranged the great law firms represented by Hon. Ed. Blake, Q.C., Charles Moss, Q.C., and Mr. Dalton McCarthy, Q.C. The trial which ended in a settlement suggested by the defence, on Saturday night has occupied the time from Feb. 20th to March 2, plaintiff's evidence taking eight days. By the settlement the plaintiffs abandon the insanity plea and retained the right to redeem the limits. This agreement finally and forever settles the case, all parties to the suit signing the judgment based upon the agreement arrived at.

The importance of this decision to Peterborough, aside from the personal interests involved, will be of the greatest. The Peterborough syndicate are placed in possession of timber limits whose value is placed—at the lowest expert estimate at half a million dollars and at the highest estimate at a million of dollars. The limits admit of at least a cut of ten millions per year for twenty years. To meet the demands of manufacturing this timber in Peterborough new mills will have to be added to the present cutting capacity.

There was a big array of legal luminaries engaged in the case. For the plaintiffs:—Attorney-General Mowat, Q. C., W. R. Meredith, Q. C., John Bain, Q. C., A. P. Poussette, Q. C., Geo. H. Watson and Thomas Langton. For the defendants:—Hon. Edward Blake, Q. C., Hon. S. H. Blake, Q. C., B. B. Osler, Q. C., Charles Moss, Q.C., Walter Barwick and —, Wickham. The local aspect of the case was very industriously worked up by Mr. Poussette, and his success in the case is no little triumph.

Church Chimes.

Sunday evening Rev. Mr. Torrance preached in the Charlotte Street Church, Rev. Mr. Shorey in the Baptist Church, and Rev. Mr. Parker in St. Paul's.

Miss Vair took the solo in a very pretty anthem at St. Paul's Church Sunday night.

Rev. Mr. Farncomb, of Lakefield, conducted the services in St. Luke's Church, Ashburnham, Sunday, exchanging pulpits with the curate-in-charge, Rev. Mr. Warren, who officiated in St. John's Church, Lakefield.

The services in St. John's Sunday night were largely attended. Rev. Mr. Kenrick preached the sermon having special reference to the services and duties of the Lenten season. The services for Lent as announced will be published later. A fine anthem composed by Mr. Seward, trio and chorus, "Sun of thy Soul," was sung at the evening service.

Special services during Lent were announced at St. Peter's Cathedral Sunday. Ash Wednesday, the first day, there will be masses at 7, 8 and 10 o'clock, and services on every Wednesday and Friday evenings during the Lenten season.

Next Thursday is St. Thomas' day, the patron saint of the schools, and at eight o'clock mass will be said by the Bishop and a chorus of 300 school children will sing.

On Sunday, the 17th of March, Rev. Father Cotey, of Paris, will preach in St. Peter's Cathedral at 10.30 o'clock and Bishop Dowling in the evening. The masses will be celebrated as usual.

Dr. Kincaid Removed.

The EXAMINER learns with deep regret that Dr. Kincaid has ceased to be a citizen of Peterborough. On Saturday the doctor made his farewells to a few of his friends and on Sunday morning took the train for the west. The reasons which led to his departure are these. The Doctor found that it would be impossible for him to continue his practice here in the face of financial embarrassment which were becoming so pressing that he would soon have to suspend payment and being unable by virtue of his professional position, to make an assignment in the ordinary way, he decided to remove to a field where he could pursue his practice under more favourable conditions. He found that the large sums he had spent upon the four hundred acres of practically waste land which he reclaimed at great expense, and the consequent injury to his practice, placed him in a position of practical bankruptcy, and he took the step which he hopes will ultimately enable him to clear up old scores. He was accompanied by his son "Keany," and the rest of the family will follow as soon as Dr. Kincaid is permanently settled and established in practice. Dr. Kincaid has been a resident of Peterborough for twenty-eight years, and during that time he has enjoyed an extensive practice and filled a prominent place in the public arena, having occupied the position of an Independent representative for the two parliamentary terms following the death of Mr. W. A. Scott.

THE SPIRITUAL CAMPAIGN.

Opened by Messrs. Crossley and Hunter.

Introductory Services by the Renowned Evangelists—"Peterborough for Jesus" their motto—Large Attendance at their Sunday Meetings.

A bright and beautiful day was Sunday, and in it there was a pleasing augury of the spiritual success of the work begun by evangelists Messrs. Crossley and Hunter, in Peterborough on that day. The two gentlemen arrived in town Saturday evening and were met at the station by a deputation of Christian workers. Sunday morning they occupied the pulpits of the Methodist and Presbyterian churches, Mr. Crossley in St. Paul's and Mr. Hunter in the George street church, assisted by the respective pastors of these churches. Large congregations attended both services, and were visibly affected by the stirring appeals of the revivalists.

Nearly everyone has heard of Messrs. Crossley and Hunter before, and the marvellous results of their evangelistic work. This can scarcely be wondered at when the men are known. Plain, earnest talkers, their lofty purpose shining out through their spiritually refined faces, their quiet enthusiasm takes hold of the people with irresistible force and moves hundreds to the mercy seat. Their manner is peculiarly affecting—undemonstrative but firmly impressive of the truths they speak. Mr. Crossley is also a splendid singer—indeed he has been termed the Sankey of Canada.

At the George Street Church.

As Mr. Hunter announced, the Sunday morning services were preparatory to the several weeks of evangelistic labor that are to follow. It was necessary, he said, to get the people in sympathy with and deeply interested in this movement, else very little could be accomplished. He asked the prayers of the people for the divine blessing upon their labors, and if these were freely given he firmly believed that Peterborough would experience such a revival as it never had before. Following out this line, he made a short address upon prayer, first reading the 21st chapter of Revelations from the 21st verse, pointing out the glory of the heavenly kingdom in contrast with this world. Mr. Hunter is the younger of the two men, of slight build, dark moustache, and having a clear ring in his voice that is capable of every modulation in order to make his words effective. His text was the 16th verse of the 5th chapter of St. James: "Pray ye one for another." The speaker urged the necessity of prayer as a power towards the conversion of the unsaved, and related several incidents where persons who had been lifelong sinners had been saved apparently directly through the intercession of christian relatives or friends with God. It was pointed out that prayer was always answered, as often by no as by yes for our own good, and sometimes God took 20 years to work out an answer to prayer, but it always came. Men should have faith in God and not be discouraged by delay. Let every Christian pray for the conversion of the unsaved in Peterborough, and their prayers would surely be answered.

In speaking of death, Mr. Hunter said it had no terrors for him. It was not a monster to be dreaded. "Why, to me," he said, "the grave is but a toilet-room where I shall dress for glory." Explanatory of the passage, "Though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death," he laid special stress upon the word walk, as implying that death was not a thing to be hurried from, and pointing out that a valley was usually a beautiful place, and could have no shadow in it unless there was light to make it.

At St. Paul's.

Rev. H. T. CROSSLEY dropped the gospel net into the sea of sin in Peterborough the first time on Sunday morning. The large auditorium of St. Paul's Church was well filled on the occasion. Promptly at eleven o'clock the evangelist, accompanied by the pastor of the church, stepped upon the pulpit platform. Mr. Crossley is a medium-sized, fair-complexioned man, with aquiline features. He wears a fall brown beard, cut short, and his brown hair shows signs of retreating from his forehead before the advance of years. Mr. Crossley has a pleasant voice, which, however, has, at times, an unpleasant nasal twang, suggestive of recent association with our Yankee cousins. Hardly had he taken his seat, when he rose, and, raising his right hand, the congregation bowed their heads and the preacher uttered a brief, simply-worded, fervent prayer. Then the choir led the singing of the 27th Psalm. Then Rev. Mr. Torrance read the first lesson, Genesis, xxviii, from the 23rd verse, and Gen., xxxii, from the 24th verse. Mr. Crossley read the second lesson, St. John's Gospel, chap. xxi, interpolating the reading with comments delivered in a terse, simple, colloquial style, and he deduced from the lesson the motto for the coming evangelistic services, "I go a fishing," and 'we' follow.

"The effectual, fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much."—St. James, v, 16. This was the verse announced as his text. He said that, in relation to his text and in respect to these services, there were four classes. The first thought that all success was to be accomplished by work. These were half wrong and half right. Work without God's blessing was vain. The second trusted all to the Lord and did nothing themselves. Half wrong and half right. Third, those who trusted all to the Lord, and the fourth, those who worked as though all depended on themselves, and prayed as though all depended on God. If people prayed as they ought, there was no doubt as to the results. Prayer was defined as simply talking to God. It was often enquired how God could hear and answer prayer. The telephone was used as an explanation of the mode of communication between God and man. Through the earth there was a great telephonic system connecting God and man. All could have their telephone at home and communicate with God at the head office. The essence of prayer was God's willingness to hear, and what was worth having was worth asking for. It was no remarkable thing that God should answer prayer. If parents gave good gifts to their children for the asking it was nothing remarkable that God should answer prayer—it was perfectly natural. The text specified two conditions of the efficacy of prayer. The petitioner should be righteous. If we regarded iniquity in our hearts God would not hear us. The second was that the prayer should be fervent, as the French version had it (faite avec zele). "inwrought," or as the etymology of the word—fervus, "I breathe," implied, the "inbreathed" prayer, the desire, breathed into the heart by God and breathed out again in prayer to God. Prayer assumed three forms—the desire of faith, the agony of faith and the assurance of faith. We should open our hearts that God might work righteousness therein. The ear should be always open to the voice of God and then we should breathe out the desires in prayer that would avail. The speaker stated that Elijah had a divine right to pray that its would not rain for three years and six months for God inspired his prayer. This was not the only law of prayer. Their were certain promises empowering us to pray for those things not divinely impressed upon the heart. The speaker gave specific instances of the effect of persons opening their hearts in prayer, and he urged upon all classes of the congregation to pray for their relatives and friends—their fathers and mothers, brothers and sisters, wives and husbands. Fervent prayer was the secret of revivals. A special and pathetic appeal was made to the unconverted to give themselves to God.

At this point the speaker asked the congregation to bow themselves in silent prayer while he urged them to open their hearts to God and to take some person upon their souls in prayer, and a strong appeal was made to the unconverted to yield at the very first meeting, which was the best and earnest time.

After the singing of the hymn "Jerusalem the Golden" the large congregation dispersed.

The Joint Meeting.

At night the George street church was crowded to overflowing. By a quarter to seven o'clock standing room only was available, and before the service opened there was a vast congregation in attendance. Probably nearly 1800 people crowded into the church and many turned away unable to gain admittance. Rev. M. L. Pearson was on the platform, and before the services closed, Rev. Messrs. Wilson, Parker, Torrance and Shorey also arrived. Mr. Crossley sang several hymns during the evening in an affecting manner, the choir joining in some of the choruses.

Mr. HUNTER first explained the position he and Mr. Crossley occupied. They had their own way of doing things, and if the people were not pleased, it could not be helped. He urged his hearers not to go away in a critical frame of mind and determine to not attend any more of these meetings. As soon as they became better acquainted with the people, they would be better understood, and then they would see scores of unconverted coming forward seeking pardon for their sins. "If anyone says we don't do any good," Mr. Hunter said, "tell them they lie. That's it—they lie." He referred them for proof to Belleville, Picton, Cobourg and Port Hope, from which places special trains were to be run out to Peterborough with people who had been saved as much as two years ago. He and his comrade, Mr. Hunter said, had engagements ahead for two or three years, and they had been coming to Peterborough for a couple of years, but at last here they were, and by the grace of God they were going to accomplish a great work.

He read as a lesson the 5th chapter of Luke, beginning at the 17th verse, narrating the extraordinary means adopted by four men in order to secure the cleansing of a leper by letting him down through the housetop into the midst of the people assembled before Jesus. "Some people say," he said, "Oh, I dont believe in revival meetings. That's just where you and the devil agree. You say you don't believe in these extraordinary means of grace. Now, if the ordinary means fail, I say use the extraordinary. If you can't get a man to Christ one way, get him there by some other way." The faith of these men in the Testament story was rewarded. They had sympathy for the poor leper; and that was what the church needed to-day—sympathy.

Mr. CROSSLEY, for the benefit of those who had lost little ones, sang "Papa, Come this Way," being a call from a child in heaven to its father.

Prayers were offered for a number of seeking ones who had made the request that they be prayed for, and Mr. Hunter asked any who had friends they wished prayed for to send their request in to any of the ministers or himself, by postoffice, collection plate or otherwise. They were always anxious to pray for erring ones.

FOUR CHARACTERISTICS.

Mr. CROSSLEY then addressed the congregations, his subject being four characters, who, he said, were largely represented before him, and would therefore, he hoped, be applied to themselves by those who resembled these characters. His text was the first verse of the first Psalm:—"Blessed is the man that walketh not in the counsel of the ungodly, nor standeth in the way of sinners, nor sitteth in the seat of the scornful." The four characters were the ungodly, the sinner, the scorner and the happy or blessed man. Elaborating upon his theme, he named those who come under the heading of the ungodly—first, the moralist whose outward life is an exemplary as that of the constant Christian, but who was no more like the Christian than bank currency was like the real gold. Currency is only good in certain countries where it is circulated, but gold was accepted the world over. So the moralist, in going to that great country to which he must sooner or later journey, never to return, in taking only his moral character with him, took currency that would be worthless, and he would be bankrupt before the bar of eternity; while if he were a Christian his genuine gold would be accepted at par, he would find himself an heir of God and joint heir with Christ. Morality relates to time only, but Christianity has regard for time and eternity as well. A moralist always says, "Oh, what's the harm" in a social glass, a game of cards or a parlor dance. The Christian has more sense and sake, "what's the good of these things?" and turns to that which is excellent and pure. "Make up your mind you are not going to be contented with morality," Mr. Crossley urged. The second character was the sinner, the open, shameless sinner who gloried in his wickedness. Sinners all say, "Oh, I'm not so very bad," while they see the sins of others more than their own. But the sinner is less of the hypocrite than the moralist, and more easily reached by the gospel. What meant "standing in the way of sinners?" Having a "jolly good time;" keeping company with sinners—"there are many ladies in this congregation," he said, "who keep company with men who are wicked sinners and you cannot but be contaminated by them;" the inconsistency of professing Christians, and their inactivity and want of interest in church work; backsliders, who are a reproach to the cause of Christ; the moralist, who creates a false ideal of life and allures others from the path of right—all these things stood in the way of sinners being brought to Christ. Sinners often stood in one another's way, too.

After a song. "Sinner, the Saviour is calling for you," Mr. Crossley took up the third character, the scorner. He implored scoffers at religion as they valued their souls not to jest with sacred things. It was one of the most terrible sins. Who was the happy man? He whose delight was not in any of these things but in the love and light of Jesus. Mr. Crossley said some christians constantly wore a lugubrious look and so caricatured religion. A christian should be overflowing with joy and show it in his daily walk. Gloomy christianity led young people to imagine that religion was a sad, depressing experience. Not so, he said, make our religion as happy as the day is long. Then the christian was happy in death—as the flower of his life fades away or the river of his life glides out into the vast ocean of eternity, so the christian dies well. He is happy forever. Mr. Crossley urged his hearers to live righteous lives that they might receive their just reward. In conclusion he related the pathetic incidents of a death scene which moved many to tears.

After the regular service an aftermeeting was held for the benefit of awakened sinners seeking salvation, at which many remained.

SOON.

Messrs. Crossley and Hunter are boarding at Mrs. Wilson's, Harvey street.

Tuesday afternoon from three to four o'clock a meeting of Christian workers will be held in the Baptist church, and on Thursday in some other church to be announced later.

The order of services was considerably altered by the evangelists on Sunday. They follow no regular routine.

The musical part of the services this week in the George street church will be interesting. Accommodation has been provided for a union choir of about 70, under the leadership of Mr. W. H. Dingle, and it is intended to make the singing a special feature. Crossley and Hunter's song books will be used.

The committee of management have determined to allow no overcrowding at these meetings. As soon as the church becomes comfortably filled the doors will be locked and no one will be admitted. Those who wish to attend had therefore better be on hand early.

An excursion train will be run out from Belleville shortly. The Bay City people have not yet lost their interest in the revivalists who accomplished so much good there last year.

Sunday afternoon a largely attended meeting of Christian workers was held in the Charlotte Street Church. Ways and means were discussed and a plan of campaign adopted for the coming services.

The meetings throughout the week begin at a quarter to eight sharp. Messrs. Crossley and Hunter make the request that there be no interruption whatever by talking or moving about after they begin.

Soiled Doves in Court.

There was great excitement around the police station this morning. Fully two hundred men and boys had gathered to witness the trial of a couple of girls who had been arrested in a house on Cedar street early Sunday morning by Chief Ressel and staff, charged with being inmates of a house of ill-fame. When the doors were opened at ten o'clock the mob struggled and swayed and crushed up the narrow staircase, but their morbid taste for the sensational was doomed to be disappointed. The order came to clear the court, and everyone except those interested in the case had to leave. William Sanderson, who was captured Sunday afternoon by P.C. McGinty after a lively chase from the arcade to the river, was charged with being a frequenter. He pleaded not guilty, and had as counsel Mr. W. H. Moore. The girls pleaded guilty and gave their names as Annie Moore, of Buckhorn, and Frances St. Clair, from England. They were both dowdyish looking females, the former with a sallow face that had apparently not had a close acquaintance with water for a couple of days, Frances younger and better looking, but with a defiant, de'il-may-care manner that ill became her almost childish face. Annie was the more impressionable of the two, and when the magistrate spoke to them in a kindly way of the terribleness of their sin and its consequences, she burst out sobbing and was ready to promise anything, while her companion laughed jeeringly and said to her: "Shut up, you fool; quit your crying." The girls—or rather Annie, who did the talking for both—said that they did not keep an improper house as a rule, but were only living in that way until they could get positions. She said that on Saturday they both engaged with a couple of ladies to go out to service, and they were prepared to renounce the error of their ways and become respectable members of society. It seems they formerly kept houses on Water and Simcoe streets before moving out to the west. They were given one month in gaol each, the magistrate said, in order that they might reflect upon their past conduct, and at the end of their terms, if they wished, no doubt they could get positions as domestics and lead better lives. Annie sobbed violently as she went below, while the flippant Frances' smile of scorn indicated that her punishment would have little good effect upon her. Sanderson was convicted on the girls' evidence, and was fined $20. It seems he acted as general property man, renting the houses for the girls, and buying their provisions and liquors.

TURNBULL'S

The Flood of the Season's French and English Printed Calicoes is rolling in—white capped and aglow phosphorescent, color play. How the Priscellas of the past would joy to see them? Pretty as you have seen them, they were never so handsome before. Persian designs, leaves, buds, flowers, polka, dots, plain stripes, scrabbles and scrawls, angles and tangles. More than 300 different styles, small figures, large figures, and mourning designs, better printing was never done 'exquisite.' If you don't want to buy, don't pass the window or come in. Prices range from 6 to 15 cents.

The trouble with low grade Marseilles Bed Spreads has been loose threads at the back—lace, all right, but you didn't like the fiddle-string arrangement at the back, needn't. Here are $2.50 Marseilles Bed Spreads, full size and handsome patterns, with backs firm and well finished. Look at this honey-comb quilt for $1, which needs no apology for either size or weight.

Flannelettes—what are they? Are they all-wool? No they are mostly cotton, finished to imitate Flannel, and especially adapted for childrens' dresses and ladies' wrappers. They consist of Cream Grounds, with pink, blue and cardinal Stripes, blue and white, pink and cream, pink and blue, and pink, cream and grey, some 18 patterns in all—the best quality being only 12½ cents a yard.

Opened out this week, a line of Linen Tablings, the maker of which is noted the world over. They are specially suited for every day wear—the warp is well twisted and they wash and iron well.

Thirty Years Paying Rent in Peterborough.

I frequently hear statements akin to above, followed by remarks of deep regret for having missed many golden opportunities of buying whole lots at a price they would now have to pay for one foot of the same land. Buying property in Peterborough is the safest kind of a safe and profitable investment. I have at present cheap homes, medium class homes and a few exceedingly fine Residences and grounds some of which were built for home comforts, regardless of cost. Uncontrollable circumstances have now caused those to be offered for immediate sale much under value. I commence at $473, for good house and large lot. I can suit any reasonable buyer. TOPICS FROM THE CAPITAL

A CRUSH AT THEIR EXCELLENCIES' FIRST STATE BALL.

Brief Session of the House—The Member for Annapolis' Scheme for the Annexation of Maine.

OTTAWA, March 4.—The features of the Capital to-day were a very brief session of the House, the appearance of Sir Charles Tupper in public and the state ball at Government House this evening. The House adjourned at 6 o'clock to give the members time to get ready for the spectacle at Rideau Hall.

There has been no small amount of dissatisfaction over the list of invitations to the ball. The press gallery does not of course feel sore because they are overlooked. That is a yearly occurrence in connection with festivities at the gubernatorial residence in Ottawa. But there is any amount of soreness among some forty members of Parliament who were overlooked this time. Others did not receive their invitation cards until late this evening and they had almost given up the hope of receiving them. Just how the oversight occurred is not at present known, but it is said His Excellency's aide, who had charge of the invitations, made a sad bungle of his task, overlooking those who were entitled to go and sending more than one card to others who were barely eligible.

There was a terrible crush at the ball. Toronto, Hamilton, London and other western towns were represented by a sprinkling of society people.

The House sat for about 2½ hours this afternoon and disposed of routine business. Mr. Girouard withdrew his bill to incorporate the Ottawa and Montreal Boom Company, as he saw the measure was objectionable to not only the Government but almost the entire House.

Sir John Macdonald told Mr. Mulock that the Government had decided at last to allow the allowance to the York and Simcoe battalion. The Premier also informed Mr. Mulock that 3½ years' interest would be added to the allowance, as the battalion ought to have been paid the money in December, 1885, at the same time the 10th Royals of Toronto received theirs. Col. O'Brien, Col. Denison of Toronto, and Col. Tyrwhitt have been energetic in inducing the Government to make this allowance.

In the Banking and Commerce Committee this morning, Mr. Edgar's bill incorporating the Canadian Assets and Debentures Company came up for consideration in its amended condition and, after discussion, passed. The most prominent amendments to the original bill are the striking out of the founders' share clause and the clause authorizing the company to receive money on deposit.

Mr. Kirkpatrick's act to incorporate the Canadian General Trusts Company was also considered. The incorporators are Geo. W. Stephen, C. A. Goffrow, T. Drummond, J. L. Morris, J. Crothers, E. K. Greene, C. M. Holt, F. H. Chrysler, D. B. Maclennan and G. M. MacDonnell. The rights asked for in the bill were refused by the Quebec Legislature. It was explained that discussion upon the principle of the bill would have to take place in the House and it was decided to report it.

In the Railway Committee to-day Sir Hector Langevin asked that the bill incorporating the St. Helen's Island Bridge Company should be postponed. Mr. Curran said he had been asked by the City Council and Board of Trade of Montreal to oppose the bill.

The bill extending the time for the commencement of the railway within three years of the Hamilton Central Railway Company was passed. An act changing the name of the Lake Nipissing and James' Bay Railway Company to the Nipissing and James' Bay Railway Company and in various other ways amending the act of incorporation was passed. Dr. Hickey's bill incorporating the Ottawa, Morrisburg and New York Railway and Bridge Company was reported with a number of amendments.

The act to amend the act incorporating the Kingston, Smith's Falls and Ottawa Railway Company was considered. Hon. George Kirkpatrick explained that the contemplated line would run from Kingston to Smith's Falls and from thence to Ottawa. Kingston and Smith's Falls would grant bonuses and efforts were being made to induce the adjacent township to do this also. It was intended to commence work next year. It was decided by the committee that the railway should be commenced within two years from June next and completed within five years from the same date.

Mr. Daly's bill to incorporate the Lac Seul Railway was reported.

Mr. John A. Grose, who lately resigned his position in the Customs Department, has commenced an action against Messrs. Walters and MacMichael, Toronto, of that service for the recovery of a portion of the proceeds of certain seizures and confiscations in which he claims he should have shared. Mr. Curran, M.P., is acting for Mr. Grose.

The Minister of Public Works informed Sir Richard Cartwright to-day that from July 1, 1888, to Feb. 1, 1889, there had been expended for plants and organization of the printing bureau $62,984 and on the building to Feb. 1 last, $129,946. It is hoped this bureau will improve the public printing of the country. Typographically the blue books and other public documents that have been turned out under the contract system have been a standing disgrace to the art preservative in the Dominion. One of these contractors grew immensely wealthy by getting top prices for slop work that would disgrace any back township printing office in the country.

Mr. Mills of the salt water County of Annapolis, N.S., put an extraordinary notice in the paper this evening. He believes he sees in the near future the dissolution of the federation known as the United States and the setting up of foreign powers in the New England States which might imperil British interests on this continent. He therefore asks the House to pass resolutions empowering the Governor-General to co-operate with Her Majesty's Government in securing such an assessment to the Act of British North America as may be necessary to extend the boundaries of the Dominion of Canada so as to include portions of the New England States, such boundaries, however, not to be extended in a westerly direction beyond the Connecticut River, the Green Mountains and Lake Champlain. Mr. Mills also graciously proposes that Canada assume the debts of the states which he proposes to absorb.

Sir John Macdonald gave notice this evening of a resolution providing that any member of the Northwest Mounted Police Force other than a commissioned officer, may receive a pension for life provided he joined the force subsequent to May 23, 1873, and completed 25 years' service, or if having completed 15 years he retires in consequence of bodily or mental infirmity.

The following order-in-council was passed Saturday:

His Excellency-in-Council has been pleased to order, and it is hereby ordered, that the special rate of toll of two cents per ton, adopted last year for the passage through the Welland and St. Lawrence canals, of certain cereals, wheat, Indian corn, peas, barley and rye, when shipped for Montreal or for any other port east of Montreal, be continued during the forthcoming season of navigation and no longer, such toll covering the Welland and the St. Lawrence canals.

TORONTO TOPICS.

"Settling Day"—An L. C. C. Boy Presented With a Humane Society Medal.

TORONTO, March 5.—Yesterday was settling day. Enquiries at the wholesale houses revealed a more encouraging state of affairs than last year. The dry goods trade have met their payments very promptly, and there are reports of but few applications for renewals. In the hardware trade a similarly encouraging state of things is reported. Boot and shoe payments are quite up to expectations. Grocery men are not much behind, but there seems to be more complaints about payments in this line than any other. The drug trade have paid up well, but there does not appear to have been very much heavy paper maturing. Of course Feb. 4 and Aug. 4 are the big settling days, but the 4th of each month is looked forward to with some anxiety. The prompt payments of yesterday will do something to stimulate trade and restore the confidence that should exist, but which has unfortunately not been felt for some time past.

Yesterday was a "red-letter day" in the history of Upper Canada College. Charles Brand, one of the pupils, was publicly presented with the bronze medal of the Royal Humane Society for an act of bravery in saving two lives in August last. His Lordship the Bishop of Toronto made the presentation.

At the Police Court this morning Emma Wilson flippantly acknowledged that she had taken a $100 bill from Wm. Eastby in a house at 89 Richmond-street. Wm. Palmer, also charged with the same offence, pleaded not guilty. According to his story he had rescued Eastby, who was in a helpless condition, from a gang of pool sharks on Bathurst-street. The evidence, however, showed that Palmer had done this for his own financial benefit and with the intention of robbing Eastby. The girl was committed to the Mercer Reformatory for six months, and was then utilized as a Crown witness. She had taken the money and handed it to Palmer. The latter took it home and hid it under a paint pot. "Yes, and I was sorry and would have given it back had I known where Eastby lived," said Palmer. He was committed to the Central Prison for three months.

Quite a heap of larcenies were reported to the police yesterday. They were: A lady's ulster, stolen from De La Salle Institute; a book and 75c. from R. G. Walker, 147 Victoria-street; an overcoat from the house of S. Johnson, 189 Argyle-street; a watch from Charles Glover, who lives in Salem-avenue, and another watch from D. Davis, 289 King-street west. Mrs. Stafford of 73 Victoria-street, reports the loss of $30, taken from her pocket while entering Bond-street Congregational Church Sunday night.

The Rowe-White Case.

BUFFALO, March 4.—Jack Rowe and Deacon Jim White are nursing a surprise for the baseball world. They have received legal advice to the effect that they have got the Detroit League corporation on the hip. Their lawyer says that if Detroit refuses to release them they will offer their services to Detroit at the beginning of the season, and then start in to collect salary at last year's rate, suing after the first month in case the Detroits fail to pay. The lawyer believes that they will have a legal claim that the contracts were between these two players and the Detroit management. He says the men cannot be sold like galley slaves to other clubs. Baseball people here think that Detroit would rather release the players than go to the trouble and expense of such litigation. The buying clubs would not now have any interest in backing up the Detroiters, for Boston does not want White now, and Rowe positively will not play in Pittsburgh.

The Interstate Commerce Act.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—President Cleveland, before she expiration of his term of office, approved the bill amending the Interstate Commerce Act. One change requires three days' public notice of any proposed reduction in the published rates of a railroad. Special provision is made to prevent and punish "underbilling" under severe penalties. The penalty section of the present Act is strengthened by adding the penalty of imprisonment to the fine now provided when the offence is an unlawful discrimination in rates or charges. The provisions of the present Act in regard to the publication of rates are made to apply to joint through rates. A change is made in the court provisions which is intended to facilitate the recovery of damages for overcharges, and the powers of the commissioners are increased in several respects.

PRICES AND PROSPECTS.

Leading Features of the Grain and Produce Markets at Home and Abroad.

HARRISON'S INAUGURAL.

THE NEW UNITED STATES' PRESIDENT SWORN IN.

He Makes a Long Address, Principally Concerning Domestic Affairs—The Monroe Doctrine Re-Warmed.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—There was a stir and a bustle about the city from an early hour this morning. Probably 100,000 visitors and as many more of the resident population of Washington were along the line of march. The inauguration ceremonies were delayed for some time by heavy rain which, threatened to drive the Presidential party from the east portico to the Senate chamber. After consultation with the Vice-President, President Harrison announced that he would not disappoint the large crowd in front of the Capitol and that rain or shine the inaugural address would be delivered on the east portico.

At 11.15 the Senate was called to order by Senator Ingalls and the senators rose as the diplomats entered. The venerable Hannibal Hamlin, the only living ex-Vice-President, occupied a seat at the right of the presiding officer. Shortly before 12 o'clock the members of the House of Representatives and members-elect led by Speaker Carlisle entered the Senate Chamber. A few minutes before 12 o'clock the President of the United States was announced. He entered the main door opposite the presiding officer, followed by his Cabinet. A moment later the President-elect was announced. He entered with Senator Hoar of Massachusetts. As the hands of the Senate clock reached the hour of noon the Vice-President-elect was announced. He was escorted to the platform of the presiding officer by Senator Cullom of Illinois. Everyone in the chamber arose and remained standing while Senator Ingalls administered to Mr. Morton the oath of office. At the conclusion of his remarks Senator Ingalls turned and handed the gavel to Mr. Morton, who assumed the position of presiding officer and called the Senate to order in extra session. Vice-President Morton then addressed the Senate briefly. At the conclusion of this speech the new Senators were sworn in. The message of the President convening the Senate in extra session was then read and the Senate having completed its organization, the ceremonies of inaugurating the President were begun.

As the President and President-elect appeared they were greeted with cheers from the dense throng.

When all had been seated the President-elect rose and the Chief Justice administered to him the oath of office. The great crowd rose and remained standing with uncovered heads during the ceremony. As the President bowed his head and kissed the open book the crowd cheered again and again. Turning from the Chief Justice, President Harrison began the delivery of his inaugural address.

After referring to the inaugural oath, and expressing the opinion that the obligations imposed by it on the President are no less binding on the people, the address notes that the occasion is the hundredth anniversary of the inauguration of Washington as first President, a statement which serves to introduce the paean of congratulation and triumph in which he refers to the nation's progress in wealth, population, territory and all that makes a nation great, during the century.

Much space is given to an explanation of the reasons which led the young Republic to adopt a protective policy, so that commercially and financially it should be as free from foreign control as it had become politically. Only the existence of slavery in a section of the country prevented a more general adherence to the principle of protection for home industries, and the emancipation proclamation carried with it reasons why the South should seek to share in the benefits which had come to the North because of the manufactures nursed and reared under the shield of a tendering tariff. He looked hopefully to the continuance of the protective system, and to the consequent development of manufacturing and mining enterprises in the States hitherto wholly given to agriculture, as a potent influence in the perfect unification of the people. "Is is not quite possible," he asks, "that the farmers and the promoters of the great mining and manufacturing enterprises which have recently been established in the south, may yet find the free ballot of the workingman, without distinction of race, is needed for their defence as well as his own?"

The naturalization laws, said Mr. Harrison, should be so amended as to make the inquiry into the good disposition and character of persons applying for citizenship more careful and searching. The address continued:

We have happily maintained a policy of avoiding all interference with European affairs. We have been only interested spectators of their contentions in diplomacy, and in war ready to use our friendly offices to promote peace—but never obtruding our advice, and never attempting unfairly to gain the distress of other powers into commercial advantages to ourselves. We have a just right to expect that our European policy will be the American policy of European courts. It is so manifestly incompatible with those precautions for our peace and safety which all the great powers habitually observe and enforce in matters affecting them that a shorter waterway between our eastern and western seaboards should be dominated by an European Government that we may confidently expect that such a purpose will not be entertained by any Power. We shall in the future, as in the past, use every endeavor to maintain and enlarge our friendly relations with all the great Powers, but they will not expect us to look kindly upon any project that would leave us subject to the dangers of a hostile observation or environment. We have not sought to dominate or absorb any of our weaker neighbors, but rather to aid and encourage them to establish free and stable governments, resting upon the consent of their own people. We have a clear right to expect therefore that no European government will seek to establish colonial dependencies upon the territory of these independent American States. That which a sense of justice requires us from seeking they may be reasonably expected willingly to forego.

It must not be assumed however, that our interests are so exclusively American that our entire inattention to any events that may transpire elsewhere can be taken for granted. Our citizens domiciled for purposes of trade in all countries, and in many islands of the sea demand and will have our adequate care in their personal and commercial rights. The necessities of our navy require convenient coaling stations, and dock and harbor privileges. These and other trading privileges we will be free to obtain only by means that do not in any degree partake of coercion, however feeble the Government from which we ask such concessions, but having fairly obtained them by methods and for purposes entirely consistent with the most friendly disposition towards all other powers our consent will be necessary to any modification or impairment of the concession. We shall neither fail to respect the flag of any friendly nation or of the just rights of its citizens, nor to exact the like treatment for our own. Calmness, justice and consideration should characterize our diplomacy. The offices of an intelligent diplomacy or of friendly arbitration in proper cases should be adopted to the peaceful adjustment of all international difficulties. By such methods we will make our contribution to the world's peace, which no nation values more highly, and avoid the opprobrium which must fall upon the nation that ruthlessly breaks it.

The remainder of the message has no special interest for Canadians.

William Henry Harrison, on the white house 48 years ago to-day, headed 4000 settlers over the same route taken by his grandson.

Much comment was caused by the absence of the Cleveland ladies from the cabinet reserved for them.

The President took several tragamo of roast beef tea at odd intervals.

The area of the ballroom floor was 37,000 square feet, nearly an acre.

Fire at Alton.

ALTON, March 4.—Fire broke out in the Dixie House block about 2 o'clock this morning, and the whole block was completely destroyed. The losses and insurance are as follows: Jackson Dean, proprietor of block and hotel, $6000, insurance $4000, partly in Wellington Mutual and partly in Western; J. A. McClelland, general store, $1000, covered by insurance; G. F. Bull, grocer, $300, no insurance; P. V. Lemon, butcher, $100, no insurance; S. Cummings, shoe shop, $150, insured. The property of W. White, harnessmaker, and N. C. Dodds' dwelling were also damaged.

The Importance of a Soul.

Mr. Crossley Points the Sinner to Salvation—Continuation of the Revival Services.

About twelve hundred people waded through the slush in front of the George street church last night, and promptly at a quarter to eight o'clock the services began. There were on the platform besides the choir Rev. Messrs. Pearson, Shorey, Parker, Wilson, Johnston (Keene), and Mr. J. D. Collins.

After opening exercises, Rev. Mr. Pearson urged the congregation to give liberally towards the sustenance of the visiting evangelists, who were supported entirely by this means. He pointed out the luxury of giving in such a cause as this, and just to show what proportion of people contributed, he said that of an audience of 1200 Sunday evening there were 1100 that did not give anything.

Mr. Hunter read as a lesson the latter part of the first chapter of John, with reference to the calling of Peter and Andrew, commenting upon the passages as he passed along and urging the people to "hang these things up in their memories."

Mr. Crossley sang "Calvary" with much feeling and pathos, and after prayers had been offered as requested for certain persons, Mr. Crossley addressed the meeting on the text in Luke, v., 10:—"There is joy in the presence of the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth." This passage taught us first that the angels in heaven know what we on earth are doing. Some persons objected to this theory, and argued that it would militate against the happiness of a mother in heaven to see her son continue in his evil ways on earth. Mr. Crossley thought this was rather an argument the other way, because the suspense of not knowing would be much harder to bear than the certainty of knowledge. Then the Scriptures furnished many passages which went to prove this theory. In Hebrews, Paul refers to them as looking down upon us, and Stephen, dying, said, "I saw heaven open, and Jesus standing at the right hand of God." If Stephen saw heaven from this earth, surely, with his spiritual vision, he could look from above upon the world below. The Lord says the redeemed shall be as the Angels of God, and as the Angels see us, so the redeemed, gone to heaven, see us. What inspiration there was in the thought that there is joy in heaven over one soul that repenteth. A second lesson was that those in heaven were intensely interested in us mortals below; then, as individuals, should we not be interested in ourselves? We should also be interested in those about us, particularly so as we have the means of reaching them and bringing them to repentance. How unlike the angels are those people who are not interested in their fellow men and complain that they don't like revival services! They are like the persons who complained because Jesus was bringing men to repentance. And, in seeking after sinners, we should not select certain ones—the moral, well dressed or respectable—but the very worst and most degraded, as Jesus did when on the earth. Again, the importance of repentance was learned from the text. The making of a vast fortune would not be noticed in heaven, but when one soul turns from sin to the Lord there is the greatest joy. Oh, that sinners may realize the importance of their souls and see the necessity of repentance! The text also showed the lamentable condition of the impenitent, for if the joy over one soul returned was so great, what must be the sorrow over so many impenitent. Mr. Crossley wanted sinners to see the sad state of impenitence, especially when they considered the impending doom. The passage, besides, taught sinners their part in the matter, to return to the Lord with a certainty of salvation whenever it was sought. And last, the importance of a single soul saved. "There is joy in Heaven over one soul that repenteth." Mr. Crossley urged the unconverted to see the matter in a right light, to realize the importance of their own souls and come to Christ for pardon for their sins.

NOTES.

This evening's service will include a song sermon by Rev. Mr. Crossley. Tuesday and Thursday nights have been set apart specially for this feature.

Sunday night about twenty-five went for ward at the after meeting.

It is True to Nature.

"An American melodrama that wins favor abroad," said W. C. Boyd, business manager of "Held by the Enemy," Gillette's great war drama, which will be seen here at the Opera House Monday, March 11th, "is bound to have more than ordinary merit. Very few purely American plays find favor in England, but among those very few is "Held by the Enemy." It was originally produced at a matinee performance in London as an experiment. I think Mr. Gillette had very little expectation that it would be an immediate 'go.' It caught the public fancy, however, so tremendously, that the Princess Theatre was immediately offered for its production and it was put on for a run. Its success was phenomenal, and it made a fortune during its London season. It is now being played through the provinces and is meeting with undiminished success. In Australia the play has had an unprecedented run of 200 nights." "How do you explain its wonderful popularity?" asked the reporter. "Simply, by reason of its realism and the thread of human nature that runs through it. The public want realism, but a strong story is essential as a background, and 'Held by the Enemy' has both. By the way," added Mr. Boyd, as the reporter was leaving, "look out for some surprises in scenery and stage effects. We carry a car-load of scenery and there's nothing like it on the road." 1468

Attempted Suicide—The Railway Deputation Off for the Capital.

HAMILTON, March 4.—On Saturday night Annie Russell, who became distracted at the death of her husband, Thomas Russell, which occurred at the hospital last week, tried to commit suicide by taking a dose of Rough on Rats. Russell, who was about 45 years old, was the black sheep of a respectable Scotch family, and went through a fortune of $80,000. He lived for many years in Ottawa, where his brother, who is a respectable business man resides. He was a big, handsome fellow, being quite an athlete, and took a great interest in all kinds of sport. He formerly worked for his brother, but neglected his business and squandered his money in drink. He was married, and his dissipate ways caused his wife so much grief that they separated about 15 years ago. Russell left Ottawa and wandered around the country, spending his money freely and foolishly. The woman who tried to poison herself claims that she met him in Buffalo about three years ago, and that they were married and lived together as man and wife until his death. At that time she did not know that he had been married before and that his wife was still alive. Mrs. Russell's condition is unchanged to-night, but recovery is not probable.

The railway deputation, consisting of Mayor Doran, Ald. Moore, Ald. Stinson, Capt. Fairgrieve and others, left this evening via Toronto, for Ottawa, and will appear before the Railway Committee of the Privy Council to-morrow.

William T. Allison's hotel, corner of Bay and Stuart-streets, was broken into between 11 o'clock last night and 5 o'clock this morning and $10 in cash, three boxes of cigars and a bottle of wine were stolen. The thief got in by a cellar window.

Four boys, aged about 15 years, being tired of living in a metropolis like Toronto, set out last Friday night to visit the wild west. They came to Hamilton and were on their point of starting for Buffalo, when Mr. Wilson, of Toronto, put in an appearance and collared his son Frederick. The lad was taken home, and the others proceeded on their pilgrimage.

Daniel Sullivan, against whom a charge of committing aggravated assault upon Michael Flynn was dismissed a few days ago, was charged this morning with selling liquor during prohibited hours. The case was dismissed.

STOLE LOTTA'S MONEY.

Advance Agent Merriwether Runs off With the Box Receipts.

LOUISVILLE, March 5.—"Dink" Merriwether, for several years advance agent for dramatic companies going out of New York, but who has lived in the city for the last few months, is mysteriously missing, and with him departed nearly $1000 belonging to Manager John T. Macauley of Lotta, the actress. The latter was booked at Macauley's for the entire week commencing last Monday, but when Miss Anderson was secured for the first three nights, Lotta's managers consented to play at Lexington and Frankfort upon the same terms which were offered here. Mr. Macauley could not leave the city, so Merriwether was engaged to take charge of the box office at the two towns. The managers of the theatres were to receive 20 per cent. and Mr. Macauley and Lotta the remainder. The engagement closed at Frankfort on Wednesday night and the net receipts of the trip amounted to $980. The money was paid over to Merriwether. On Thursday morning Merriwether left on the 5.30 train, before the members of the company got up. He was heard from in Covington through a letter which he sent to a friend here, but since then nothing has been heard of him. Manager Macauley says that Merriwether was as much Lotta's representative as his, and that he is not responsible. Manager Dunn of the Lotta combination, however, holds that Merriwether was Mr. Macauley's representative, and the latter is responsible for the amount due the company.

ONTARIO LEGISLATURE.

Little Done Yesterday Beyond Passing Resolutions—A Lot of Deputations.

TORONTO, March 5.—Little was done in the Local House yesterday besides the passing of various resolutions. Mr. Bishop created quite a sensation when moving the second reading of his bill respecting live stock insurance by condemning the working of the Lion Provident Life and Live Stock Association.

Mr. Davis introduced a bill to amend the Municipal Act, the object of which is to give the franchise to freeholders and householders whose lease extends over a term of not less than five years from the date of voting.

Mr. Willoughby moved: "That in the opinion of this House it is expedient that all Police Magistrates should make the same returns of convictions and fines imposed by them in respect of infringements of the Canada Temperance Act as are made in other cases to the clerks of the peace. That such when made, should be published and that all expense in connection with the enforcement of the act should be submitted for audit to the county auditors." The motion was lost on division.

These bills passed their third reading yesterday; Mr. Fraser's Franchise Assessment Act. To confer certain powers upon the Board of Trade of the City of Toronto. To legalize a by-law of the Town of Galt, and other purposes—Mr. Master. A lot of private bills were also passed through their second stage.

The Attorney-General and his Cabinet exhibited a vast amount of patience in listening to half a score or so of deputations which waited on them last night after adjournment. The untiring $600 exemption men urged what they consider will be a step towards a modern utopia, the temperance advocates gave the Government the benefit of their views, the druggists were on hand to talk about the Pharmacy Bill before the House, and so on.

Death of Dr Hyde of Stratford.

STRATFORD, March 4.—Dr. John Hyde, one of the oldest residents here, died this afternoon at the age of 70 years. He was a graduate of Glasgow University and has been in practice here for over 30 years. Until late years he took a prominent part in politics. Dr. Hyde was for many years a member of the town council and a school trustee. The funeral occurs on Wednesday at 3 o'clock.

A Lumber Camp Burns.

OTTER RAPIDS, March 4.—At 3 p.m. today Boyd's camp of the Georgian Bay Lumber Company, near this place, was destroyed by fire. Nothing was saved. Some of the men lost heavily. The cause of the fire was a defective stove pipe. In the camp were quantities of clothing, jewelry and in many cases the winter's earnings of those employed by the company.

Health Putting Feet.

"I was swooten from head to foot from dropsy of six months' standing, and my health was failing fast, but after taking one bottle of Burdock Blood Bitters I am quite well, and think there is no medicine equal to B. B. B., and to it I remain a true friend." Joseph Herlo, Linwood, Ont. 2w10d

A High Valuation.

"If there was only one bottle of Hagyard's Yellow Oil in Manitoba, I would give one hundred dollars for it," writes Philip H. Brant, of Monteith, Manitoba, after having used it for a severe wound and for frozen fingers, with, as he says, "astonishing good results." 2w10d

A Dreadful Doom.

To be unable to satisfy hunger without being distressed by heartburn, indigestion, sick stomach, dizziness or faintness, means a dreadful doom. All who suffer thus will find prompt relief and permanent cure in Burdock Blood Bitters. B. B. B. positively cures dyspepsia in any form. 2w10d

WINTER

In the season of the year when colder weather sharpens the appetite, and heartier and more invigorating food is necessary to maintain the heat of the body and to repair the waste of the tissues, which goes on more rapidly during the cold weather and under increased activity. We leave the cooler salads and fruits that refreshed us during the summer months and take in their place steaks and chops, smoking hot, and the steaming oatmeal and graham cakes and coffee.

At this time of the year sausages, pork, ham, mackerel and other salt fish, form desirable breakfast dishes; and porridge, omelettes, oatmeal, wheaten cakes and a variety of cereals help make the repast a most delicious one.

MUNCASTER'S

MISS TINSEL.

By HENRY SEDLEY.

He bowed and passed away. According to the apartment of Miss De Montague, he made himself so agreeable as to be able to borrow from that lady a dozen shining eagles; and, thus provided, descended promptly to Mr. Copperas' bank, where he whiled away the night—assisted by copious drinks and unlimited cigars—at the enlivening game of faro.

As for Harding, he went to the bar of the saloon and took what was for him a stiff glass of brandy. Then he turned abruptly on his heel, and without sending his name before him, marched straight up to Miss Tinsel's room.

She met him at the door with a glad cry—and then shrank back abashed.

"I see," she murmured, in a low, sweet voice, "you don't care to have me repulse you again. You have thought it over—and you agree that it is better not."

He came just inside the door, but did not sit, although she motioned him to a chair.

"I agree," he repeated mechanically—"I agree—with you that it is better not." Then he looked suspiciously around the room. There was no one there—but a door opened into another room beyond. Jane followed his eyes. "That is Miss De Montague's room," she said; "we are always next to each other."

"And she is there now?"

"Yes—with Mr. Bellario—he is calling on her."

Harding paused a minute, and then went on in a hard, constrained voice, like one who repeats a disagreeable lesson. "I have thought it right to see you—now, for the last time—and say I think it best—and right—that we should part."

Jane turned very pale, and the old grave look of hopeless pain came over her face. But she answered with infinite softness and humility:

"It is right—you know I thought so from the first. You should not marry a—a convict's daughter."

"It is not because you are a convict's daughter."

"The reason is sufficient."

"I repel it," he cried vehemently; "I will have none of it—I told you so before—I repeat it now. Listen," and he crossed the room swiftly and closed both doors.

"I loved you for yourself—dearly—dearly. What did it matter to me—what fault was it of yours—what other people did, or what or where they were? In this grand, new country, men—some men, at least—have grown high enough and strong enough to shake off such paltry prejudices as those. To me they are as nothing."

"You led me to think so," Jane said gently.

"Why should I care for your being a ballet dancer—or for the other thing, when you had never disgraced yourself? But now it is different."

"Now it is different!" she echoed in amazement.

"Different in this," pursued he with growing excitement, "that before you were a pure girl—pure as snow—everybody said that—and now you are—are—compromised."

The blood rushed in a torrent up to her hair.

"Who says it?" she demanded, now first showing warmth; "who dares say it?"

"Alas, Jane," he replied, "don't make things worse by deception at parting. Let us be at least as we have always been, honest and unreserved to each other."

"What you have said just now," said the girl proudly, "is an insult. The time has been when you would not have heard another say such words—either to me or of me; and yet they are as little deserved now as they have ever been."

"They are, are they?" he retorted. "Then pray tell me who was that man you have had here within an hour?"

She turned deadly white, and opened her lips thrice to speak before the words would shape themselves.

"That—man?"

"Do you deny having a man with you?"

She shook her head piteously. "No—there was a man here—and with me."

"Ah, you confess it then," cried he, as if her admission made what he knew more heinous. "Who was this man? Confess all!"

"He—he—wanted help—asked for money. He saw me in the play at Boone's Bar, and, thinking me richer than I am, asked me for money."

Harding laughed scornfully. "And do you expect me to believe this?"

"It is true," she hurried on, nervously. "He said he was desperate and must have money to get away."

"Had he any claim upon you?" he asked, scanning her with cold, searching eyes.

She hesitated and made answer, "No—none."

"Yet he pushed his demand with eloquence?"

"He did."

"And with success?"

"I gave him all I had."

"Even although he had no claim on you?"

"Yes."

"O, Jane—Jane!" he cried with a burst of bitter sorrow, "why couldn't you have been truthful to the end? Why—why must you make me look back—always and only to despise you!"

She looked at him stonily, but made no reply.

"Jane, it cuts me to the heart to say it—but I saw you, do you hear?—saw you. He took both your hands in his—you threw your arms about his neck and kissed him. Do you deny this?"

She still looked him straight in the face, but two tears brimmed into her eyes and rolled slowly down her cheeks.

"No, it is true," she then answered.

"You own this too!" he cried furiously. "Jane, who is this man?"

She remained silent.

"I ask you again, Jane, and for the last time, who is this man?"

"I cannot tell you."

"You refuse?"

"I must."

"Then farewell. We can meet no more." He turned, and stood with his hand on the door, and with the action the girl's overstrained nerves gave way.

"Oh, no, no, no! O, Chester, I have loved you so! Don't—for mercy's sake—don't leave me in anger, when I so need comfort, help—and—p—pity!"

She fell on her knees by the bed, and, with her face in her hands, sobbed aloud.

As she did so, a burst of strange, mocking laughter resounded from the adjoining room, and Harding started as if he had been stung.

"It must be!" he hissed, all that was hardest and worst in his nature suddenly possessing him. "After this it would only be torture to—both!"

He bent suddenly and kissed—not her lips—no longer pure—but her forehead, once, twice, thrice, passionately, and then fled away into the darkness.

CHAPTER V.

GOOD OUT OF EVIL.

Harding went up to his lonely tent. Like a wounded animal, he sought his lair, and the memory of the many solitary hours he had passed there, even at this sad moment, refreshed his spirit.

There he could be alone—away from men's eyes—free from their curiosity, from their comments, or, what would be worse, from their pity.

He had made himself comparatively rich; he had built up a home, as it were, in the wilderness; he had even tried, and with some success, to gain men's esteem—and what were all these worth to him now?

Such bitter thoughts as these filled Harding's mind as he arranged his coarse pallet, and then, throwing himself upon it, sought to forget his grief during the short space that remained before daylight. He was awakened, almost instantly, it seemed to him—although, in fact, three hours had passed—by the sharp crack of a rifle. Harding leaped up and ran to his door.

It was a dull, gray dawn—the sky overcast, but the air free from wind or rain. A little below Harding's tent there spread a plain about a mile wide. This extended along the bank of the river, and terminated in a clump of redwoods which grew far up the mountain beyond. Here and there on the plain were scattered a few small trees and copses of manzanita; but for the most part it was clear from the outskirts of the village up to the redwoods.

On this plain Harding now saw a remarkable sight. A man was running from tree to tree, striving always to get nearer the mountain. Perhaps 800 yards behind him were five or six armed pursuers trying to close in on the fugitive, and occasionally firing at him. As Harding gazed, three shots were discharged in rapid succession. Yet the man still held on his way, apparently unhurt, and it looked as if he would quickly gain the cover of the forest. But there was one behind him far swifter than the rest, who ran like an Indian on the river or further side from Harding, and who threatened in a few moments to get dangerously near. It was because this man was so distant from himself that Harding did not at first recognize his own partner, Jack Storm, although he was in his usual well known Mexican dress. Now, Storm was the best rifle shot on Bullion Flat.

The Raw, Cutting Winds

bring to the surface every latent pain. A change of even a few degrees marks the difference between comfort and pain to many persons. Happily disease now holds less sway. Science is continually bringing forward new remedies which successfully combat disease. Polson's Nerviline—nerve pain cure—has proved the most successful pain relieving remedy known. Its application is wide, for it is equally efficient in all forms of pain, whether internal or external. Ten and 25 cents a bottle, at druggists. 6dw10

Partly Gave Up.

"In the year 1886 I coughed for six months, and having unsuccessfully tried many remedies, I partly gave up, thinking I had consumption. At last I tried Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam, less than one bottle of which cured me, leaving me as well as ever I was." Henry W. Carns, Wabash, Ont. 2w10d.

DR. DORENWEND'S

GREAT GERMAN

HAIR MAGIC.

The equal of this great preparation is yet to be found. It is an unfailing Restorer for grey hair—it stops all falling out of the hair—it removes all dandruff and keeps the scalp clean. On bald heads (if there are but the faintest traces of roots) the Magic will produce a fine growth. Will you try it? Or will you let your hair go, and become prematurely old? What do you say? All druggists everywhere have it for sale. Ask for it. Do not let the druggist tell you he has something just as good—many have dead stock of other hair tonics on hand and try to shove them off in this way.

See that each bottle bears seal and signature:

Important Auction Sale.

Those wishing to purchase first class articles of furniture should keep in mind the auction sale of household effects to be held at the residence northwest corner of Simcoe and Stewart streets, on Friday, March 8th, at 1 o'clock p.m. Sale without reserve as goods must be sold. 1d

Stock Sold.

Messrs. Dundas & Grandy, of the Lowlands stock farm, Springville, on Saturday sold the imported two-year-old Clydesdale mare "Jeannie Ray" to Mr. Douglas Morrison, of Argyle. This horse took first prize at the Kingston fair.

A Convenience.

The Peterborough Bookstore has placed in a convenient place in the shop a writing desk for the use of ladies, who when down town and wishing to write a note or postal card, may do so comfortably and at their leisure. This desk is placed for the convenience of the ladies who are welcome to the use of it.

The Dividend Paid.

A meeting of the creditors of Mr. Thos. Menzies was held yesterday afternoon, when a dividend of 17 cents was paid. It was found that the 18 cent dividend declared at the last meeting was too large. Another meeting will be held a week hence, for the further winding up of affairs.

A New Horse.

Mr. H. W. Kent is a thorough lover of good horses and cannot get along without one. Some time ago he sold his fine chestnut driving horse, and has since purchased a handsome Green Mountain Morgan colt that is exciting the admiration of the horsemen in town. It is a particularly fine animal.

Dr. Potts at Lindsay.

Dr. Potts, Secretary of Education, is in Lindsay in the interest of educational work of the Methodist Church. He preached on Sunday to large congregations, the collections being nearly three times as much as last year's. He has met with encouraging success in the canvass for college federation.

Retiring from Business.

Owing to ill health we regret to say that Mr. John Braden is compelled to retire from the grocery business. By reference to his advertisement, the public will learn that he is selling his entire stock of the very freshest groceries, canned goods and provisions at cost. His sale will only last for two weeks. Everything must go as he is giving up immediate possession of his premises. d

Fatality Amongst Horses.

The Dickson Lumbering Co., of Peterborough, the Minden Echo says, had the misfortune to lose a valuable team by drowning only a few days since, and on Sunday last two more valuable young horses died from the effects of a distemper that seems to be prevalent this winter in all the lumber shanties in this locality. We learn that quite a number of the horses owned by the above company are laid up with the disease, and that Mr. Beatty, veterinary surgeon, of Peterborough, is now attending them. We hope the fatality will be stayed, under Mr. Beatty's skilful treatment.

Provincial Orangeism.

The annual session of the Provincial Black Chapter opened in Campbellford yesterday. The following representatives from this district went down on the 1.30 express:—Robt. Weir, Worthy Master Black Preceptory, Peterborough; Wm. Delamere, D. G. M., Haliburton; Mr. Davitt, C.M., West Durham; J. L. Winters, P.C.M., Victoria; Rev. Mr. White, Grand Chaplain, Victoria; J. G. Weir, D.M., Peterborough.

The following went down to-day to attend the opening session of the Orange Grand Lodge for Eastern Ontario:—W. Moore, Deputy C. M., Lakefield; W. Milborn, P. M., 45th Line Smith; W. Mather, D. M., Zion; Mr. S. Hughes, of Lindsay, and a number of others from Victoria and Haliburton were also on the train.

30 CHESTS of our double extra fine new Japan tea arrived to-day, 5 lbs for $1 at M. R. Kidd's.

A First Class Entertainment.

The opera house was packed last night, even standing room being at a premium, to witness the excellent entertainment put on by Signor Giovanni and his clever company. The programme was varied, original, entertaining and amusing, and the audience retired well repaid for their attendance. The gift part of the performance was faithfully and fairly carried out. A large number of good and useful presents were distributed, Miss Mary Long securing a fine China tea set and Master Ferguson an elegant China chamber set. Signor Giovanni buys all his gifts in town, believing in the fairness of patronizing those who patronize him. Another splendid programme to-night and another fine lot of presents. Admission, 25 cents; reserved seats, 35 cents, at Doucet's music store.

Conscientious But Cautious.

Mr. Macfarlane Wilson, of China Hall, received the following unique postal card the other day:—

I have once for all decided that accounts between I and God has to be set square, lest after I have preach to others I myself become a castaway. On reading a piece in the paper to day I was made to think of a few dollars I one time owed you, and since then I have had my peace molested. Now I want the peace no matter what it costs, if I have to leave my office as a Salvation officer for a time. If you will look, about 3 years ago I used to be in ——, got oil from you to the amount of $7.55, which I must either pay or if you will be so kind as to give the amount to the extension of God's Kingdom it is will lift a great burden of my heart. If not, I will do anything to get it for you. It may cause me to quit the field for a time, but it must be done. Drop me a card, please. Capt —— —— Salvation Army.

Crooks Act Amendments.

A large deputation from the council of the Ontario Royal Templars of Temperance interviewed all the members of the Ontario Government Monday evening, with a view to get certain amendments to the Crooks Act and changes in the present methods of conducting hotels. They asked that the law should be changed as follows:—Two hotels for each thousand of a population, and one for every additional thousand; abolition of bars; guests of hotels alone to be sold liquor to be drunk either at meals or in their rooms; shops to be allowed to sell from one pint to two gallons, and to be drunk off the premises; that if the majority of a locality where a hotel is situated petitions against giving it a license, such license shall be refused; that the people at municipal elections be allowed by vote to declare for license or no license; bars to be closed from 8 p.m. on Saturday to 7 a.m. on Monday, and on other days of the week the hours of sale to be from 7 a.m. to 9 p.m.; the age of minors to be raised to 21, and no liquor shall be sold in hotels on statutory holidays.

New Military Regulations.

Some of the officers of the 57th Battalion have received copies of the new English military regulations governing infantry drill. The new regulations will be adopted this year by city battalions and infantry schools in Canada, the 57th Battalion among them. Some radical changes are made in the drill which are considered to be improvements. There are changes in the formation of fours and all extension motions are done away with, being replaced by the section and physical training. Formation to right about and left about is abolished, and there is no more wheeling into line, the companies forming instead. The process of sizing a company is also new and improved. Lieutenants no longer act as guides, but each lieutenant takes command of his half company. Sergeants do the work of both guides and markers. There are changes in the open order, in the march past, in the formation from line to column and vice versa. The new regulations will be followed out by the 57th Battalion upon their beginning drill this spring.

"A Remarkable Book.'

THE STORY OF AN AFRICAN FARM—by Ralph Iron (Olive Schreiner). Price, 50 cts. Some opinions of the press:—"A very remarkable book. . . . There are many passages of great merit in this book. Lyndall's cynical speech, in the second volume, on woman's position, which begins with—'Look at this little chin of mine with the dimple in it: it is but a small part of my person, but though I had knowledge of all things under the sun, and the deep loving heart of an angel, it would not stead me like this little chin'—will of itself justify us in recommending all and sundry to read 'The Story of an African Farm.'"—St. James Gazette. "A novel which is quite unique, and likely to be widely read."—Society. "This is a powerfully written story."—Broad Arrow. "'The Story of an African Farm' is certainly a remarkable and interesting book."—Pall Mall Gazette. "The regular reader of fiction will find new enjoyment in the freshness of the subject and the style, in the novel scenery and the unfamiliar mode of life, which are all rendered with power. Even the serious student, who generally shuns novels, will find that this book throws new light on many of the most complex problems of modern life. It is a book no one can afford to leave unread; and those who have read it will want little urging to induce them to read it again."—Evening News. "This is a remarkable—a very remarkable—book."—Brighton Guardian. To be had at the Peterborough Bookstore.

Ashburnham Council.

The Financial Position of the Village—The Auditors' Report—A Sanitary Statement of the Health of Ashburnham.

A meeting of the Ashburnham council was held Monday evening. Present—Reeve Burnham and Messrs. Calcutt, Craig and Marshal.

An application of Thos. Bridgewater for reduction of his taxes was not entertained, no reduction being allowed.

The statements of the receipts and expenditures for 1888 were presented by the auditors, Messrs. Adams and Rooney. The total receipts were $8,587.16 and the expenditures $8,551.92, leaving a balance on hand of $5.24. The school accounts were also presented, showing receipts to have been $1,404.10 and expenditures amounting to $1,280.57 for salaries and $142.53 for sundries. On motion the reports were adopted. (They will be published in full in the newspapers in accordance with the requirements of the law.

On motion of Mr. Craig, seconded by Mr. Calcutt, it was ordered that no fees be charged for butchers' license for the year 1889.

BOARD OF HEALTH.

The Board of Health met after the Council, Present, the Reeve and Clerk, and Messrs. Stewart Wright and H. Marshall.

Dr. Clarke, Medical Health Officer, presented his annual report. The report congratulated the village upon its freedom from outside epidemic, a very small percentage of zymotic diseases and a gradually increasing compliance, on the part of the public, with the provisions of the Health Act. Mr. Craig, the sanitary inspector, accompanied by Dr. Clarke, had made frequent house-to-house inspections during the year with good effect. The report drew attention to a hollow near the C.P.R. diamond, which in summer was filled with stagnant water, and advised that it be filled up. There was also an objectionable slaughter house on the boundary line. Numerous complaints having been made regarding the unsanitary condition of the school, a thorough inspection had been made. The closets were found to be very filthy and the building was permeated by rank odors ascending from the cellar, which was damp and badly drained. A great improvement had since been made. The report contained some advice regarding the disinfection of closets. Some specimens of village well water had been examined and organic impurities found in nearly all of them. Boiling and filtration were recommended as the only remedy. Two cases of typhoid fever and two of diphtheria occurred during the year. The methods adopted to prevent the spreading of the contagion were outlined in the report. In case of the appearance of scarlet fever in the village, it would be advisable to prevent infected households from obtaining books at the Mechanics' Institute, as the disease is likely to be spread by books. Dr. Clarke stated in his report that he would this year try to ascertain the death rate of the village. The Ontario Registration Act was not very well observed and could not be relied upon; the only accurate plan was to keep track of the deaths and watch the cemetery returns. There was no better index of sanitary efficiency than the death rate. The report concluded with a reference to the good work accomplished by Boards of Health.

No. yards inspected (good), 90; No. water closets inspected (good), 90; No. wells inspected (good), 85; old wells closed, 4; hog pens moved, 6; complaints, 13; notices served, 2; manure heaps moved, 52; houses placarded, 3.

The report was adopted.

On motion, a vote of thanks was tendered Dr. Clarke for his report, and for the activity and interest he has shown in the prosecution of his duties.

Gone, But not Forgotten

The last chapter in the Model Grocery scandal, which has been agitating the good people of Peterborough for some time past, has been developed. The grocery is now no more, and its fair but fickle proprietress has, it is said, flitted with her young husband across the lines to the land of stars and stripes and cheap divorces. The couple were leaving very quietly, in order, no doubt, to avoid all formal, fond farewells on the part of the long-suffering public, but were stayed in their flight on Saturday by some ruthless creditors, who cruelly took advantage of the occasion to press their claims and demand liquidation of their bills. Saturday afternoon the goods and chattels of Mr. and Mrs. Lennox, including the grocery stock, were packed and carted to the C. P. R. station, whence they were shipped to Cleveland, Ohio, "in haste." Somehow the news leaked out, and of course the creditors at once swooped down upon the premises and claimed their dues. After much tearful expostulation and complaint of bad usage, the money was always forthcoming from a box-ful of bills beneath the counter. One dry goods man held an account against her for some $60 for wedding clothes, purchased at the time of her last matrimonial venture, while an undertaker put in his claim for burying her last husband. Before night all accounts were squared, and Mr. and Mrs. Lennox were able to leave town bearing the best wishes of their many friends for their future happiness. Lundy's terrace is at peace once more.

Victoria College Matters.

Victoria University has an interesting little colony of Japanese students in her halls at the present time. Owing to the great number of Victoria graduates teaching in the Japanese schools and preaching at Tokio and other cities in that great eastern island Empire, these young Japanese gentlemen seeking an education in western universities, have come to the alma mater of their instructors, "Old Vic." Mr. Juzo Komo, of Tokio, is now in his junior or third year in the institution, and intends, after graduating, to proceed to the John Hopkins University to take a post graduate course. Mr. Tsuki, of Tokio, is a freshman, and purposes taking a course in architecture at Cornell University. Dr. Kubayassi, of Tokio University, is now attending the Cobourg Collegiate Institute, and expects to enter Victoria College next autumn. They are all young gentlemen of knightly birth and abundant means. George C. Workman, M.A., Professor of Oriental Languages and Literature in the University of Victoria College, and at one time pastor of the Charlotte street Methodist church, has just had conferred upon by the University of Leipsic, Germany, the degree of doctor of philosophy, for original work in Oriental literature. This is the highest degree of honor for such work. Dr. Workman is expected to return home from Germany this week, and will received a hearty welcome from the Senate and students of old Vic. He is a native of this country and is a popular and efficient professor.

Keene.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

The last grand carnival of the season of the Keene Curling and Skating Rink Co., took place on Thursday Feb. 28th, and proved to be a grand success. Over three hundred were in attendance as the ice was in splendid condition. Everyone present seemed to derive enjoyment from the occasion. A very interesting part of the carnival was a curling match between "John Bull" and "Uncle Sam" resulting, of course, in a victory for "John Bull." Professor Smith furnished music for the crowd with the Highland Pipes. Some of the people could not keep their feet still at the sound of them. On account of some of the people in costume not handing in their names and character represented, at the door, a full list of those in costume cannot be procured. The following is a list of a few of those who were in costume:

The Independent Order of Good Templars of Keene, propose holding a grand concert on Wednesday, March 13th. As the committee of management are very energetic, there is bound to be a good concert. Come one, come all, and have a good time, if you miss it you will regret it. Doors open at 7 o'clock, concert commences at 7.30 p.m. Admission 15c., reserved seats 25c.

Police Court.

TUESDAY, March 5th.

Wm. Blatchford, charged with drunkenness, was fined $2.

Jas. E. Campbell, a Douro farmer, was charged by his son with insanity. The plaintiff stated that his father had been confined in an asylum twice before, and last week had attempted to throttle him, and otherwise acted in a strange manner. The defendant was dismissed, the evidence not being sufficient to convict him. Mr. C. W. Sawers for plaintiff; Mr. G. M. Roger for fendant.

Personal.

Mr. M. Tierney and bride are expected home to-night.

The EXAMINER has to thank Messrs. Crossley and Hunter for complimentary copies of their "Songs of Salvation."

Mr. S. R. Olmsted, representing the "Totem of Health" Company, London, Ont., is in town introducing this medicine to the people of Peterborough. His head quarters while in Peterborough will be at Mr. Schofield's drug store.

Mr. L. O. Bush, of Brockville, has been appointed agent for the British Empire Mutual Life Assurance Company here. Mr. Bush's success as an agent at Brockville has suggested his removal to an important centre like Peterborough.

The Calgary, N. W. T., Tribune says:—Mr. R. D. Beck, barrister, Winnipeg, and formerly of Peterborough, Ont., was in town last week. He is forming a partnership with Lougheed & McCarthy, and will take up his residence here.

News Nuggets.

—A meeting of the school board is called for this evening.

—The Lakefield carnival is to be held to-night. They'd better have roller skating.

—Dwyer's and Clancy's "Little Jim" and "Royal Jim" take part in the Collingwood races, which open to-day.

—Yesterday was the great settling up day of the year in financial circles, but there was very little extra business done at the Peterborough banks.

—Lieut. Stolliker, of the Peterborough corps of the Salvation Army, who went out with the Indian contingent, has been stationed in Southern India with Major Muse Bhai's division.

—The industrious sparrow is determined that the genealogical tree shall not decay. These plucky pests are already building their nests in the eaves.

—The Port Hope Times complains that the local baseball club has paid all its bills but the printer's. The intellectual is therefore the farthest remove from the legitimate province of baseball.

—The body of the Salvation Army girl killed at the St. George Railway accident has been identified as that of Maggie English a former inmate of the Marchmont Home, Belleville.

—The Belleville Intelligencer says that the Bay City curlers were beaten so badly at Peterborough and Keene that they refused to give the newspapers the scores. They must have taken it badly, indeed.

—Mr. C. Young, of Young's Point, has finished his lumbering operations in the vicinity of Burleigh Falls. The foreman, Mr. P. P. Young, states that they have taken out over 6,000 pieces. Mr. Young intends starting to cut shingles next week.

A Wise Precaution.

Messrs. Wilson and Morrison received the following letter from St. John's, N. B., written by a member of a Toronto firm: "SIRS,—Enclosed find my application for $10,000 in the Manufacturer's Accident Ins. Co. I did not intend to put this on until I saw you, but that terrible accident in Western Ontario makes me feel that railroading is getting to be a pretty dangerous business. These men from Woodstock who were killed were coming to Toronto on our business." * * * See Mr. Joseph McClelland who has charge of our accident department for full particulars as to rates.

MR. JOHN ANDERSON, Grassmere, Ont., writes: "The Vegetable Discovery you sent me is all gone, and I am glad to say that it has greatly benefited those who have used it. One man in particular says it has made him a new man, and he cannot say too much for its cleansing and curative qualities." w10

WHO KILLED ANNIS?

A Murder Mystery within Family History That is Puzzling Virginians.

CHARLOCK, Va., March 5.—The residents of Guilford Neck, at the extreme end of Accomack County, are much worked up over a murder mystery which the authorities seem unable to unravel. Cornelius Annis, a young man of 25, was the victim. While talking to Mrs. Elizabeth Taylor, in whose house he was boarding, some one from without fired through the window. Annis was within three feet of his assassin, and received the contents of the weapon in his left side. About two dozen buckshot entered his body, shattering his arm and tearing away half his side. The young man lingered until yesterday morning, when he died.

Mrs. Taylor has not lived with her husband for several months, a deed of separation having been signed by both. According to the provision of the deed which is recorded Taylor agreed to give his wife $200 and some personal property, in consideration of which she surrendered all her interest in his estate, and he further agreed not to visit, molest or speak to her, or enter any house where she was known to be, and to allow her full liberty to live where she pleased and to conduct any business she might like, just as if she were a single woman. Taylor subsequently consulted a lawyer with a view to getting an absolute divorce from his wife. Mrs. Taylor says her husband has recently been making overtures to her with a view to reconciliation, but she has repulsed all his advances. Annis has been boarding at the house since Taylor left. Taylor is a heavy-set man about 40 years old. His wife, who is supposed to be the cause of the trouble, is about 40 and plain looking. As yet there has been no clue to the murderer. It has only been a month since a brother of Taylor died suddenly from strychnine poisoning, and his wife is now in prison charged with murdering him. Her trial will take place sometime next week.

BURGESS DENIES IT ALL.

And Grace Irwin Aggravates Her Charge Against Him—$1500 Bail Demanded.

NEW YORK, March 5.—Grace Irwin, the 13-year-old girl who accused James Burgess of abducting her, was brought to the Harlem Police Court yesterday morning by Agent Stocking of the Children's Society to appear against Burgess. Her cousin, Miss Caroline Smyth, and Henry and Simeon Irwin, two grown brothers of Grace, were in court. The girl altered the charge by denying that she consented to Burgess' relations with her. Burgess now denied the whole story, and demanded an examination. It was set down for next Friday, with bail fixed at $2500.

The two brothers of Grace, who were not called upon to testify, lived with Miss Smyth until about six months ago. They said yesterday that their father was a surveyor in the employ of the English Government at Dublin, where they lived well until his death. Eight years ago Miss Smyth, a second cousin, sent for the sisters Helen and Grace to come to this country, promising to adopt them and give them a schooling. Afterward the boys came. Henry declares that while they lived with Grace they were drudges. Grace was often sent out, he says, to gather cinders and firewood in the neighborhood, and was kept for hours at a time scrubbing the floors. In the evenings he had to go with his sister to the houses in the neighborhood distributing circulars of the school, which often kept them out until 10 and 11 o'clock. He says the girl was whipped and was ill fed. Miss Smyth says that this is not true. Grace's hands are hard and callouned.

PORT ARTHUR NOTES.

A Rich Strike—$7000 to the Ton—Assay Office Burnt—Warm Weather.

PORT ARTHUR, March 4.—The West End Silver Mountain mine has made another rich strike, a splendid pay streak on the dump worked out, fully two feet, yielding ore in abundance assaying $7000 to the ton. So rich is the ore that drills have been discarded and the ore is coming out with picks.

The Badger mine has sent Thos. Marks & Co. a paper weight in the form of a solid silver brick weighing 37½ ounces.

The assay office of the Silver Mountain East mine was burned last week. The office and contents were a total loss.

The weather is extremely warm. The snow is all gone, causing loss and inconvenience to the lumbermen, who are unprepared for such a state of affairs. The ice in the bay and rivers is melting rapidly.

TURNBULL'S

The Flood of the Season's French and English Printed Calicoes is rolling in—white capped and aglow phosphorescent, color play. How the Priscellas of the past would joy to see them? Pretty as you have seen them, they were never so handsome before. Persian designs, leaves, buds, flowers, polka, dots, plain stripes, scrabbles and scrawls, angles and tangles. More than 300 different styles, small figures, large figures, and mourning designs, better printing was never done 'exquisite.' If you don't want to buy, don't pass the window or come in. Prices range from 6 to 15 cents.

The trouble with low grade Marseilles Bed Spreads has been loose threads at the back—lace, all right, but you didn't like the fiddle-string arrangement at the back, needn't. Here are $2.50 Marseilles Bed Spreads, full size and handsome patterns, with backs firm and well finished. Look at this honey-comb quilt for $1, which needs no apology for either size or weight.

Flannelettes—what are they? Are they all-wool? No they are mostly cotton, finished to imitate a Flannel, and especially adapted for childrens' dresses and ladies' wrappers. They consist of Cream Grounds, with pink, blue and cardinal Stripes, blue and white, pink and cream, pink and blue, and pink, cream and grey, some 18 patterns in all—the best quality being only 12½ cents a yard.

Opened out this week, a line of Linen Tablings, the maker of which is noted the world over. They are specially suited for every day wear—the warp is well twisted and they wash and iron well.

Before you hear from us again, I will have visited the wholesale markets where I will be on the look-out for Bargains for my Customers.

Thirty Years Paying Rent in Peterborough.

I frequently hear statements akin to above, followed by remarks of deep regret for having missed many golden opportunities of buying whole lots at a price they would now have to pay for one foot of the same land. Buying property in Peterborough is the safest kind of a safe and profitable investment. I have at present cheap homes, medium class homes and a few exceedingly fine Residences and grounds some of which were built for home comforts, regardless of cost. Unavoidable circumstances have now caused those to be offered for immediate sale much under value. I commence at $475, for good house and large lot. I can suit any reasonable buyer. I have also good value in Market Gardens and Farms.

THE DOMINION FINANCES.

HON. G. E. FOSTER MAKES HIS FIRST BUDGET SPEECH.

No Changes in the Tariff—The National Debt—Progress of the Dominion—Sir Richard Cartwright's Criticisms.

OTTAWA, March 5.—Hon. G. E. Foster, Minister of Finance, delivered his inaugural Budget speech this afternoon and this evening. He spoke for nearly four hours. The galleries were crowded and there was a good attendance of members. Mr. Foster spoke very rapidly but clearly and distinctly. As is his wont, he frequently dropped the subject of figures to branch out into a laudation of the probabilities and possibilities of this great country. His words throughout were words of encouragement and hope. He made many comparisons between the condition of Canada, the United States and other colonies of the Empire and continental countries generally; as to the debt of these nations, their ability to pay, the resources and the energies of the people, and in nearly all cases he argued that this country compared favorably with any of them. Of course the speech was a great mass of figures from beginning to end, broken at intervals by incidents of finance and deductions. The House listened attentively to the minister's exposition, some more so than Sir Richard Cartwright. Sir Charles Tupper, Mr. Foster's predecessor in office, was on the floor of the House during the delivery of the speech, and when the six o'clock recess arrived he congratulated the hon. gentleman on his presentation to the House.

The striking feature of the Budget, of course, is that there are to be no changes in the tariff. All those trips of deputations of lumber men, millers, iron men, manufacturers, etc., have been for naught so far as to-day's utterances by the Finance Minister go to show. To none of these deputations did the Government show any indication of altering the present imposts. This will be of especial interest to the flour millers and lumber men. The former wanted the duty on flour increased from 50 cents to $1 per barrel and the lumber men wanted the export duty of $3 per thousand on sawlogs reduced or removed altogether.

The Minister of Finance at once gave the indication that there were to be no tariff changes, because he moved the House into supply instead of ways and means. Had he made the latter motion the changes would have followed at the end of the speech. Besides the Government did not want the telegraph lines choked out of the country and so there up until after the cabinet bodies were closed, as is usual when important tariff changes are to be announced on Budget day.

Mr. Foster opened with a complimentary reference to the mass of acknowledged ability and experience far greater than his own who have preceded him in the office and asked for the generous indulgence and sympathy of the House in this his first experience. Canada today, he said, had every reason to survey her past record with pride and to step forward into the future with confidence of peace, plenty, prosperity and continued greatness. Canada asked no concealment of her record, no flattery, and whatever merits or demerits his statement would have it would have the merit of candor and frankness.

Referring to the estimates of the revenue of the year 1887-8 he gave the following statement:

	Estimate.	Actual.	Difference
Customs	$23,000,000	$22,105,228	$105,228
Excise	6,150,000	6,071,486	278,513
Miscellaneous	7,650,000	7,731,050	181,050
Totals	$36,800,000	$35,908,469	$91,536

The estimated expenditure had been $37,000,000 and the actual expenditure $36,718,464, leaving a difference of $281,536 to the good, so that the actual deficit was only $910,051 in place of the million dollars estimated. It must be remembered, however, that though there was this deficit there had been set off in sinking fund $1,992,077, so that if we had not thus set off the debt there would be a surplus of $1,120,026. The items of expenditure were as follows:

Capital Expenditure.

Railroads and canals	$ 2,788,704
Public works	1,227,111
Dominion lands	125,047
North west rebellion	480,838
Total	$ 4,427,460
Railroad subsidies	1,027,041
Redemption of debt	2,165,636
Total capital account	$ 6,620,139

The net debt stands as follows:

July 1, 1887	$227,313,911
July 1, 1888	234,631,359
Increase	$ 7,317,447

This increase is caused by expenditure on capital account.

For the present year, 1888-'89, the estimated receipts had been $36,800,000. For the eight months concluded the actual receipts were $24,616,766. He now estimated for the remaining four months receipts amounting to $13,304,000 and the amended estimate of receipts for this year now stood as follows:

Customs	$23,333,971
Excise	7,652,143
Miscellaneous	7,988,130
Total	$38,691,294

Or, to be within the mark, say $38,500,000. The expenditure would amount, he estimated, to about $36,500,000, leaving a probable surplus of $1,900,000. This had not arisen from any increased taxation but showed an increased ability to consume and increased prosperity in the country.

The capital expenditure for 1888-'89 would be, estimating for the four months to come:

Railways and Canals	$2,773,567
Public Works	885,709
Dominion Lands	169,609
North west Rebellion	120,511
Railway Subsidies	1,123,456
Redemption of Debt	2,084,389
Total	$7,537,235

He thought that this was the last rebellion expenditure that would be heard of.

There was necessarily far less of certainty about the year 1889-'90, but the very favorable outlook for trade gave him confidence in making the following calculations, the increases in which were based simply on increase in population of my nearly 2 per cent

Probable Income 1889-'90.

Customs	$23,800,000
Excise	7,125,000
Miscellaneous	8,150,000
Total	$39,175,000

The estimates now before the House amount to $35,400,000 and the supplementaries would add enough an exceedingly high figure, so that the total would probably not be above $36,500,000, leaving a probable surplus of $2,675,000.

The estimates brought down made a very satisfactory showing, he held. He reviewed the items as shown in the printed estimates. Among the increases was a heavy amount for the Intercolonial Railway, which was accounted for by the purchase of new locomotives, rolling stock, and he thought the increased receipts would do much to make up for it.

With reference to the condition of the debt the figures of net debt were:

In 1885	$[illegible]
In 1887	224,361,359
In 1889	[illegible]

From 1880 to 1888 the Canadian Pacific Railway had been completed and yet the [illegible] of the debt, as enumerated by Hon. [illegible] was [illegible] by 14 [illegible] per head between those years.

Comparing our debt with that of the United States, while the comparisons made with a view to discouraging the Canadian Government were to the effect that the United States were in a more favorable position, the facts were otherwise. Comparison could not fairly be made, because the United States had assumed no debts of the provinces, gave no subsidies to provinces, paid a very small proportion of the cost of administration of justice, the militia was kept up by the several states, the penitentiaries were not in charge of the Federal power, the Governors were not at the charge of the Federation. In connection with this comparison the following statement of payments on account of the consolidated fund from July 1, 1867, to June 30, 1888, would be interesting:

Subsidies to provinces	$ 72,316,089
Interest on public debt	147,304,634
Administration of justice	16,823,342
Immigration and quarantine	4,471,631
Militia and defence	23,353,626
Penitentiaries	4,611,626
Salaries of governors	2,359,613
Assumed debts of provinces	166,472,086
Total	$472,573,647

If Canada had set out on the same basis as the United States she would have saved:

Assumed debts	$166,462,086
Subsidies	72,316,089
Interest on debt	76,620,662
Penitentiaries	4,611,626
Salaries of governors	2,359,613
Militia and defence (?)	10,353,812
Administration of justice (?)	5,450,771
Immigration and quarantine	4,471,631
Total	$342,565,615

Our net debt is but $234,631,359, so that if Canada had set out on the same basis as the United States from the first she would not only have no debt to-day but she would have a surplus of $44,000,000. Just as soon as this statement went before the people it would remove a stock argument of the opponents of the Government who argued that the United States occupied a more advantageous position than Canada with respect to her debt.

Taxation was of two kinds, voluntary and involuntary; for instance, hundreds of thousands, if not millions, in this country did not use intoxicating liquors or tobacco. The tax on these a man might pay or not, just as he chose. As out of the total of $35,000,000 taxation in 1888, $8,000,000 was paid on these two articles of luxury, the involuntary taxation was found to be only $3.66 per head out of the total of $6.66 per head. But the per capita mode of reckoning was not a fair one and overstated the amount of taxes levied upon the poor man. Canada had within her own boundaries the great staples required for the sustenance of her people. A well-to-do man of luxurious taste, if he went to New York and there purchased his furniture, his musical instruments, stationery, plate, jewelry, wines, silks, carriages, carpets, etc., upon a modest outfit of his establishment might easily be taxed $1700; but in the case of the farmer he grows most of the articles of his food, the raw material for his clothing is grown or is brought in without tax, is farming implements are made in this country, his fuel is found here in inexhaustible quantities; all the great staples required are untaxed. The case of the artisan is similar.

Canada's peculiar natural advantages placed the taxation most heavily where it shall rest, upon the man of means. The customs returns showed that one-third of the total imports for home consumption were free of duty and also—that more than 300 articles of raw material came in duty free. The United States had during the past 21 years paid an average of $6.64 per head and the average of Canada was $1.70 per head less; that is, that every Canada's taxation as heavy as that of the United States she would have paid for Government under $123,000,000 more than she has paid.

"Is this thing to go on forever?" he asked. "Are we to go on increasing the debt until the amount of taxation taken from the people?" Canada was to-day in a position to fairly answer the question. Taking the next three years, he estimated that between now and July 1, 1892, the capital expenditures would be:

Canals	$2,088,421
Railways	1,300,000
Public Works	697,000
Railway Subsidies	1,865,708
Reduction of the debt	2,417,327
Dominion lands	300,000
Total	$7,856,880

The redemption of debt would bring the capital expenditure up to $12,700,849. On the other side he estimated a surplus of $6,000,000 in the three years. Then $6,000,000 would be placed to the credit of the sinking fund and that there would be a balance still on hand of loans now made of $3,500,000, making a total of $14,500,849 to offset the capital expenditure of $12,756,849 and leave a surplus of $743,000. The enormous capital expenditure, as that from now to 1892 there would, he believed, be not a dollar added to the public debt. After 1892 he believed that the country ought to go on for a series of years without increasing the debt one cent.

The loan secured to the £4,000,000 loan just floated in London and painted out that it was one of the most favorable loans ever negotiated. It not only made a gratifying comparison with other Canadian loans, but also with loans floated in 1888 in the London market by other countries. There had been some criticism in the press about the amount asked for, which was represented as excessive, but in view of the fact that temporary loans would otherwise have been required for works in progress and in view, also of the exceptionally favorable condition of the money market, it was, after grave consideration, deemed advisable to take the loan of $4,000,000.

The rate of exchange being in our favor the money was exchanged in New York and was there put into the hands of four Canadian banks at the best rate that could be obtained—1¼ per cent. It had been intended to exchange it back to London about Jan. 1, the tables of exchange for a series of years showing that that would be probably profitable. Abnormal conditions, however, upset this calculation and it was found that it would be unprofitable to exchange it to London. The money was now on deposit in Canadian banks at 3 and 3½ per cent. interest.

The whole transaction showed that the surplus had cost for the year rather less than 4 per cent., or less than a temporary loan would have cost.

The last hour of the Finance Minister's speech was devoted to showing the progress that Canada was making. During the past year her commerce had progressed beyond the average. Imports were smaller, prices were higher. Manufacturing industries were in a healthy state, having worked off their large surplus stocks. There was a prospect of an advance of wages in the large manufactories. The shipping interests would be glad to hear that there was a prospect of an increase in freights.

The spirit of foreign trade, he contended, was developing in this country. In 1878 the people had decided that if we could not get reciprocity with our neighbors we would build up a commerce of our own and then reach out for foreign commerce, and the solid prosperity engendered since that time now enabled Canada to commence to make her way in the markets of the world. It had always been the policy of the Government to extend trade relations with other countries, but if the country to the south of us would not deal upon fair lines, it was Canada's duty to stand upon her own resources.

There was a great country in South America ready to trade with us, there was an opening for permanent and profitable trade with the West Indies, and the Government had decided to assist in the development of this trade by granting such a subsidy as would make rapid communication possible. To the east of us were China and Japan, and our Government had promised to meet this with a subsidy to a line of steamers already subsidized by the Imperial Government. To-day the surplus of many of our cotton mills found a market in those countries. The Government was also prepared to give aid for the establishment of a direct line of steamships between our west coast and Australia.

Though our Atlantic service had been good in the past, it was not as good as it might be, and the Government was considering steps to make it more nearly equal to the service running to New York. The proper Canadian policy was that we should look first to the Dominion's development and live at peace with other countries, but at the same time no blandishments from without or specious pleas from within would induce her to hand over her commercial government to any nation outside of Canada.

Speaking of the taxation of the people, the Finance Minister contended the taxes paid by any people was the gateway through which they passed to progress. It was an indication of [illegible] prosperity. [illegible] Canada could take [illegible] taxation had visited Ottawa during the past few weeks for the purpose of securing changes in the tariff. The claims of many of them were good, but the Government, after due consideration, had decided to continue on the line of the existing tariff arrangement. If there is any readjustment it will not be significant nor of an important character.

Sir Richard Cartwright followed. He said the protective system is wrong in this respect, that the burden of taxation is borne by the masses. Mr. Foster labors under a delusion when he says the taxation borne by the Canadian workingman is lower than the taxation paid by the British workingman. Excise duty in England is higher than in Canada, but the poor man there is not obliged to indulge in luxuries. Taxation in Canada on the whole is 600 per cent. higher than in England. A high tariff is not necessarily the only highway to national progress.

Continuing Sir Richard endorsed the proposal of the Government to extend its foreign trade relations. Dealing with their financial relations with the Canadian Pacific Railway he laughed at the Finance Minister's mode of bookkeeping in making the showing he had. These accounts had been liberally "touched" to suit the purpose, if not in a fraudulent way then to suit party exigencies.

Sir Richard continued his arraignment of the Government and its policy until 11.45, when he moved this amendment to go into supply:

That all the words after "that" be struck out and that it be resolved that "Mr. Speaker do not now leave the chair but that in the present condition of affairs, and in view of the recent action of the House of Representatives of the United States, it is expedient that steps should be taken to ascertain on what terms and conditions arrangements can be effected with the United States for the purpose of securing full and unrestricted reciprocity of trade therewith.

Hon. C. H. Tupper moved the adournment of the debate. The House adjourned at 11.45 until Tuesday afternoon, and to-morrow being Ash Wednesday there will be no sitting.

It is expected that notwithstanding the statement of the Finance Minister there will be a few minor alterations in the tariff.

THE FUNNY FENIANS.

And Their Highly Humorous Demand for Information.

PHILADELPHIA, March 4.—Parnell branch of the Irish National League will this week pursuit to President Harrison and Secretary Blaine a resolution adopted by it yesterday, and which will be sent to every branch in the United States, urging joint action by Congress requiring the State Department to demand of the English Government a statement of how far it has carried on its spy system, military and otherwise, in this country. The action is based on the testimony of LeCaron before the Parnell Commission. The resolution alleges that spies paid by Great Britain are now employed in the government departments and in the United States army, which is equivalent to a declaration of war. It advises a demand upon England for the names and aliases of all its spies in this country.

Harrison's Cabinet.

WASHINGTON, March 5.—The President sent to the Senate to-day the following nominations:

Secretary of State—James G. Blaine of Maine.
Secretary of the Treasury—Wm. Windom of Minnesota.
Secretary of War—Redfield Proctor of Vermont.
Attorney-General—W. H. H. Miller of Indiana.
Postmaster-General—John Wanamaker of Pennsylvania.
Secretary of the Navy—Benjamin F. Tracy of New York.
Secretary of the Interior—J. W. Noble of Missouri.
Secretary of Agriculture—Jeremiah M. Rusk of Wisconsin.

The nominations were confirmed in a ten-minute session of the Senate.

A HAMILTONIAN GETS INTO TROUBLE IN BUFFALO.

Projected New Industry in the Ambitious City—Manitoba's Legislature Prorogued—Looking for Tassels in Winnipeg.

HAMILTON, March 5.—H. C. Hickok, who used to run the St. Charles restaurant here and now manages a saloon in Buffalo, is in trouble. A few weeks ago a Canadian horse dealer named Benjamin F. Olmstead, who knew Hickok in this city, arrived in Buffalo and went to board at his place. Olmstead carried over $1100 with him and told Hickok about it. In the early part of last week Hickok asked Olmstead to lend him the $1100 for a little while, as he wanted to make a bet with a Broadway saloonkeeper that he could show up that amount. His request was granted and Hickok made a bet with his man and won $10. He managed to give his Canadian friend the slip, and soon after left the city with a horse and rutter. Olmstead complained to the police about the matter and Hickok was followed by officers and found in Aurora. The money was not found and he told the officer that he had lost it, which is not believed, however. Hickok was placed under arrest and was brought up for trial on Monday. He was tried on the charge of grand larceny in the second degree. The evidence in the case showed that Olmstead had willingly loaned the money to Hickock, and the judge held that under those circumstances the case was one for the civil courts and not the criminal, and the prisoner was discharged. Olmstead was lucky in regaining $600 out of the amount lost.

Annie Russell, who attempted to take her own life by means of poison on Saturday night, is still in a very low condition at the City Hospital and her recovery is doubtful.

Four acres of land, east of the city, part of the Land estate, immediately south of the Grand Trunk Railway track and opposite Williams' coal oil factory, have been transferred to R. McKechnie, the well-known manufacturer. Mr. McKechnie will erect on the site large machine shops, for the manufacture of various kinds of machinery for iron and wood work. The buildings, it is understood, will cover two-thirds of the ground. Locomotives may also be manufactured there. Employment will be given to about 400 men. The erection of the buildings will be commenced early this year.

Important changes are being made in connection with the well-known firm of L. D. Sawyer & Co., manufacturers of threshing machinery, engines, etc., by the retirement of L. D. Sawyer and Jonathan Ames, who have disposed of their interest to H. A. Massey, president of the Massey Manufacturing Company of Toronto.

SOUTHWOLD'S SCOURGE.

The Smallpox Epidemic—Twenty Cases in the Vicinity of Fingal.

ST. THOMAS, March 5.—Almost the sole topic of conversation here is the smallpox epidemic in Southwold. The City Council and the Board of Health are fully awake to the urgency of prompt and vigorous action, and a rigid quarantine will likely be established.

Dr. Bryce, secretary of the Provincial Board of Health, who has just returned from Fingal, reports that there are eleven houses infected, and there have been twenty-seven cases up to date. There are now some twenty cases in the township and village. The doctor advised the prompt arrest of any infected or exposed persons who entered St. Thomas. There is now one case in Sheddon, that of Judson Burwell, livery stable keeper, who caught it from the robes of one of his cutters, which had been hired by a young man who attended the fatal dance at Euetice's. The hotel at Sheddon is closed.

A Cocoa Hulk.

GLOUCESTER, Mass., March 5.—The schooner Wm. H. Toye was seized on Friday at Beaver Harbor, N.B., for alleged violation of the customs laws. A fine of $400 was imposed and paid before the vessel was released. Captain Riley denies that he was smuggling or otherwise violating the law.

THE ORIGIN OF REVIVALS.

Begun by One or Two Earnest Workers.

Continuation of Messrs. Hunter and Crossley's Meetings—The Interest not Flagging — Special Requests for Prayer.

About as large an audience as that of Sunday evening gathered in the George Street Church last night, and the services were very interesting as usual. Mr. Crossley began the meeting alone, and sang hymn No. 125, "My Precious Bible." He sang it, he said, especially for a lady from Port Hope, who, one night when he and his brother were singing it as a duet in that town, was so impressed by it that it led to her conversion. She had not been inside a church for four years previously. The lady was present at this meeting, and he would sing it for her first, and the rest of the people afterwards.

Several hymns were sung, and Mr. Hunter, coming in, offered up prayer. Rev. Mr. Pearson, in introducing the collection taking, which is always done at an early stage of the meeting, impressed upon the congregation that though the service was held in a Methodist church, it was not a Methodist meeting by any means. Their object was to save the unconverted of any or no church in town. And he was pleased to see that there was an earnest enquiry for God running through the town, from which he hoped for great results.

NOW TO WORK.

After a couple of more hymns, Mr. Hunter addressed the meeting. He said, in these meetings we don't want you to look so much to the evangelists, or run around talking of the evangelists or saying which one you like best (because the ladies all like me). Let the evangelists go. Talk about Jesus Christ. Don't go about praising up the evangelists. We are not here to get your money but to do you good. Talk about Jesus and his love to the unsaved, and as soon as we get into this general enquiry for God, Mr. Pearson spoke of, we will turn the town upside down. I don't know what the bottom would be like, but I know the top is very nice. Let me tell you you are the most intelligent congregation we have met for a long time. We have come to the conclusion that Peterborough is one of the best towns in Canada. Of course we can't say much while we're here, but when we get away we'll let the people know what we think of you.

HOW REVIVALS BEGIN.

Mr. Hunter then gave one of his short sermons in a nutshell, reading the 15th chapter of II. Chronicles from the 7th verse and commenting freely upon it. This was the account of a great revival brought about by the spirit of God acting on one man. A revival, as a general thing, began with one or two persons, and seldom with a whole church. For instance, the village blacksmith who shut up his shop and began a work that resulted in the evangelization of the whole town, and the two old Scotch ladies in South Virginia, who met together by themselves at first, but God blessed their labors and through them a great revival was begun. Then one man began a revival, and the spirit of God made him courageous. Some people to-day say, "Oh, I can do nothing." Not so; Jehovah was on their side and He would never fail. The chapter read referred to idols. There were idols in the heart and home to-day. Some people make their homes their idols, some their churches. Those latter go about speaking of "my church, my church," nothing but "my church." Don't talk about the church, he said, but talk of Jesus. Mr. Hunter said he wished there was a Roman Catholic priest in the audience that he might come forward and be welcomed. They liked people of all denominations to be here put in these services. Everybody came to their services—black, white, grey and grisly. A great many Roman Catholics come to their services and were brought to Christ. The 12th verse said that "they entered into a covenant to seek the Lord God of their fathers with all their heart and all their soul." That was what the people here should do—wives covenant for their husbands, parents for their children, ministers for all the people in this town. In conclusion Mr. Hunter left the chapter with his hearers to read at their leisure at home, and reflect upon the truths contained in it.

FOR EPISCOPALIANS.

Mr. Crossley then sang "Abide with me" to music composed by Rev. H. F. Light, an Episcopalian clergyman. He sang it he said specially for his Episcopalian friends, for they had Episcopalians attend all their services. In Winnipeg it was said that half their congregation were Episcopalians, in St. Thomas they had 120, in Ottawa between one and two hundred—from Lady Macdonald down the Episcopalians took a great interest in their meetings.

REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

Two requests for prayer were then announced. There was one particularly touching request for prayer for a person with a cloud over her life, a father asked prayers for his eldest son, a young man for himself, another one requested the prayers of the congregation for a father and brother who were wandering from Christ, a father asked intercession in behalf of two sons, another one for a person who professed to be a Christian but attended places of questionable amusement, for the conversion of a father and mother, and for a brother who was indifferent to religion and fast becoming a victim to sin.

THE WAY OF HOLINESS.

Mr. Crossley then made a short address upon the subject of the way that leads to the better land, taking for his text the 8th and 10th verses of the 35th [illegible] Isaiah: "And an highway shall be there, and a way, and it shall be called the way of holiness; the unclean shall not pass over it; but it shall be for those: the wayfaring men, though fools, shall not err therein. No lion shall be there, or any ravenous beast shall go up thereon, it shall not be found there; but the redeemed shall walk there. And the ransomed of the Lord shall return, and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads; they shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away."

This way of holiness was the way to the better land—an expensive one to Him who laid it, but the cost was made because of infinite love. It was a free way and a holy way. Some persons tried to limit a certain section of the way as the way of holiness, but in so doing they assigned to the devil nine-tenths of the Christians of the world. As the Bible says, the way of holiness is the way to heaven, and every consecrated Christian was treading it; no limitations could be made at all. Then it was a plain way—even the way-faring men, though fools, shall not err therein. It was the way of

SURRENDER, TRUST AND PEACE.

A great many people blundered by seeking the peace before they surrendered to God and trusted in Him. They wanted to feel that the Lord received them before they yielded. They should surrender themselves to the Lord in the faith that whosoever cometh to Him, He will in no wise cast out. Then it was a safe way, with no lions in the path, and by the grace of God He can keep you. Lastly, it was a happy way. Mr. Crossley urged Christians not to hang their heads like bulrushes, as if their religion was saddening. Show everyone that it was a happy experience, and that it was good for young and old alike. In conclusion, Mr. Crossley related his own experiences on the way of holiness in a style similar to the Pilgrim's Progress, interlarding appropriate hymns to designate the different steps in his faith. He urged the unconverted to start out upon this way of holiness that would lead them to a joyful eternity hereafter.

Mr. Hunter brought the meeting to a close by asking those who had been 50, 40, 30, 20, 15, and 5 years respectively on this way to rise up, and his request was answered by a great many. Then he made a stirring appeal to those who had determined to make a start for Christ to stand up, and some 30 responded.

About half the congregation remained to the after-meeting, and a large number went forward to the anxious bench.

NOTES.

Song books are sold at the beginning of the services in the churches.

An enthusiastic meeting of Christian workers was held in the Baptist church Tuesday afternoon, and another similar one will be held Thursday afternoon.

A boisterous baby in one of the transept wings last night created some confusion and interrupted the worship of a good many.

BARKIS IS WILLIN'.

Mr. Gladstone Says the Irish Party is Free to Meet Tory Advances.

LONDON, March 5.—A correspondent has interviewed Mr. Gladstone in reference to the proposal made by Mr. John Aird, the famous contractor and Tory member for Paddington, a colleague and friend of Lord Randolph Churchill, who writes to The Times suggesting, in the interests of the country's business, the appointment of a small committee, commanding the confidence of all parties, to agree on just steps towards meeting Ireland's demand for local government. Aird said his letter was quite spontaneous, but he is convinced it expresses the views of a large section of the Tory party and that the Tory leaders say Ireland shall have a local government. He does not see why they should not meet Mr. Parnell's moderate attitude by taking the first step in that direction. Mr. Gladstone says he will watch the development of the movement with a friendly interest. He has always hoped the Tories would settle the question. He will certainly throw no obstacles in their way. He also holds that the Irish party is perfectly free to meet Tory advances. Their first duty will be to Ireland, not to the Liberal party. Mr. Gladstone seemed in excellent health, though anxious, owing to the serious illness of his eldest son. He showed no petty partisan feeling, only a patriotic desire to end the controversy, which, he said, like the corn law agitation, was wasting precious years of the country's life. Mr. Aird's scheme may come to nothing, but it is interesting as showing the reaction in Mr. Parnell's favor caused by "Pigottism."

Gladstone Thinks He Will Soon Come In.

LONDON, March 5.—Although Gladstone only spoke of a year or two hence as the possible date of an appeal to the country in his speech, he entertains a strong belief in his return to power being almost imminent. One day last week he was discovered in a well-known London drawing-room deep in the pages of The Morning Post, a paper which is carefully tabooed in James'-square, while waiting for the mistress of the house. On putting the paper down he recognized his fellow-caller and said cheerily: "I must come in. Lord Salisbury and The Times will fall together."

The Parnell Commission.

LONDON, March 5.—The Parnell Commission resumed its sittings this morning. Attorney-General Webster narrated the facts in relation to Pigott's communication from Madrid to Mr. Soames. He stated that another letter from Pigott had been received to-day. It had been posted on March 3. This letter was sent to Mr. Soames' office for "Mr. Pumsaby." It was not read in court.

Parnell is Grateful.

LONDON, March 5.—Mr. Parnell, finding it impossible to respond to the many letters he has received from Europe and America congratulating him upon the collapse of The Times' case against him, desires through the press to heartily thank the writers of the letters.

A Tale Completed.

NEW YORK, March 5.—The Times has the following cable: Fred. Maguire, who furnished Houston with the money and was the third partner in the amazingly ambitious, amazingly fatuous plot now laid bare, deserves an obituary like not less than Pigott. He it was who wrote three years ago what is known as "the bloody thumb-mark pamphlet," in which the ladies of the Land League were described as a historical counterpart of the association of heroine which was so active in Paris during the French Revolution. He was not killed for this, but he lived on the high favor of the Castle crew in Dublin and came to London last week to help swear to the authenticity of the forged letters. Just when proof of their debased origin came to light Maguire suddenly died.

The doctors first said he choked to death. Now they report that it was fatty degeneration of the heart, and the questions which were asked in Parliament concerning the suspected poison failed to secure any intelligent investigation as to whether there is aught of truth in these suspicions. Maguire is dead and now Pigott is dead, and tall, slender and well-groomed young Mr. Houston is the only survivor of the group who planned and planted this foul conspiracy upon the cradleless London Times. Well may we wonder what the next act in this loquald, sinful tragedy will be.

Pigott's Homicide Discovered.

LONDON, March 5.—English detectives sent to Madrid to-day identified the remains of Pigott in the presence of the British consul, who ordered that the body be interred.

A High Valuation.

"If there was only one bottle of Hagyard's Yellow Oil in Manitoba, I would give one hundred dollars for it," writes Philip H. Brant, of Monteith, Manitoba, after having used it for a severe wound and for frozen fingers, with, as he says, "astonishing good results." 2w10d

A Dreadful Doom.

To be unable to satisfy hunger without being distressed by heartburn, indigestion, sick stomach, dizziness or faintness, seems a dreadful doom. All who suffer thus will find prompt relief and permanent cure in Burdock Blood Bitters. B. B. B. positively cures dyspepsia in any form. 2w10d

SCROFULOUS ULCERS.

James E. Richardson, Custom House, New Orleans on each says:—"In 1870 Scrofulous Ulcers broke out on my body until I was a mass of corrupt ism. Everything known to the medical faculty was tried in vain. I became a mere wreck. At times could not lift my hands to my head, could not turn in bed; was in constant pain, and looked upon life as a curse. No relief or cure in ten years. In 1888 I heard of the CUTICURA REMEDIES, used them and was perfectly cured."

It appeared that the fugitive knew this. At all events, as if suddenly realising his peril, he turned and ran straight toward Storm, resolved to draw his fire, apparently, and by confusing his aim to have a better chance of escape. Storm's ready rifle flew up to his shoulder instantly, and Harding saw the pale blue ring of smoke and heard the quick report. Still the fugitive sped on. He was plainly unscathed, or in any case not disabled; and in his hand there now flashed a bright something which Harding knew was a bowie knife. With that, although the combatants were a mile away, Harding seized a revolver and dashed at his highest speed down the hill. Almost at the same moment there also started in company from Bullion Flat three figures on horseback! These were Miss Tinsel, the "Demon," Mr. Bellario and Judge Carboy. All who were now making for the scene of the combat heard in sharp repetition five or six shots from revolvers; but after the last of these all was still. When they got to the spot they found Jack Storm fainting from loss of blood, but hurt only with flesh wounds; and they were told that the other man, his opponent, was mortally wounded, and had been taken, by his own request, up on the mountain side, among the redwoods, to die.

With a choking cry Miss Tinsel galloped on, and in a few moments Chester Harding and she were again face to face over the dying man's body. Ghastly white as he was, all dabbled with blood, and the foam oozing from his lips, her lover at once knew Jane's visitor of the night before. What had happened had been hurriedly revealed to Harding—in broken whispers by the bystanders—before Jane came up.

The man had robbed several rooms at the "Bella Union" during the night, and had succeeded in gathering a large sum. Among the treasures stolen were all the loose funds belonging to the Combination troupe, the night's winnings of Mr. Copperas' faro bank and Miss Flo Montague's diamonds. But just as the robber, toward daylight, was on the point of making off in safety, he met a lion in the path in Jack Storm. It happened that Jack wanted to have a talk with his partner, Harding, and, as they were then very busy on the claim, made up his mind to compass this purpose bright and early, before getting to work. Stumbling on the marauder, the latter was secured after a struggle, and "the boys" speedily determined to make an example of him. The man begged for a chance of life, and after some debate, had been given the option of the halter or running the gauntlet, with 300 yards' start, in the way we have described. In the subsequent struggle he had been shot through the lungs, and terribly cut with his own bowie knife—wrested from him by Jack Storm—and his life was now fast ebbing away.

As she came up Jane sprang from her horse, and threw herself on the ground beside the dying man. They had propped his head on a hillock of turf, and some charitable soul had brought water from the river. Judge Carboy quickly put a flask of brandy to the sufferer's lips, and he opened his eyes:

Threw herself on the ground beside the dying man.

"Ja—Jane," he gasped, "my pretty Jane—this is the end—the end of it—a dog's death—and deserved; too—but—I—always loved you!"

She burst into tears and began sobbing over him and fondling his head.

"Don't, darling—don't, little Jenny—it won't be long—I am better away—better for you—there—there! I'm sliding away somewhere—and"——

His voice failed, and his dark face began to grow blue. The doctor, who had ridden hastily up, forced between the man's teeth some strong restorative.

"I want you to remember always—that I was drunk when I did it—drunk and crazy. I was bad—vile—but not so bad as that. Don't tell who—who I am. It will only disgrace you—only disgrace you—I'm going, little Jenny"——

"Oh, father! father!" and the poor child bowed down her pretty head on the breast of the wretched thief and murderer, and wept as if her heart would break.

"No—no," he muttered; "no, little Jenny, I'm not worth it. Only—don't think worse—worse of me than I deserve. Perhaps mother—in heaven—has forgiven me! She knows—knows—I was mad when I did it."

"Yes—yes—I shall remember," whispered she, "always. Now don't talk more—not now."

"No—I shan't talk—much more"—a strange wan smile came over his face—"not much more, little Jenny." He put up his hand and stroked her sunny hair.

"Tell them about this last—that I was desperate—I had broke jail—knew the officers were on my track—and was penniless. Give me—more—brandy. So. Why, I can't see you any more, little Jenny—and yet it is morning, isn't it, not night?" He gasped for breath and clutched feebly at the air. "Kiss me—little Jenny—me—mercy—Lord Jesus—better—better times—hereafter"

A shudder, and the man was dead, and Jane was left all alone in the world. Poor, besotted, frantic Michael Green, all sin scorched as he was, had passed from the judgment of men to the more merciful judgment beyond. Yet the orphan it alone licked neither crime-

bring to the surface every latent pain. A change of even a few degrees marks the difference between comfort and pain to many persons. Happily disease now holds less sway. Science is continually bringing forward new remedies which successfully combat disease. Polson's Nervilline—nerve pain cure—has proved the most successful pain relieving remedy known. Its application is wide, for it is equally efficient in all forms of pain, whether internal or external. Ten and 25 cents a bottle, at druggists. 6dw10

Partly Gave Up.

"In the year 1885 I coughed for six months, and having unsuccessfully tried many remedies, I partly gave up, thinking I had consumption. At last I tried Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam, less than one bottle of which cured me, leaving me as well as ever I was." Henry W. Carse, Wabash, Ont. 2w10d.

Nothing Like It.

"I was troubled with liver complaint for a good many years, but was cured by one bottle of Burdock Blood Bitters. I have never found any medicine to help me like B. B. B., in fact one bottle made a complete cure." W. J. Best, Parkhill, Ont. 2w10d

Common Croup

is often fatal when not remedied in time. Leslie B. Nicholson, 19 Wellesley avenue, Toronto, says:—"As a quick cure for croup, colds, sore throat, chilblains, etc., I can recommend Hagyard's Yellow Oil." It is a sure cure. Directions accompany each bottle. 2w10d

Why People Wonder

How it is W. J. Morrow sells his teas and all other lines so cheap.—well, he buys in large quantities owing to his extensive trade turns over his goods quickly, as he is not so anxious for large profits as other houses are, and does the largest trade of any grocery house in town. Something new—our 5 lb. Japan for $1.00. See our advertisement in another column.

The School Board.

There was no organized meeting of the school board last night. The reporters the secretary and the following members put in an appearance:—Messrs. Dumble, Hill, English, O'Meara, Deane, Hamilton, Barnham and Rutherford. These were enough to form a quorum but there were not enough present at one time to constitute a legal meeting.

St. Patrick's Day.

A meeting of the Land League was held last night, when further arrangements were made for the grand concert and lecture in honor of St. Patrick's Day on the night of Monday, March 18th, in the opera house. The best local talent will be secured, besides some noted singers from a distance. Mr. J. J. Curran, Q.C., M.P., of Montreal, the famous Irish orator of Canada, will deliver the lecture.

St. John's Church.

There was a very good attendance at the 11 o'clock services in St. John's this morning This evening the series of special services will begin, the services to be followed by addresses delivered by visiting clergymen. Rev. W. C. Allen, of Millbrook, a former curate of St. John's, will give the address this evening, upon the subject of "St. Paul as an Example of Christian Consecration." There will be daily services during Lent at 4.15 p.m., except Wednesdays and Fridays, when the services will be held at the usual hours.

A Brakeman Killed.

Last night a brakeman on a Midland freight train, named Louis Radgerow, was horribly mangled and killed between Uxbridge and Goodwood. He was missed at Goodwood station, and the conductor, catching the express train as it passed, went back and found the body. It is supposed he fell off the train while running along the cars and met instant death. Deceased was a young married man living in Lindsay. His parents reside in Goodwood. He frequently passed through Peterborough on special freights, and his comrades deeply deplore the accident.

W. C. T. U.

There was a good attendance at Monday's meeting. Mrs. Peters opened the meeting with the usual devotional exercises. After several items of business had been disposed of, it was decided to let Scott Act Committee have use of Hall; also that this union work in conjunction with Scott Act Committee during campaign about to be entered upon. Reports were received of needy, who had received help during the past week; also of interesting Band of Hope meetings held every Saturday afternoon in W.C.T.U. Hall. Meeting adjourned for one week.—COM.

A Wise Precaution.

Messrs. Wilson and Morrison received the following letter from St. John's. N. B., written by a member of a Toronto firm: "SIRS,—Enclosed find my application for $10,000 in the Manufacturer's Accident Ins. Co. I did not intend to put this on until I saw you, but that terrible accident in Western Ontario makes me feel that railroading is getting to be a pretty dangerous business. Those men from Woodstock who were killed were coming to Toronto on our business." * * * See Mr. Joseph McClelland who has charge of our accident department for full particulars as to rates.

Giovanni and His Gifts.

Signor Giovanni is conducting a great gift enterprise—gifts of two kinds. He gives a splendid and diverting entertainment, full of harmless fun, and gives solid presents of a valuable character every night. The magic is very fine, the marionettes in their double dramatic doings are immense, the educated canaries captivating, the musical glasses sweet and weird, and the "pictures in the air" excellent. The presents are bona fide gifts. The minor gifts each excel in value the price of the admission ticket, and the three special gifts are expensive and valuable. Last night Mrs. Bridgewater got the $14 solid silver hunting case watch, Patrick Daly the china tea set and F. W. Pearse the china chamber set. The wonder that Signor Giovanni can continue giving such gifts is equal to that excited by Reville's magic. To-night equally valuable gifts will be presented. Admission, 25 and 35 cents. Seats reserved at Doucet's music store.

A Realistic Incident.

"Here in the North," said W. C. Boyd, business manager of the "Held by the Enemy" company, last evening, "theatre-goers don't appreciate the realism of war as reproduced in Mr. Gillette's play as they do in the South. Where the great battles of the war were fought, Southern women and children were brought into actual contact with all the horrors of war, and anything that reproduces its sorrowful scenes without appealing to prejudice, touches them deeply. Last season, at Chattanooga, during the church scene, when the Confederate soldier dies on the bier, there was a commotion in the audience, and some one said a woman had fainted. When I went front she had been carried in to the manager's office, and was reviving. I questioned her and found that the scene depicted in the play was an exact reproduction of the way in which her brother had died—in endeavoring to escape from a Union hospital after the battle of Mission Ridge. It had so affected her that she fainted." 1d

30 CHESTS of our double extra fine new Japan tea arrived to-day, 5 lbs for $1 at M. R. Kidd's.

"A Remarkable Book."

THE STORY OF AN AFRICAN FARM—by Ralph Iron (Olive Schreiner). Price, 50 cts. Some opinions of the press:—"A very remarkable book. . . . There are many passages of great merit in this book. Lyndall's cynical speech, in the second volume, on woman's position, which begins with—'Look at this little chin of mine with the dimple in it; it is but a small part of my person, but though I had knowledge of all things under the sun, and the deep loving heart of an angel, it would not stead me like this little chin'—will of itself justify us in recommending all and sundry to read 'The Story of an African Farm.'"—St. James Gazette. "A novel which is quite unique, and likely to be widely read."—Society. "This is a powerfully written story."—Broad Arrow. "'The Story of an African Farm' is certainly a remarkable and interesting book."—Pall Mall Gazette. "The regular reader of fiction will find new enjoyment in the freshness of the subject and the style, in the novel scenery and the unfamiliar mode of life, which are all rendered with power. Even the serious student, who generally shuns novels, will find that this book throws new light on many of the most complex problems of modern life. It is a book no one can afford to leave unread; and those who have read it will want little urging to induce them to read it again."—Evening News. "This is a remarkable—a very remarkable — book."—Brighton Guardian. To be had at the Peterborough Bookstore, d Late A. L. Davis & Co.

At Hyman's Altar.

Mr. M. Tierney and his bride received a hearty welcome home last night. They arrived on the 7:50 C.P.R. express, and were met at the station by a number of their friends, who escorted them to their new home on Brock street, where they were afterwards serenaded by the Fire Brigade Band. Mr. Tierney is to-day receiving the affectionate congratulations of his friends upon the happy event, all uniting in wishing him the long and happy wedded life which he as a right jolly good fellow and successful, energetic business man is entitled to. The bride is also welcomed to Peterborough as a most charming addition to the gentler portion of the social element. As a young lady she is generally beloved by all her friends in both Peterborough and the Flower City, which formerly claimed her, for the winsome ways and many accomplishments that endeared her to all with whom she came in contact. The wedding took place in St. Mary's church, Rochester, Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the presence of quite a number of guests, including some former residents of Peterborough who are now living in that city. The fair bride, Miss Stella Carroll, had as bridesmaid her sister Minnie, while the groom was supported by Mr. Frank Ash. After the ceremony lunch was served at the residence of the bride's mother, the young couple leaving on the 5 o'clock train for Peterborough. The EXAMINER extends its congratulations. Mr. Tierney's action will be doubly commended by all patriotic Canadians, for he has set an example that, if followed out, will sound the death knell to the annexation cry. Instead of Canada being annexed to the States, by degrees the better half of our American neighbors will be annexed to Canada and become the wives of good Canadians.

The Loss of the Hair

Is a great misfortune and the sight of a bald head should be a warning to you to take the best possible care of your hair. A little of Dr. Dorenwend's "Hair Magic" used occasionally will prevent all chances of its falling out or turning gray, and will remove all traces of dandruff. Every druggist has it in stock. Ask for it. 2dw

MANY SECRETS AND SIGNS

Origin of Masonry Depicted.

The Speculative and the Operative—Practical Powers of the Craft—Christianity and Charity Blend in Masonic Lodges.

(Toronto Telegram.)

In spite of the arctic temperature which prevailed last Friday evening, Bond street Congregational church was crowded to the doors by a highly interested audience, who attended to hear Dr. Wild deliver his lecture on "The Origin and Secrets of Freemasonry." The choir was occupied by Bro. R. F. Williams, W.M. of Doric Lodge, who briefly introduced the speaker of the evening. Bro. Williams was sure that the doctor would be elaborate and wax eloquent over the origin of Freemasonry, but to his own knowledge there were certain circumstances which would compel the doctor to deal the secrets out sparingly. (Laughter.)

"I am glad to see you all," began the doctor, "though I am on dangerous ground. It is most difficult to speak to a mixed audience upon the subjects which I have chosen for this evening, especially as there are so many ladies here. The ladies, I am sure, will be quick to observe all my actions and note all my words and phrases. There are a great many signs, words and tokens connected with Masonry, and should I let any fall this evening you will carry them away, no doubt. (Laughter.) Should you find out any secret, I am sure you will act Masonically about it, and that is by keeping it to yourself.

STYLES OF MASONRY.

There are two styles of Masonry, the first operative, the second speculative. The former was the primary cause of the latter's existence, but the latter is now the most prominent. It is worth while enquiring how they became separated and what the chances are for them being united.

When the world was immersed by the great flood, according to the Bible, it was between 1,600 and 2,000 years old. Before the flood the average life of man was 400 years. Now a man could pick up considerable information in 400 years, for some of us gather considerable even now in sixty or seventy years. In 400 years a man could learn all the sciences and arts, and obtain an excellent knowledge of human and physical law. But when the world was overflooded there were only eight persons left.

In all the mass of knowledge gathered by those aged men of old to be entirely obliterated? Should the world have no knowledge of the progress of these antediluvians? Will Providence re-create and re-organize the whole human race, and blot out all that was before? Such a thing does not seem reasonable.

Here the speaker pointed the audience to a design of the Great Pyramid, showing the entrances and the passage ways.

AN ORDER FROM GOD.

Now I believe that God ordered Shem to construct this Great Pyramid. It was built 2,170 years before Christ, and is only a short way from the city of Cairo, and near the bank of the Nile. Shem was, of course, the proper person to construct the Great Pyramid; he was the proper one to be entrusted with that great responsibility, as he was the one left to instruct the new world, and to bring into it the knowledge and sciences of the old. Here in this Great Pyramid did Shem deposit all the learning and sciences of the antediluvian world. So that when any problem presented itself to speculative Masons they could find a solution in the Pyramid. The building contains all the sciences.

But they lost the key. With the key they lost the secret, for without the key they could gain little of the knowledge which the Pyramid was erected to impart. What we do know we have learned from the researches of learned men. But you may depend upon it that all we will know in future, everything new, will come from that stone building.

THE GREAT PYRAMID.

This great Masonic Pyramid covers 13½ acres, and is 468 feet high, the outside stone is white marble blocks, each containing 25 feet. The outside walls of this gigantic pile were perfect. No aperture was visible. No channel; no means of egress or ingress. But there was a secret door, which turned on a swivel, had they known where to find it. No discovery was made until John Taylor, an Englishman, took hold of it a few years ago. By astronomical measurements the door was located, north 300 inches from the centre and 49 feet from the ground. The building itself, its doors, passage and all appointments are astronomically and scientifically located so great was the knowledge of the antediluvians.

After the flood the connection between speculative and operative Masonry was lost but the origin of the three degrees is very natural. Three sons of Noah created a Masonic language. So that they and their family, after years of separation, would immediately know, by those signs and that language that they belonged to the same people.

PROTECTIVE POWER OF MASONRY.

Dr. Larsh, a Scotch Presbyterian, whom I met in London a few years ago, is a man of unquestionable veracity, and his friends bear an equally high character. The doctor was one of a party going through Africa on an expedition of exploration, when they were attacked by a rude and unknown race of savages. Several members of the exploring party advanced to the attacking hosts, making the signs of the first three degrees. One of the members of the tribe answered the Masonic language and signs, with their counterparts, and the travellers were protected. (Applause.) How did these natives obtain these secrets, they having lost all tradition? Why, plain enough, their fathers brought it there with them. General Fremont while on his "Overland Route," recites a similar adventure, where he was saved by Masonic signs and Masonic language from unknown natives.

Some people begin Masonry with Solomon and Hiram, King of Tyre. Why those two men were as familiar with Masonry as we are. Masonry did not begin with Solomon, not 200 years ago, either, as some writers say. Masonry began with the flood.

Masonry; of course, is by origin Christian. So it remains. The craft is Christian in their very sciences and Christian in every practice. Some people say that Masonry of course is a good thing but it is not before the church. This point just depends on what you understand by the church. Masonry is just as much a church as Bond street church. It is the practice of the truth which makes a Christian, whether he is in this congregation or that, or does not belong to any at all. I defy you to tell me of a church which has a virtue which teaches a truth, which Masonry does not possess, or which Masonry does not teach. There is no church which teaches in its creeds any virtue which makes a man more sacred to his family, to his state or nation.

Masonry has gained an honoured name on account of the charities dispensed, but Masonry is more honoured in her non-charities and means to prevent help being needed than she is in the administration of charity.

Here the doctor read a letter from a misguided person who accused it of being a terrible, unnatural organization, which did not respect the divinities. The doctor showed the writer where he was wrong, and pointed out that Masonry made a man loyal to his country.

An atheist cannot be a consistent Mason. Masonry is by no means anti-Christian, it is anti-Sectarian. Of course we leave the name of Christ out of our first three degrees, because the first three degrees were originated long before Christ came upon earth. You might as well destroy the Old Testament because Christ's name is not mentioned. But in the degrees the name of Christ sounds sweetly. (Applause.)

One of the most sacred articles of furniture in a lodge is its altar and Bible, and a lodge cannot proceed to work without the Bible being opened at certain passages to "guide them."

The Doctor closed by quoting from 1 Kings, xx chap., Jeremiah xxxii chap; Isa. xvi; 1 Cor. xxxvii, 19th verse; showing that Masonry is spoken of in the Bible.

The usual votes of thanks were passed, and a good collection was gathered.

Grand Orange Lodge.

Large Attendance of the Eastern Ontario Brethren—Grand Master's Address—The Jesuit Estate Bill.

CAMPBELLFORD, March 5.—The Right Worshipful Grand Orange Lodge of Ontario East assembled in the Music Hall of this place this afternoon. Nearly 200 delegates were in attendance, this being a larger number than is usually present. Grand Master T. B. Collins, of Millbrook, presided over the deliberations of the large meeting. The other prominent members present are:—W. E. Johnson, Belleville, Past Grand Master; Rev. J. C. Hallwell, Grand Chaplain British America; James Clark, Ottawa, Deputy Grand Master; J. H. Delamere, Junior Deputy Grand Master; A. J. Vanluven, Newcastle, Grand Secretary; Robt. Gordon, Tweed, Grand Treasurer; Rev. R. H. Leitch, El Dorado, Deputy Grand Chaplain; F. M. Clarke, Belleville, Deputy Grand Secretary; R. H. Holland, Port Hope, Grand Lecturer; John McCaughey, Cobourg, G. D. of C. County Masters—A. McDevitt, Durham; M. Hill, South Hastings; J. Bateman, North Hastings; D. McElroy, Carleton; D. Ewing, Northumberland; Wm. Porter, Ottawa; Crawford Rose, Ottawa; John Shephard, Ottawa.

The Grand Master's address was an able review of the events of interest to Protestantism during the year. He referred to the death of their Grand Chaplain, Rev. Dr. Smithett, of Omemee, his visit as their representative to the Triennial Council at Carrickfergus, Ireland, last July, and the benefits that will accrue to the order throughout the world by that meeting. He said the new Imperial Grand Master, the Earle of Erne, a son-in-law of the late Imperial Grand Master, the Earl of Enniskillen, was a worthy successor to the deceased and much lamented Grand Master. The next meeting of the great Council of Orangemen, he said, was to be held in Toronto in 1894.

The Secretary's report was encouraging, showing that four new warrants had been issued during the year, and the county masters reported renewed interest and progress.

The Treasurer's report stated that the receipts were nearly $1,800, and disbursements $1,080.

Reports of the immense demonstrations held at five places last 12th of July were presented by the chairman of the meeting. In each case these demonstrations were reported to have exceeded any held in the localities, and had given an impetus to the cause.

A number of memorials and resolutions from various County lodges in reference to the Jesuit Estates Bill were read, and their consideration postponed until the evening session.

At the opening of the evening session an hour was spent in a memorial service in memory of the late Grand Chaplain, Rev. Dr. Smithett. The service consisted of hymns suitable to the occasion, several prayers, and brief addresses in reference to the deceased by the Rev. J. Hallwell, Mr J. H. Delamere and Mr. J. L. Waters.

The Grand Lodge is now discussing the Jesuit Estates Bill, and is likely to be in session until a late hour.

News Nuggets.

—Another sign of spring—Fairweather is showing his new styles of hats.

—Mr. Frank Odette and Miss Eno, of Ashburnham, were married in St. Peter's Cathedral yesterday.

—To day being Ash Wednesday, the beginning of Lent, special services were held in the Roman Catholic and Anglican churches.

—The members of the Riverside Lacrosse Club had their photographs taken yesterday in a group, together with the championship banner they won last season, by Sproule.

—Chief Rozel is out on a collecting tour, gathering in the license fees for billiard and pool tables, hackmen, carters and eating houses. These licenses are all payable by the first of march.

—Wheeled vehicles have appeared on the streets. But still that infallible harbinger of spring, the organ grinder, fails to make his appearance, so we are forced to the conclusion that winter is not all over yet.

—Corporation contractors are expanding the waterways on the streets into miniature Trent Valley Canals, the nearest approach we shall probably see to that great work during the present century.

—A meeting of the Endeavor Society was held Monday night, when it was decided to adjourn till after the Crowley and Hunter evangelistic services are concluded, when the President will call the Society together again.

CLEVELAND'S
SUPERIOR
THE PUREST AND BEST

Is made only of strictly pure grape cream of tartar, strictly pure bicarbonate of soda, and a small portion of flour as a preservative, nothing else whatever, and is warranted entirely free from alum, ammonia, phosphates, lime, and all the adulterants frequently found in baking powders. The character of materials used, their purity, and the nicety of their combination, render Cleveland's superior baking powder the most healthful and most economical in use, and it always affords wholesome, nutritious, and delicious food.

It is recommended for purity, healthfulness and efficiency by Government and State chemists, chemists of Boards of Health, and professors in institutions of learning throughout the country.

TURNBULL'S

The Flood of the Season's French and English Printed Calicoes is rolling in—white capped and aglow phosphorescent, color play. How the Priscellas of the past would joy to see them? Pretty as you have seen them, they were never so handsome before. Persian designs, leaves, buds, flowers, polka, dots, plain stripes, scrabbles and scrawls, angles and tangles. More than 300 different styles, small figures, large figures, and mourning designs, better printing was never done 'exquisite.' If you don't want to buy, don't pass the window or come in. Prices range from 6 to 15 cents.

The trouble with low grade Marseilles Bed Spreads has been loose threads at the back—lace, all right, but you didn't like the fiddle-string arrangement at the back, needn't. Here are $2.50 Marseilles Bed Spreads, full size and handsome patterns, with backs firm and well finished. Look at this honey-comb quilt for $1, which needs no apology for either size or weight.

Flannelettes—what are they? are they all-wool? No they are mostly cotton, finished to imitate a Flannel, and especially adapted for childrens' dresses and ladies' wrappers. They consist of Cream Grounds, with pink, blue and cardinal Stripes, blue and white, pink and cream, pink and blue, and pink, cream and grey, some 18 patterns in all—the best quality being only 12½ cents a yard.

Opened out this week, a line of Linen Tablings, the maker of which is noted the world over. They are specially suited for every day wear—the warp is well twisted and they wash and iron well.

Thirty Years Paying Rent in Peterborough.

I frequently hear statements akin to above, followed by remarks of deep regret for having missed many golden opportunities of buying lands but at a price they would now have to pay for one foot of the same land. Buying property in Peterborough is the safest kind of a safe and profitable investment. I have at present cheap houses, medium class homes and a few exceedingly fine Residences and grounds some of which were built for home comforts, regardless of cost. Uncontrollable circumstances have now caused those to be offered for immediate sale much under value. I commence at $475, for good house and large lot. I can suit any reasonable buyer. I have also good value in Market Gardens and Farms.

NEWS OF THE DOMINION.

A TORONTO MERCHANT SKIPS TO THE STATES.

The Safe in the Ottawa Police Station Robbed of $500—No Clue to the Thief—Ambitious City Notes.

TORONTO, March 7.—In all probability the population of Toronto has been decreased by one, and the populace of New York State increased in proportion. William Burgess, a local wholesale fruit canner and commission merchant, has had some trouble lately with his creditors which would have reached a climax yesterday, but, it is said, Mr. Burgess did not wait to see it out. Mr. Burgess' factory is in Mimico. He resides in Parkdale, and has an office down town. On Saturday last Burgess called on a leading assignee and informed him that he (Burgess) had between $8000 and $10,000 worth of notes falling due on Monday, the 4th, and that there were no funds to pay any of them, or anything on account. In view of this, Burgess said, an assignment would have to be made. Nothing has been heard from him since, and the assignee expects that he will execute the assignment and send it across the bridge in the regular way. Nothing further of his liabilities is known outside of the paper due on Monday.

The bad results of the Fourth of March are much heavier throughout the province than was anticipated. Yesterday morning the business community was flooded with reports of embarrassments from almost every district in Ontario. Happily large failures are few, but the numerous small bankrupts are bound to not only try the patience, but will also hamper the business of larger houses.

Among the usual routine motions heard by Judge Robertson yesterday was one to strike the name of J. P. MacMillan, County Attorney of Dufferin, from the roll of solicitors. The application was made on behalf of a client of the solicitor, who charges Mr. MacMillan with not paying over to him certain moneys collected by him. An order was made to strike the defendant's name off the rolls, but the order is not to issue for two weeks.

The Grand Jury yesterday returned true bills against John Wadsworth, false pretences; and Richard Cole, bigamy. The case of Richard Cole, the old pensioner, who is charged with bigamy, was traversed till the next court, when it is expected that several important witnesses will be here from England. Cole was released on bail.

The merchants of King-street to the number of 100 crowded into the Mayor's office yesterday morning to represent to him the peculiarly horrible condition of that thoroughfare. The result of the invasion was that the Mayor issued orders to Street Commissioner Jones to set all the men he could find able to handle pick or shovel to work to remove the packed snow from King-street between Sherbourne and Yorkstreets.

The Police Magistrate yesterday sent William Vevers to jail for 30 days for a brutal attack on his wife. Ellen Sullivan for theft got seven days, and Edward Doran for disturbing the Salvationists was fined $7 or 20 days. J. E. Townsend, on a charge of fraud preferred by Mary A. Hagel, was committed for trial.

AMBITIOUS CITY NOTES.

City Hall Tenders Accepted—The Projected Summer Carnival.

HAMILTON, March 6.—The markets, fire and police committee has accepted three important tenders in connection with the new city hall. For putting in the wires for electric lighting, there were four tenders. That of the Hamilton electric light company was accepted. The company agrees to supply and put in wire for 450 lamps of 16-candle power, for $3 a lamp, and the price of switches, etc, brings the total amount of the tender up to $1490.

Tenders for supplying the tower clock were received from three firms—one English and two American. The Howard Clock Company of New York was awarded the contract, its figure being $2312 for a clock capable of bringing a full, clear tone from a 4000 pound bell; the clock to be hour-striking, arranged with four sectional glass dials eight and one-half feet in diameter.

Three tenders for the bell were received. The tender of Meneely & Co. of West Troy, N.Y., was accepted. The firm agrees to supply a 4000 pound bell for $920, and guarantees it for four years.

This morning James Nichol, employed at Tuckett & Son's factory, accidentally fell into a box in which tobacco is dried, and was badly injured.

The scheme to hold a summer carnival at the beach during the association aquatic meeting is taking active shape. It is proposed to have the carnival last a week, with the amateur oarsmen's regatta as the chief attraction.

This morning as Arthur Carpenter, who is employed at Wanzer's factory, was on his way to work he took a short cut through Brennen's lumber yard. In jumping over the fence he fell and fractured his leg.

The Garrick club celebrated its removal into new quarters in Main-street east by holding a housewarming party last evening.

MONTREAL AND OTTAWA.

A New Delimitation of the Roman Catholic Archdioceses Decreed.

OTTAWA, March 6.—It is said that a decree of the Sacred Congregation of the Propaganda orders a new delimitation of the archdioceses of Montreal and Ottawa. The line of demarcation common to both will start at the Ottawa River passing to the east of Chatham, Wentworth, Howard and Beresford townships, thence in the same direction to the boundary line between Joliette and Montcalm Counties, and following this latter line in a northwesterly direction until it strikes the territory tributary to the vicarate of Pontiac.

BEARDING THE LION IN HIS DEN.

The Safe in the Ottawa Police Station Robbed of $500.

OTTAWA, March 7.—Last night the safe in the Ottawa Police Station was robbed of $500. The thief entered the station, got Chief McVetty's key, thence entered the clerk's office, obtained the key of the safe and rifled it. No one heard any noise and who the culprit is is a mystery. An ex-policeman is suspected.

Railroad Consolidation.

BOSTON, March 6.—The Oregon Short Line and the Utah Northern Railway, branch lines of the Union Pacific, are about to be consolidated. The two companies operate 1055 miles of railroad. The question of incorporating with this new company the other Utah lines of the Union Pacific is under consideration.

The English Beer Syndicate.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., March 6.—The three leading breweries of the city were to-day purchased by an English syndicate. The prices paid were as follows: Bartholomay Brewery, $2,500,000; Genesee Brewery, $900,000; Rochester Brewery, $900,000. Five per cent. in gold down.

A G. T. R. Ferryboat Burnt.

WINDSOR, March 5.—The Grand Trunk ferryboat Transit, which has been lying at the dock for some time, was discovered to be on fire last night about 11 o'clock. Nothing could be done to save her and she burned to the water's edge. The loss is $15,000, thought to be insured. The Transit has not been in commission for some time past.

NEWS OF THE OLD WORLD

DEBATE ON THE ADDRESS CLOSED IN THE BRITISH HOUSE.

The Flurry on the Paris Bourse Subsides—King Milan's Abdication—The Italian Cabinet Crisis.

LONDON, March 6.—In the House of Commons to-day W. H. Smith moved a picture on the debate on the address in reply to the Queen's speech. The motion was carried, 347 to 66.

Sir Julian Pauncefote, the new British Minister to the United States, will start for Washington about the end of this month. After a short stay he will return to London for the summer. In the autumn he will take his family to Washington for a permanent residence.

Further correspondence between Lord Salisbury and Mr. Bayard on the Sackville affair is about to be submitted to Parliament.

In the event of the Parnell Commission presenting no interim report on the forged letters the Opposition contemplate a motion to adjourn in order to call attention to the action of the Government in aiding the prosecution to collect evidence, or an address to the Crown regarding the expenses of the commission.

Crispi in Trouble.

ROME, March 6.—Signor Crispi is experiencing great difficulty in forming a Cabinet. He has chosen Signor Doda, of the Left, for Minister of Finance, to the astonishment of his friends, who believe Doda to be incapable.

Signor Crispi to-day presented to King Humbert a cabinet list composed of members of the Left, but he expressed a doubt as to his ability to secure a majority in the Chamber of Deputies and therefore proposed that the King entrust Signor Blanchieri with the formation of a transition cabinet. King Humbert has the matter under consideration but it is probable that Signor Blanchieri, if summoned, will decline the task and that Crispi's ministry will be given a trial.

Abdication of King Milan.

BELGRADE, March 6.—King Milan has abdicated the throne of Servia. Crown Prince Alexander will be proclaimed King to-morrow. MM. Restitch, Protitch and Belimarkovis will act as regents during the minority of the King, who was born Aug. 14, 1876.

King Milan in announcing his abdication declared there would be no change in the relations between Servia and Austria.

After a solemn service to celebrate the proclamation of the kingdom, Milan returned to the palace, where he received the congratulations of the ministry, diplomats and others. The King addressed the assemblage thus: "I thank you for your congratulations. Excuse me, I am very busy. I beg to inform you that I have resolved to abdicate. The manifesto will perhaps explain my motives." He then silently shook hands with all present and went into an adjoining room, where in the presence of the cabinet and state council Milan, in a voice choked with emotion, read the Ukase announcing his abdication. He then gave a cheer for the new King, all present joining with enthusiasm.

King Milan will remain commander-in-chief of the army during his son's minority.

A rumor is current that ex-Queen Natalie will return to Servia and take up her residence at Kragujevatz.

The Flurry on the Paris Bourse Over.

PARIS, March 6.—The Bourse was quiet to-day. The market closed firm on reports that the position of the companies interested in the Societe des Metaux is secured. Societe des Metaux shares advanced 60f. Rio Tinto shares advanced 33f. 75c.

The evening papers concur in the opinion that Rochereau committed suicide. The Temps gives particulars according to which there was no alternative but suicide.

Six directors of the Comptoir d'Escompte have announced their readiness to pay on demand all monies deposited with the company. The chiefs of the principal banking firms to-day resolved to place themselves at the disposal of the Comptoir d'Escompte in order to assure, in case of necessity, the repayment of all deposits.

A Conspiracy Against the State.

PARIS, March 6.—The Temps states that the magistrates inquiring into the affairs of the Patriotic League have found documents proving that the league was engaged in a scheme to mobilize its members. The Government, The Temps says, intends to criminally prosecute the chiefs of the league for conspiracy against the state.

To be Arbitrated.

COPENHAGEN, March 6.—In the Lower House of the Riguding to-day the Minister for Foreign Affairs stated that the British minister at Athens had consented to act as arbitrator in the dispute between the United States and Denmark regarding the claim of Mr. Butterfield against Denmark for the loss of a number of vessels near St. Thomas many years ago.

Royal Nuptials Fixed.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 6.—The marriage of Grand Duke Alexandrovitch to Princess Alexandra of Greece is fixed for June 16.

Stolle Will be a Roman.

ROME, March 6.—The Riforma says it learns that ex-Governor Porter of Indiana will succeed Judge Stallo as American Minister at Rome. The Riforma speaks in high terms of Judge Stallo, and says he has decided to settle in Rome.

W. L. Alden, the American Consul-General here, will also resign. He intends to resume journalistic work.

Trunk Line Meeting.

NEW YORK, March 6.—The joint executive committee of the Trunk Line Association and of the Central Traffic Association, as well as the general passenger agents of the same associations, assembled here to-day to consider the alleged violation by some roads of the agreement entered into by the trunk lines regarding paying and receiving commissions for passenger business. Some of the roads present confessed to having violated the agreement in this respect, others claimed not to have violated it. A resolution was finally adopted that on and after to-morrow they would refuse to pay further commissions for passenger business. It was also resolved that the signers would endeavor to persuade all connecting lines not in the association to stop paying commissions to agents.

Killed Her Sleeping Husband.

WAUKESHA, Wis., March 6.—Mrs. Ann Driscoll decapitated her sleeping husband Timothy with an axe during a temporary fit of insanity near Delafield this morning. She attempted to murder her son also, but was restrained by her daughter, who awoke in time to prevent the act. The woman has recovered her reason. She says she was impelled to murder her entire family in order to save them from some unknown calamity.

Busy Shaking Hands.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—The new cabinet officers had little opportunity to attend to official business this afternoon, as they were receiving a continuous line of callers, mostly people from their own states who came to offer congratulations. Most of the assistant secretaries tendered their resignations but will hold office for a short period until the heads have succeeded in getting into working order.

ALEX. AND THE ACTRESS.

THE BATTENBURG'S MARRIAGE CAUSES CONSTERNATION.

The Queen Said to be Annoyed Beyond Measure—Empress Frederick's Mortification Even More Profound.

LONDON, March 6.—A thunderbolt in a summer sky could not have created more amazement and consternation than was caused at Windsor Castle by the news of Prince Alexander of Battenberg's mesalliance. The Queen is annoyed beyond measure as, after having allowed her daughter and granddaughter to contract morganatic alliances with two of the princes of Battenberg, it is highly provoking that a member of the family should marry an actress. Luckily for Prince Alexander and his bride they are beyond her reach. Everyone knows how zealously the Queen has exerted herself to forward Prince Alexander's interests, both public and private, and he has certainly proved that love has been more potent with him than gratitude. The mortification of the Empress Frederick is for obvious reasons even more profound, as she had constituted herself the champion of Prince Alexander during the whole of the last year, and now feels that she has compromised herself. She has shown herself to be entirely wanting in that wisdom which she wishes all Europe to suppose that she possesses by allowing her daughter to be ignominiously jilted by an individual of whose suit she had so warmly approved, and herself to be egregiously hoaxed.

The truth about the matter is that last August, when the squabbles about the Emperor Frederick's diary were amicably settled, Emperor William consented that his sister should marry Alexander, on the condition that the couple undertook to live quite privately at a distance from Berlin. It was then arranged that the marriage should take place in the private chapel at Windsor during the winter. Prince Alexander and his bride were to have lived at Cronberg, in the Taunus, where the Empress Frederick had purchased a villa for them adjoining her own.

About two months ago Emperor William was informed of Alexander's flirtation with Mlle. Loisinger, and I hear that after discussing the matter with his brother, Prince Henry, with Prince Bismarck and with his eldest sister, the hereditary Princess of Saxe-Meiningen, he sent to his mother in England a peremptory letter forbidding the marriage. The Emperor has absolute power over his relatives, as by the Hohenzollern family statutes he can deprive any prince or princess who disobeys him of any share in the state fund or family fortune. The Emperor later on explained to his mother that Alexander was trifling with Princess Victoria and acquainted her with the Loisinger story.

Then there came a right royal row at Osborne, as both the Queen and Empress were not merely furious, but also much ashamed of having so seriously committed themselves in support of Alexander. Poor Prince Henry, who has been laughing in the north wind of royal favor since this explosion, was ordered to write a letter to Alexander, then at Darmstadt, requesting an immediate and full explanation of the story which the Queen and the Empress could scarcely bring themselves to credit, whereupon the offender suddenly resigned his commission in the German army, a step which was at once followed by his private marriage, which was not intimated in any way to his relatives in Germany or to his patrons in England. The royal family learned it from the newspapers.

HENRY LABOUCHERE.

The Gold Fever in Southern California.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 6.—The gold excitement in Lower California near Ensenada is increasing. Work on the Cuyamaca, San Diego and Eastern Railway is stopped and the workmen are leaving in a body for the mines. Steamers between San Diego and Ensenada have doubled their rates, but the rush continues and stages are now running overland carrying many persons direct to the mines. San Diego papers declare that the development covers 100 miles square and that placer mines are making a great deal of money. Thirteen thousand dollars in gold dust were brought into Ensenada and San Diego yesterday.

A San Diego special says: The Mexican border at Lia Juna has had the appearance of war for two days. Nearly 100 teams and trains and 500 prospectors gathered there to enter the gold fields. They wanted to evade the custom officers and the red tape and attempted to force their way into Mexico. Mexican troops were called out and the trespassers were forced back. The Union publishes statements from Prof. Anthony, Chas. Bennett, John R. Berry and others of undoubted veracity saying that the fields are phenomenally rich. Fully 1000 people are in camp. All the peninsular towns are deserted.

Business Crushes in the States.

TRENTON, N. J., March 6.—Willets & Co., extensive manufacturers of pottery, are financially embarrassed. Two of their notes to-day went to protest. The company employs 200 men. The company reported its assets in September at $302,000 and its liabilities at $103,000.

COLUMBUS, O., March 6.—The Mahoning National Life Association, doing an insurance business on the mutual assessment plan, failed to-day and a receiver was appointed. An inventory shows $30,000 cash, notes and accounts $21,000. The association has risks amounting to $10,000,000.

Suicide in Cleveland.

CLEVELAND, O., March 6.—Nathan A. Wilson, secretary of the Cleveland Stove Company, shot himself dead this morning while sitting at his desk. His father is president of the company. This afternoon the company assigned. The nominal assets are $200,000, liabilities nearly $90,000. The assignment was made, it is said, to tide the company over the excitement caused by the secretary's suicide and to prevent hasty action by creditors. It is thought Wilson was depressed because of too close attention to business.

Excursion Opened on the Hudson.

NEWBURGH, N.Y., March 6.—The propeller Newburgh of the Rosendell Transportation Company opened navigation on the Hudson River between New York and Newburgh this evening by making a trip from New York to Newburgh in 5½ hours. She had no difficulty with ice.

Robert Garrett's Condition.

RINGWOOD, N. J., March 6.—Robert Garrett, the insane millionaire, left here this morning in care of his physician and attendants en route for Mexico. Mr. Garrett's condition is greatly improved by his sojourn here, but he is not considered out of danger of a relapse.

Murdered by a Rum-crazed Hostler.

NEW YORK, March 6.—Mrs. Michael Martin, wife of a coachman, as she lay ill in bed had her skull fractured to-night, being struck with a flatiron by rum-crazed Bert Brown, a hostler who boarded there. Mrs. Martin is dying. Brown was arrested.

The Inaugural Ball.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—The inaugural committee has achieved an unprecedented financial success. There were 12,000 tickets to the ball sold, netting $60,000. And it is expected that the receipts from the sale of tickets to the promenade concert held in the ball room yesterday and from the sale of souvenir ball tickets will bring this amount up to $70,000. The $50,000 guarantee subscribed by public-spirited citizens will be retained.

HOW LENT AFFECTS THEM.

It Makes Them Very Good For a Few Weeks.

The Effect Should Be the Same the Year Round—Some Rare Examples of Prayer—Spreading the Bread of Life—Tidings From Belleville—The Bay City's Revival Still Holds Out.

"I see you are all looking pretty good to-night," said Mr. Hunter to the large congregation that faced him in the George street church last night, "I suppose it is because Lent began to-day. It's queer how Lent makes some people so good. They cut up all sorts of devilery the rest of the year—play cards and dance and that sort of thing—but in Lent they are very good. I often wish lots of you people would die in Lent because if you don't you will never get to heaven. Be good all through Lent, certainly, but be good the rest of the year as well."

Mr. Hunter based his remarks upon the 24th and five following verses of the 32nd chapter of Genesis, giving an account of Jacob's wrestling with the angel. In his comments, Mr. Hunter said there should be lots of the spirit of restitution shown by Jacob in this town. Go around and pay up your debts, he said—your old doctor's bill, and grocery bill, and all your accounts except your whiskey bill. You have no right to pay that, and they can't make you. There was one young man (we daren't tell his name for the reporters would get hold of it) at one of our meetings came to us and told us he had taken $600 of his employer's money and he was anxious to pay it back without having to acknowledge his crime openly. He decided to pay it up by instalments, and he gave us the first $60 instalment of his debt, which we sent to his employer in a roundabout way as "conscience money."

The perseverance of Jacob's prayer for the angel's blessing reminded him, Mr. Hunter said, that a great many people made a mistake in asking for all sorts of outlandish things by prayer. He gave a few samples. One old man in his family prayers was in the habit of praying "all around the world," pleading with God to extend His kingdom to the uttermost parts, but if you asked him for a dollar for that purpose you wouldn't get it. Another man prayed the Lord to feed a poor widow across the way, and his son said to him, "Father, why don't you answer your prayer?" The parent said what he meant, and the boy replied: "You have a crib full of corn out there in the yard; now, why don't you give the widow some of it and answer the prayer yourself?" Then there was the prayer of the woman in front of whose house rose a hill from which the water poured down every spring into her house. How to remove the difficulty bothered her greatly until some one suggested that she pray to God to take it away. She acted on the advice, and one evening prayed that the hill be taken away during the night. In the morning when she wakened and her first thought was if her prayer had been answered, but of course the hill was there as large and troublesome as ever. "Well," the old lady philosophically, remarked "I didn't expect to have it taken away while I was praying for it."

Special prayers were offered in response to a number of requests—for a husband, for a father, brother and aged uncle, for a brother and his friend, for two sons and daughters on behalf of an afflicted mother, for a wife, for a friend in Brockville, for a father on his daughter's behalf, and for a poor drunkard.

Mr. Crossley says that if the congregation that attends these meetings will carry out the plan mentioned in the text of the evening, "Give ye them to eat," at least 2,000 souls will be converted during their stay in Peterborough. That might appear to be a pretty high figure, but when the results following Christ's miracle in feeding the multitude on five loaves and two fishes, and its spiritual application, are remembered, it is surely not too high an expectation to work for. And if that number is not saved it will be because some one or more of the Christian people of Peterborough have neglected to do their duty.

This miracle, he said, was recorded purposely to illustrate to us how the world was to be satisfied with the bread of life, which we, as individuals, are privileged to give to the multitude. Detailing the circumstances of the miracle, Jesus feeding the multitude of 5,000 men, and, no doubt, as many more women and children, with five loaves and two fishes and having twelve baskets remaining, Mr. Crossley applied the lesson to the circumstances of the present day. There was the same hungry multitude to feed. In Peterborough there was at least half the population without a knowledge of the saving grace. Christians should not grumble and say, "Oh, I have so little religion myself, I cannot do anything," but like the disciples have faith in Jesus' power and do as He commanded. In the Testament story, the people were seated in companies of fifty on the mountain side, and Jesus, taking the five loaves and two fishes, which a boy had brought in a basket for lunch, brake the food and gave it to the disciples to feed the multitude. And as they broke the bread, behold it increased, and the multitude did eat and were satisfied. Just so the followers of Christ to day are given the bread of life and commanded in turn to give it to the multitude. And as they do it their faith will be increased until they shall all enjoy the fulness of salvation. With Christ's blessing the five loaves and two fishes fed the multitude, and with His blessing the bread of life dispensed by His followers to-day would be similarly satisfying and abundant. It was the privilege of everyone receiving this bread to share it with his neighbor, and it was everyone's duty to accept the salvation offered them. "I believe, if we do our duty," he said, "there is hardly one in the city we cannot save." He urged them, both as Christians and unsaved, to feel their responsibility in this matter. Someone was to blame for every unsaved soul that died in Peterborough, and he urged the unconverted not to commit moral suicide by rejecting the bread of life.

As the multitude was arranged on the mountain side for convenience, so the evangelists invited all those who were seeking the bread of life to-night to occupy the centre seats so that they, acting for Jesus in this case, might be able conveniently to give it to them. Some people, Mr. Crossley, said, were afraid that after starting they may not be saved and then they would be left in an awkward position. That was because they had not the faith either of the disciples or the multitude, who unquestioningly did as Jesus commanded and relied upon Him to supply the need. Though they did not see just how they were going to be saved, the hungering sinner should come right out and the Lord would give him the consciousness of sins forgiven. The Lord's invitation was there before them—they must either accept or reject, which should it be?

Mr. W. W. Johnston, of Belleville, was on the platform, and was asked to tell something of the revival work in the Bay City. Following up the theme of Mr. Crossley's address, he related a couple of instances to show how the bread of life can be passed from one to the other to the profit of their souls. During Messrs. Crossley and Hunter's meetings in Belleville three young girls were saved, and they determined to try to bring their fathers to the foot of the cross also; and they succeeded, though perhaps they were three of the hardest men to reach in the city. One of the same fathers was in the congregation before him. Another young man, the son of an infidel father whose heart was wrapped up in his boy, was saved at the revival meetings, and, going home he threw his arms about his father and asked him to go with him on the way of holiness. The father could not resist the appeal, and was converted. This man was now mayor of the city. The evangelists had accomplished a great work in Belleville. Hundreds had been saved, Mr. Johnson said, his eldest daughter among the first, then his son, then his brother and all his family, then his brother-in-law and his family, then 200 of his Sunday school pupils, and hundreds of men and women about the city. The people there were deeply interested in the work in Peterborough. In fact their Wednesday night meeting had been devoted entirely to prayer for the success of the revival here. The revival at Belleville had been a lasting one, for he could safely say that over eighty per cent. of those converted at that time were still on the right path. It was probable a number of them would be up next week. They were making arrangements for twenty or thirty to come up by train, but now it was found there were hundreds wishing to come to Peterborough to take part in the work. He praised God for all that Messrs. Crossley and Hunter had done for Belleville.

Mr. Hunter added that in Detroit and wherever they went people came to them and said they had been converted at Belleville. It seemed as if God had taken hold of the people there mightily.

Every night the sheds are filled with cutters and sleighs from the country, indicating that interest in these meetings is not confined to the town.

Mr. J. S. Parker relieved Mr. Dingle at the organ last night.

Rev. Mr. Pearson announced that the Songs of Salvation used at these meetings will be used at all the social services in the George street church hereafter, so that people buying them will have their use for more than the present period.

To-morrow night there will be a song sermon, when besides Mr. Crossley's solos there will be duets by the two evangelists.

Mr. Crossley sang last night as usual, and by special request repeated "The Handwriting on the Wall."

Among the ministers on the platform last night was Rev. Mr. McCamus, of Cavan.

ONTARIO LEGISLATURE.

A Long Discussion on the Price of School Books.

Toronto, March 7.—The price of school books was the topic of discussion at the Local House yesterday afternoon. Outside of this little was done with the exception of passing these bills through their third reading: To amend the Ontario Sheep Registration Act; respecting St. Andrew's Church, Darlington. No new bills were introduced.

Mr. Preston moved for a return showing the names of all publishers of public school text books, with the respective books published by them and their prices; also for copies of all correspondence by or with the Minister of Education or any officer of his department respecting the price or publication of public school text books subsequent to that already brought down.

A long discussion followed, participated in by Mr. Preston, the Minister of Education, Mr. Clancy, Mr. Harcourt, Mr. Wood, Mr. Creighton, the Minister of Agriculture, Mr. Rammel, Mr. Whitney, Mr. Awrey, Mr. Willoughby and Mr. Dance. The motion was at length carried.

At the evening session half a score of private bills were passed in committee. The most important bill read a second time was that relating to the consolidation of the debenture debt of Toronto. The other bills passed were: respecting the Ontario and Sault Ste. Marie Water, Light and Power Company and the Town of Sault Ste. Marie, to authorize the Synod of the Diocese of Huron to sell certain lands; to revive and amend the act incorporating the Sarnia and Lambton Southern Railway Company; respecting the Toronto, Hamilton and Buffalo Railway Company; respecting the Niagara and St. Catharines Street Railway Company.

SIR CHARLES' VISIT.

It is Thought He May Come to Press a Fast Atlantic Service.

OTTAWA, March 6.—The impression prevails here among well-informed people that Sir Charles Tupper's unexpected arrival in this country is at the solicitation of Sir George Stephen and his associates, who are impressed with the idea that it is of vital importance to the interests of the Canadian Pacific Railway that a fast Atlantic service exclusively to Canada should at once be instituted. Their influence with the Government has already secured the stipulation that the new boats to be subsidized by the country shall be able to make twenty knots an hour against a heavy sea, and it is doubtful whether any company can undertake such a service for the half a million of dollars originally spoken of. Sir Charles is probably here to press the Government to accept the lowest tender, even if it be in excess of the sum contemplated.

is the season of the year when colder weather sharpens the appetite, and heartier and more invigorating food is necessary to maintain the heat of the body and to repair the waste of the tissues. Meat is more rapidly digested during the cold weather and under increased activity. We leave the cooler salads and fruits that refreshed us during the summer months and take in their place steaks and chops, smoking hot, and the steaming oatmeal and graham cakes and coffee.

At this time of the year sausages, pork, ham, mackerel and other salt fish, form desirable breakfast dishes; and porridge, omelettes, oatmeal, wheaten cakes and a variety of cereals help make the repast a most delicious one.

MUNCASTER'S

Mrs. de Snigsby's Bal Poudre

By ALAN DALE.

CHAPTER I.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Archibald Bockaby sat pensively breakfasting in the cosy little oak panelled room of their rather pretentious metropolitan residence. Mr. Bockaby glanced from time to time at his newspaper, and held his buttered toast in meek abeyance while he scanned some promisingly headed article; the lady of his choice eyed him askance, and seemed waiting for an opportunity to talk.

Mr. Bockaby waded carefully through an extensive effusion entitled "The Financial World," crunched his toast savagely as he came to the end of it, rose from the table, threw the newspaper as far away as his muscularity permitted, and faced Mrs. J. Archibald Bockaby, who, by the bye, was not in the least disturbed.

"Malvina," said Mr. Bockaby, with paroxysmal energy, "We have got to retrench. We have, I assure you. Things are looking very bad with me. By at least three of my speculations I shall be a heavy loser—and—well, Malvina, we must retrench."

Still Mrs. Bockaby's equanimity was undisturbed. She had heard the same story regularly each week for the last year. It was a sort of serial, to be continued in Mr. Bockaby's next exhibition of bad temper. But she flattered herself that she was a good little wife, and always seemed to give in to her lord, even if in reality she invariably did exactly as she chose. She followed the course prescribed by those clever women who please themselves by appearing to please other people.

"I will help you, Archibald" she said sweetly. "We will retrench, dear. But," with a charming little smile, "I don't want to begin until after next Wednesday, because—because, dear, Mrs. de Snigsby's bal poudre takes place that night, and—and—I must have a new dress. Now—hear me, Archibald." (The cashier of the matrimonial partnership showed symptoms of impatience.)

"It will not be a very expensive one—a matter of, say $150, but I know you do not want your wife to compare unfavorably with the other guests. I ask this for your sake, dear, a great deal more than for my own."

Mrs. Bockaby became almost seraphic at she turned two blue, ever astonished eyes upon her husband. Hitherto that look had always melted him, but perhaps he was growing so accustomed to it that it was losing its effect. At any rate, he was quite unconquered just now by either Mrs. Bockaby's eyes or tongue.

"You are disgracefully extravagant, Malvina," he said, with unusual asperity, "and you ought to begin the work of reform today, and not wait until after next Wednesday. You had a $500 evening dress in London last year. You have never worn it in New York. No one could recognise it. I've got no money to waste on bals poudres or any other nonsense of that kind."

Mrs. Bockaby was disagreeably surprised, but not in the least angry. She was too gentle and well bred ever to indulge in anger, which usually finds vent in rudely unpleasant words.

"This bal poudre," she said, "is exceptional. Besides powdering our hair, we all wear dear little black satin lace trimmed dominos until midnight, and I am so anxious to look well when I remove mine. Archibald, dear, do not be so mean. It is unlike you. My London dress is too soiled to wear, too rumpled."

"Nonsense," interrupted J. Archibald Bockaby testily, "Black and gold do not soil. The dress is a very handsome one—the finest I ever saw. I do not often notice your costumes," scornfully, "but that one I always remember because it was so uncommon and pretty."

"I cannot wear it," murmured Mrs. Bockaby, softly. Those who knew the lady would have recognized that statement as irrevocable. Mr. Bockaby did not, however. He labored under the delusion that he was master of his house—a most egregious error.

"Archibald," pursued the fair Malvina, presently, "you talk of my black and gold dress. I assure you Letitia Ruggsmith will have something far more elegant."

"Is Mrs. Ruggsmith going?" asked Mr. Bockaby, gently. He had once—long ago—wasted a great deal of boyish affection upon the unloving Letitia, and the remembrance, he was glad to say, was pleasant, simply because it amused him. Letitia had married a supposedly wealthy man, and was now an almost penniless widow, and an adept in the art of how to keep up appearances on nothing a year. Mrs. Bockaby hated Letitia in her own negative way. She disliked to hear the purring tone which her husband always used in alluding to the lady.

"Yes, she is going," said Malvina, maliciously; "and I've no doubt she will appear in something particularly startling. White hair will suit her splendidly."

"It will, indeed," assented Mr. Bockaby, rather too rapidly.

"And you refuse me the means of looking nice, Archibald. Well, dear, you know best. I shall go to Mrs. De Snigby's bal poudre, I will tell you that much. I will also let you know that I do not intend to be disgraced. I presume you will not be there?" rather anxiously.

"Probably not. I have a club meeting which I must attend."

"I would not like you to neglect your duties for my sake," chirruped Mrs. Bockaby, as she left the room.

She went directly to her bedroom, and, sitting down on the easiest chair she could find, devoted herself to meditation. For ten minutes she remained deep in thought. She was evidently at work upon some very abstruse problem. Presently, she rang the bell and ordered her maid to bring her a daily paper. She ran diligently through its advertising columns, until she apparently found what she wanted. She read it carefully at least half a dozen times. Then, unlocking the heavy oak wardrobe which stood at one end of the room, she took from it a black and gold dress, and laid it rather impatiently upon the bed.

Mr. Bockaby was certainly been correct when he had characterized it as uncommon and pretty. It would have been noticed anywhere. Mrs. Bockaby, conscious and unquestionable, disliked the dress. She would not wear it again. Even though Mrs. Kent had never seen it, she, herself, was tired of it, and—well, she dressed to please herself.

She opened her writing desk, hunted in its depths for a sheet of plain writing paper, discarding the heavily monogrammed sheets that came first to hand, found what she wanted, and scribbled a few words hastily across it. She read these few words, however, very carefully, before she enclosed them in an envelope. Before addressing this, she again had recourse to the newspaper. When the envelope had been addressed to her satisfaction, she rang the bell again.

"Jane"—to the maid who appeared—"see that this letter is posted as soon as possible. Send James up to me at once, please."

The man servant made his appearance in due course.

Mrs. Bockaby had very little to tell him. "If a person calling herself Mrs. Wylde should come to-morrow," she said, "and ask for me personally, as she most certainly will do, I want you to show her up to this room, and let me know, quietly please, that she is here. Am I understood?"

James said that she was.

"Thank you, then. That is all."

A few hours later, Mrs. Bockaby was laughing and chatting at an afternoon tea, as ingenuous and charming as ever. For the first time in her memory her husband had refused her a request, upon the miserable ground that he wished to retrench. It was annoying, certainly, but she would do the best she could without his aid.

CHAPTER II.

Shortly before noon on the day following these events, a phaeton drove past J. Archibald Bockaby's house, and stopped at the corner just beyond it. A little woman dressed entirely in black, and carrying a large black calico bag, alighted, and giving the reins into the charge of a small chubby boy, who had been her sole companion, she crossed the thoroughfare, ascended the flight of stone steps leading to Malvina Bockaby's home, and rang the bell.

The portly individual who opened the door, looked rather surprised at the wizened little creature, with the beady, black eyes, who stood before him.

"I wish to see Mrs. Bockaby," she said, in almost a whisper.

"Your name?" queried the uncompromising James.

"Mrs. Wylde."

James took an austere look at the woman as though doubtful whether, under the circumstances, he ought to obey the commands of his mistress. Mrs. Wylde certainly looked respectable, though by no means fascinating. His servility triumphed, however, and Mrs. Wylde was soon in the bedroom of Mrs. J. Archibald Bockaby. There was no need to inform that lady of the advent of her guest. She had been listening attentively over the banisters while Mrs. Wylde and James held their brief conference. Now she almost wished James had refused to admit her. As he had not done so, however, she must see the matter to an end.

Mrs. Bockaby found her guest standing before the bed and carefully examining the black and gold garment which lay spread out in its glossy glory upon the white counterpane. The artistic beauty of the dress seemed to be of no account in Mrs. Wylde's investigation. She pulled at the seams, peeped under the arms, explored the lining, tested the quality of the goods, and, in fact, made herself completely at home with the robe.

Piles! Piles! Itching Piles.

SYMPTOMS—Moisture, intense itching and stinging, most at night, worse by scratching. If allowed to continue tumors form, which often bleed and ulcerate, becoming very sore. SWAYNE'S OINTMENT stops the itching and bleeding, heals ulcerations, and in most cases removes the tumors. At druggists, or by mail, for 50 cents. Dr. Swayne & Son, Philadelphia. DRUNKENNESS

Or the Liquor Habit Positively Cured by Administering Dr. Haines' Golden Specific.

It can be given in a cup of tea or coffee without the knowledge of the person taking it; it is absolutely harmless, and will effect a permanent and speedy cure, whether the patient is a moderate drinker or an alcoholic wreck. It has been given in thousands of cases, and in every instance a perfect cure has followed. It never fails. The system once impregnated with the Specific, it becomes an utter impossibility for the liquor appetite to exist. For circular and full particulars, address GOLDEN SPECIFIC CO., 185 Race street, Cincinnati, Ohio. eodw

HAIR MAGIC.

The equal of this great preparation is yet to be found. It is an unfailing Restorer for every hair—it stops all falling out of the hair—it removes all dandruff and keeps the scalp clean. On bald heads (if there are but the faintest traces of roots) the Magic will produce a fine growth. Will you try it? Or will you let your hair go, and become prematurely old? What do you say? All druggists everywhere have it for sale. Ask for it. Do not let the druggist tell you he has something just as good—many have dead stock of other hair tonics on hand and try to shove them off in this way. See that each bottle bears seal and 4 signatures:

Legal.

The following case was disposed of at the Toronto High Court of Justice yesterday:—

GARDNER v. ROBARTS.—Motion for judgment in an action to declare a mortgage a cloud upon the plaintiff's title to lands in question. Stone (Peterborough) for plaintiff. No one for defendant. Judgment as asked with full costs of suit.

Till-Tapping.

The other day a young man who figured not long ago in a police court case, was caught in the act of rifling the till behind the bar in the City Hotel. The thief was collared by the bartender and kicked out of the place. It is to be hoped the very striking illustration the till-tapper received that "the way of the transgressor is hard" will be effective.

The Opera House.

There was not a very large audience at Signor Giovanni's gift and variety entertainment in the opera house last night. Those who attended, however, enjoyed the performance immensely. Signor Giovanni nightly gives away a large number of valuable presents, while the class of entertainment he presents is at once highly amusing and interesting.

Ashburnham.

The following are the names, in the order of merit, of the pupils in the primary department of the Ashburnham public school who took the highest marks at the monthly examination for February:—Second book, sr.—Bruce Doupe, Reuben Castle, John Wood and Bertie Wood (equal). Second book, jr.—Bruce Forsyth, Albert Milliken, Matthew Reid. Part second.—Class A, Charles Dobbin and Herbie Emerson; class B, Joseph Cooney; class C, Lottie Ball. Part first.—Class A, Mary Long; class B, Mattie Sigworth and Walter Tighe; class C, Florence Scott and Bobbie Mankee.

A Milk Act.

It is said one of Peterborough's councillors has evolved a new scheme to prevent the adulteration of milk. His idea is to pass a by-law compelling milk-vendors to drive their cows to the houses of customers and milk them there in the presence of the purchaser. While at Ottawa with the deputation recently, it is said this thoughtful councillor presented an interview with Sir John Macdonald for the purpose of ascertaining if such a by-law would be constitutional. The story goes that Sir John slapped the would-be public benefactor on the back and said:—"Go ahead, old boy; I'll see that it's constitutional enough."

SHAVED TO THE BONE! A mere skeleton left of profit on teas at M. R. Kidd's.

The Evangelists at Kingston.

The probabilities are, the Kingston Whig says, that Revs. Messrs. Crossley and Hunter, who were announced to visit Kingston this spring, will postpone their engagement until the fall. It is urged by the evangelists that the best permanent results are not reached when the pastors in churches in which they hold meetings leave soon after. As three of the clergymen change in June it is considered advisable to come here after the new appointments are made.

A Remarkable Coincidence.

On Monday last the Bishop of Toronto presented the bronze medal of the Royal Humane Society to Master Charles Band at Upper Canada College. Band was formerly a pupil of Mr. Sheldrake's Preparatory School, Lakefield, and it was during his residence there that he acquired his proficiency in swimming. It is a rather remarkable coincidence, the Empire remarks, that the Humane Society's medal was also obtained last year by Mr. W. Heathcote, of Peterborough, who was assistant master in Mr. Sheldrake's school at the time when Band was the senior pupil.

News Nuggets.

—Clancy's "Royal Jim" won first money in the 2:35 trot at Collingwood yesterday.

—All the town schools are closed to-day on account of the meeting of the teacher's institute.

—The proclamation of the vote to be taken April 4th upon the repeal of the Scott Act is published in the Ontario Gazette.

GOT TO MOVE ALONG; therefore the price is no object. Good groceries within the reach of all at M. R. Kidd's.

—The Auburn woolen mills are interfered with by anchor ice. This morning their staff of men were called out break the jam.

—Mr. Jas. F. Mowry and son, of Ingersol, Ont., are in town canvassing for a directory of the four counties they propose publishing.

—Mr. C. H. Yatman, an evangelist, has begun a series of revival services in Port Hope. The Guide says he is a second Moody.

—Rev. E. F. Torrance, of Peterborough, conducts preparatory services in the Presbyterian church, Campbellford, to-morrow forenoon and evening.

—Messrs. Geo. W. Hall and R. N. Roddy attended the annual meeting of the Orange Grand Lodge at Campbellford.

—A number of Millbrook and Cavan men, returning from the Grand Lodge meeting at Campbellford, were in town to-day. Mr. G. W. Hall showed them about town.

Mr. Will. G. Andrews, manager of the Michael Strogoff Company, is in town to-day completing arrangements for the appearance of his company here next Tuesday night.

—Mr. T. Hurley's horse was frightened by a train yesterday afternoon while Mr. Hurley was in a house on Charlotte street, and ran away. Not much damage was done.

—Mr. Thos. Hayden, of Port Hope, has patented a plow the right for which to manufacture in the United States alone has been sold for $14,000. Mr. Hayden controls the patent in England and Canada.

—Mr. Drury, overseer of the gas works, says that about 11,000,000 feet of gas were burned in Peterborough last year, an increase over previous years. In midwinter about 50,000 feet are burned a day, and of course a much smaller quantity in summer.

—The Lindsay curlers were among the survivers of the second draw in the Winnipeg bonspiel, which will be concluded to-day. Lindsay, St. Paul and Portage (Wis.) are the favorites, it being considered that one of these three clubs will win the trophy.

Signs of Disaffection.

The Salvation Army, Canada, Hampered by English Arrogance.

TORONTO, March 5.—There is discussion here over the status of the Salvation Army in Canada. There is said to exist a state of affairs scarcely creditable to the higher powers of the organization. The Army has accomplished many wonderful things in its time, and amassed millions of dollars' worth of property, its soldiers have carried their war songs to nearly every civilized country, but in the zenith of its apparent prosperity the reverse side reflects a shadow which almost obscures the splendor of its most imposing army. Mr. A. Sumner, late editor of the War Cry, was interviewed on the subject, and, while he admits that the Army was instituted by a desire for the welfare of his fellow-beings, yet through it the acquisition of property and influence has allowed abuses to creep in, and the movement is degenerating from its wonted place. Practically it has fallen to a scheme for acquiring property and glorifying the Booth family, and providing lucrative positions for members thereof or their influential friends. If the lowly toilers who have trod the streets, and without return have given the best years of their life and energies to the movement, sicken and become useless for active work, their lot is lamentable, indeed. Either they must finally come to destitution or return to their friends. The army, with all its resources in the way of fine buildings and funds for the prosecution of the work, and many ways of raising money, makes little or no provision for decrepit workers. There is the Home of Rest, but in the sense of providing a place for all down trodden soldiers the term is farcical, as only a small fraction ever obtain admittance there. Mr. Sumner adds that nearly all local officers in good positions, only to be had in cities, have been deposed by officers sent out from England. Old pioneers, who threw themselves into the work at the commencement, have been thrust down to make way for strangers with influence at headquarters in England. If Commissioner Coombs, who has charge of the work, was left to his own dictates, he would act fairly, but undue influence is brought to bear upon him. Then the English officers are often domineering and arrogant, and a spirit of opposition has been aroused against their rule.

The army has property in Canada worth a million dollars, and Mr. Sumner declares that "every other interest is subservient to the gain of property. The organization is not an incorporated body, they always were opposed to that, so they cannot hold property. All properties in Canada are deeded to Commissioner Coombs, his heirs and assigns. He in turn transfers them to General Booth and his heirs. Really General Booth is the owner of all army property, and the disposal of it is subject to the whim of one individual."

Teachers' Convention.

Half-Yearly Meeting of the Teachers' Association.

At the opening session, at the Central School building, this morning, of the semi-annual meeting of the Peterborough Teachers Institute there was an unusually large attendance, over seventy teachers, of which fully seventy per cent. was ladies. All the town teachers were present.

Mr. A. Hutchison, President of the Association, occupied the chair. After roll call and the reading of the minutes of the last meeting by Mr. J. J. Rooney, the President made a few remarks in reference to the work of the meeting.

Mr. Rooney read the Treasurer's report, which showed a balance of something like $64.81 in the treasury.

Messrs. W. Smith and K. Mark were appointed auditors, and Misses Scott and Maggie McDonald and Messrs. Raddan, Lewis and McCreary the nominating committee.

Mr. BROWN, I.P.S., opened the discussion on promotion examinations, based on the report of the committee at the last meeting. He thought the examination papers should be made out by several teachers than by the teacher interested. He himself had prepared all the papers and he invited frank criticism thereon.

Mr. ROONEY was opposed to the interchange of teachers, as it has proved unsuccessful elsewhere. He thought the examination should be left to the teachers. He suggested the appointment by a committee to co-operate with Mr. Brown. The main fault of Mr. Brown's papers was that they were too easy.

Mr. STERLING, who had had experience in Durham, said the practice of changing teachers had been found unsatisfactory.

Mr. BROWN pointed out that if, as had been suggested, he had to examine the 3rd and 4th class it would be a labour beyond his capacity.

Mr. HUTCHISON favoured the examination of the papers by the teachers.

Mr. LEWIS favoured the appointment of a committee.

Miss BECKETT thought there was no danger of the teacher's knowledge of the pupil's ability influencing the estimate of its answers to questions.

At this stage a "Suggestive Programme for Public Schools," prepared by Mr. James Coyle Brown, was distributed among the teachers.

A resolution was passed appointing Misses Cumming, Duff, Lizzie Lewis, and Messrs. Lewis and Strike, a committee to formulate a resolution for submission to the convention at a later stage.

Also appointed Messrs. J. Coyle Brown, I.P.S., H. Strike, H. Lewis and Misses Beckett and Tracy a committee to prepare promotion examination papers.

A general discussion of the promotion examination system closed the morning programme.

Christian Consecration.

St. Paul as an Example.

St. John's Church was well filled last night with a devout congregation on the occasion of the first of the Wednesday night Lenten services. After Evening Prayer, Rev. W. C. Allen, of Millbrook, gave an address, taking for his text—"So run that ye may obtain." The speaker said that all those acquainted with the New Testament, must come to the conclusion that the christian life was one of hard, up-hill work, full of self-denial. The teachings of Christ, as well as his Apostles gave this character to the Christian life. So the Apostle said in the words of the text. "So run that ye may obtain." The living of a Christian life was no easy thing. Christian consecration did not mean with drawal from the trials and duties of active life in selfish seclusion nor a dreamy state of religious ecstacy, looking for a far-away heaven. St. Paul strongly reprobated the neglect of every day duties. Christian consecration meant for us to be in the world not of it—but rather above it. The season of Lent was in its observance not an end but a means to an end—an opportunity for more exalted consecration to a Christian life. He could think of no fitter subject of an address at the beginning of this holy season than that of Christian consecration. St. Paul was held out as an example, one whose whole life was consecrated in every realm of his being to Christ. He was consecrated to the cause of truth as embodied in the preaching of Christ crucified—a Christ who was in us the hope of glory—a Christ in our personal life—Christ the risen—Christ the perfect sacrifice. St. Paul not only preached the truth, but he guarded the Christian faith against error. His life was a living martyrdom—his toilsome journeys, his imprisonments—even in the midst of which he still wrought for Christ, were all tuned to the same key. The preacher urged the example of St. Paul, a man born with like sinful passions as themselves, upon his hearers. His devotion to the cause of Christian truth was especially worthy of imitation in these days of indifference to divine truth. The preacher concluded by urging his hearers also to imitate the example of St. Paul in his consecration to God's service in their daily lives, to live lives of devotion to duty.

Michael Strogoff's Great Record.

A Play with a History Unequalled in Dramatic Annals.

"Michael Strogoff" has a record unequalled by any similar play known in dramatic history. No drama was ever so universally endorsed in so many different countries. It was originally produced in the French language at the Theatre du Chatelet, Paris, and ran there continuously for 700 performances; nearly two years. In the meantime a translation of the great play was made into the English language, and this was produced at the famous Adelphi Theatre, London. Here it ran steadily for nearly a year. Then the late S. Colville, J. H. Haverly and Eugene Tompkins bought the English version for America. Colville made money with it and so did Haverly. Recognizing the great strength of the play, the strong hold it had upon the masses of the people and the great possibilities, Mr. Charles L. Andrews purchased the piece and all its American rights. It will thus be seen that Manager Andrews has the original and only authorized version of this truly great Russian drama. This is the third season of the play in this country under his management.

The following is a brief and accurately prepared table showing the record of Michael Strogoff in the leading cities of both hemispheres:—

NEW YORK—Booth's Theatre, 10 weeks; Niblo's Garden, 16 weeks; Grand Opera, 3 weeks; Academy of Music, 2 weeks; Minor's People's Theatre, 2 weeks.

EUROPE—Theatre du Chatelet, Paris, nearly 2 years; Adelphi Theatre, London, nearly 1 year.

BOSTON—Boston Theatre, 11 weeks.

CHICAGO—Haverly's Theatre, 4 weeks; Columbia Theatre, 2 weeks; Academy of Music, 2 weeks; Criterion Theatre, 2 weeks; People's Theatre, 2 weeks.

ST. LOUIS—Olympic Theatre, 2 weeks; Pope's Theatre, 2 weeks; People's Theatre, 2 weeks.

PHILADELPHIA — Academy of Music, 6 weeks; Chestnut Street Theatre, 3 weeks; Walnut Street Theatre, 2 weeks; National Theatre, 1 week.

SAN FRANCISCO — California Theatre, 8 weeks.

BROOKLYN—Academy of Music, 2 weeks; Brooklyn Theatre, 2 weeks.

NEW ORLEANS—Three engagements.

CINCINNATI—Three engagements.

PROVINCIAL CITIES—Five regular theatrical seasons. d55

FOR A DISCOURAGED LIVER TRY BURDOCK'S PILLS

Orange Grand Lodge.

Resolutions Passed at Campbellford Regarding the Jesuits' Bill.

CAMPBELLFORD, Ont., March 6.—On the assembling of the Orange Grand Lodge this morning a large number of additional members were in attendance, amongst others: John White, ex-M. P.; S. Hughes, of the Warder, Lindsay; Wm. Anderson, Grand Treasurer of British America; James White, Madoc; C. J. White, News, Tweed; E. Weir, Peterborough; W. Carmichael, Grenville, making this one of the largest meetings that has been held for some years.

The result of the discussion last night in reference to the Jesuit Estates Bill was the commitment of the resolutions to a committee, which reported this morning. The committee's resolutions were as follows:—

That while we claim for our Roman Catholic fellow countrymen the rights and privileges we ourselves enjoy, yet we, the members of this Provincial Grand Orange Lodge of Ontario East, representing 375 primary lodges, view with great apprehension the present state of affairs in Canada, where both political parties show such a strong disposition to pander to the Church of Rome; and, moreover, we take this opportunity of expressing ourselves as being in hearty accord with leading papers in their wise and outspoken course regarding the disallowance of the Jesuit Bill, and, further, we are of opinion that a continuance of the present course of political action must inevitably lead to the coalition of the best of all parties with definite principles and a definite policy—principles based upon eternal righteousness and truth—and with a policy that will accord equal rights to all but exclusive privileges to none; a policy that will put country before party, and stand by right and truth at any hazard and at every cost;

That the Act respecting the Jesuits' estates, recently passed by the Legislature of Quebec, is clearly derogatory to Her Majesty's prerogative, inasmuch as it invites the interference of an alien power in our domestic affairs; therefore, this Grand Lodge petition his Excellency the Governor-General-in-Council against said bill, and ask for its disallowance; Also, that all county, district and primary lodges be instructed to petition to the same effect.

The resolutions were carried with even unusual enthusiasm, the entire Grand Lodge rising to their feet and receiving them with "Kentish fire," and cheer after cheer.

A resolution was also passed endorsing the action of Col. O'Brien in his intention to bring before the Dominion Parliament a resolution disapproving the allowance of the Jesuits Estate Bill.

Amongst others items of business the county lodge of North Hastings was divided into two, to be known as North and Central. It was also decided that in future a public meeting be held in connection with each session of the Grand Lodge.

THE ELECTION OF OFFICERS.

The election of Grand officers for 1889 resulted as follows:

R. W. Grand Master—T. B. Collins, Millbrook.

R. W. Deputy Grand Master—James Clarke, Ottawa; J. H. Delamere, Minden.

R. W. Grand Chaplain—Rev. R. H. Leitch, Eldorado.

R. W. Grand Treasurer—Robert Gordon, Tweed.

R. W. Grand Secretary—A. J. VanIngen, Newcastle.

R. W. Grand Lecturer—R. H. Holland, Port Hope.

R. W. Grand Director of Ceremonies—John McCaughey, Cobourg.

R. W. Deputy Grand Secretary—F. M. Clarke, Belleville.

R. W. Deputy Grand Chaplains—Rev. R. H. Harris, Brighton; Rev. John Gallagher, Dufferin; Rev. W. M. Pattyson, Dunsford; Rev. E. G. P. Sanderson, Riceville; Rev. W. W. Walsh, Ottawa; Rev. S. A. Duprau, Frankford; Rev. F. Rooney, Garden Hill.

The officers were then installed by Past Grand Master W. Johnson.

The next place of meeting is to be Smith's Falls.

Way People Wonder

How it is W. J. TURNBULL'S

The Flood of the Season's French and English Printed Calicoes is rolling in—white capped and aglow phosphorescent, color play. How the Priscellas of the past would joy to see them? Pretty as you have seen them, they were never so handsome before. Persian designs, leaves, buds, flowers, polka, dots, plain stripes, scrabbles and scrawls, angles and tangles. More than 300 different styles, small figures, large figures, and mourning designs, better printing was never done 'exquisite.' If you don't want to buy, don't pass the window or come in. Prices range from 6 to 15 cents.

The trouble with low grade Marseilles Bed Spreads has been loose threads at the back—face, all right, but you didn't like the fiddle-string arrangement at the back, needn't. Here are $2.50 Marseilles Bed Spreads, full size and handsome patterns, with backs firm and well finished. Look at this honey-comb quilt for $1, which needs no apology for either size or weight.

Flannelettes—what are they? are they all-wool? No they are mostly cotton, finished to imitate a Flannel, and especially adapted for childrens' dresses and ladies' wrappers. They consist of Cream Grounds, with pink, blue and cardinal Stripes, blue and white, pink and cream, pink and blue, and pink, cream and grey, some 18 patterns in all—the best quality being only 12½ cents a yard.

Opened out this week, a line of Linen Tablings, the maker of which is noted the world over. They are specially suited for every day wear—the warp is well twisted and they wash and iron well.

Before you hear from us again, I will have visited the wholesale markets where I will be on the look-out for Bargains for my Customers.

Thirty Years Paying Rent in Peterborough.
I frequently hear statements akin to above, followed by remarks of deep regret for having missed many golden opportunities of buying whole lots at a price they would now have to pay for one foot of the same land. Buying property in Peterborough is the safest kind of a safe and profitable investment. I have at present cheap houses, medium class homes and a few exceedingly fine Residences and grounds some of which were built for home comforts, regardless of cost. Unconcealable circumstances have now caused these to be offered for immediate sale much under value. I commence at $475, for good house and large lot. I can suit any reasonable buyer. I have also good value in Market Gardens and Farms.

TOPICS FROM THE CAPITAL

THE BUDGET DEBATE CONTINUED IN THE HOUSE.

How Threats of Non-Intercourse Have Increased Canada's Self-Reliance—Among the Committees.

OTTAWA, March 7.—In the Senate yesterday Hon. John Macdonald spoke on the motion which he placed in the paper concerning the extension of the Dominion's trade with the West Indies and South America. It was a continuation of the able paper which he recently read before the Toronto Board of Trade and which has been printed and extensively circulated by that body.

Hon. C. H. Tupper resumed the Budget debate in the House of Commons, and spoke for over two hours in reply to Sir Richard Cartwright's criticisms made on Tuesday night. The Minister of Marine and Fisheries argued that Canada had progressed beyond a doubt and that the policy of the Conservative party had always been for a free and liberal trade relation with the United States, and he believed such an arrangement could be made with the new Republican administration.

Mr. Charlton followed in support of Sir Richard Cartwright's amendment. He went very largely into figures and statistics which evidently had been collected with great care. He was followed by Mr. Peter White, and Mr. Armstrong moved the adjournment of the debate.

The House adjourned at 12.20.

At the meeting of the Railway Committee this morning Hector Cameron, Q.C., was on hand to oppose the Toronto bill, which proposes to compel the burial of telegraph, telephone and other wires, on behalf of the companies interested. Mr. Cameron had his trip for nothing, as the bill will not be heard by the committee until a week from next Friday.

Mr. John Bain was at the meeting in the interest of Mr. Davis' bill to incorporate the Calgary, Alberta and Montana Railway Company. The bill was reported and Mr. Davis was complimented on the exactness of his surveys as presented to the committee.

W. B. McMurrich, one of Toronto's ex-Mayors, was on hand for the furtherance of Col. Denison's bill respecting the Lake Nipissing and James' Bay Railway. The name of the company was changed to the Nipissing and James Bay Railway, and after being somewhat amended was reported.

The act to incorporate the Cobourg, Northumberland and Pacific Railway was considered. The incorporators wish to construct a line from near Cobourg harbor to a point in the township of Marmora, crossing the Trent River and joining the Ontario and Quebec branch of the Canadian Pacific Railway. The bill passed.

An act extending the time for the completion of the South Ontario and Pacific Railway for another five years was approved of.

The Canadian Pacific Railway bill, authorising the company to issue bonds for the acquisition of vessels to run on the Pacific Ocean and other vessels to be used at the terminal points of the railway, was amended in a few particulars and it was then decided to report it.

Mr. Lariviere explained the provisions of the act incorporating the Manitoba and Southeastern Railway Company, which propose to build a line from Winnipeg to the international boundary, with branch lines from the main line to Selkirk and Morris. There was a clause permitting the company to construct telegraph lines for commercial purposes, but this was knocked out.

Mr. Daly, in regard to the bill to enable the City of Winnipeg to utilize the Assiniboine water power, said that there was some doubt as to this Parliament having jurisdiction, and he wished the bill to be referred to a special committee consisting of Sir John Thompson, Colonel Tisdale, Mr. Mulock, Mr. Ross, Mr. Watson and himself. This was agreed to, and the bill incorporating the Assiniboine Water Company was also referred to the same committee.

The Committee on Banking and Commerce this morning reported the bill to consolidate the borrowing powers of the Ontario Loan and Debenture Company. The act respecting the Ontario Mutual Life Assurance Company was also reported. This bill slightly amends the company's act of incorporation.

HOIST WITH THEIR OWN PETARD.

The Effect of the United States Congress' Threats of Non-Intercourse.

OTTAWA, March 7.—The transit trade of Canada through the United States under the bonding system shows a great decrease for the past year compared with previous years. The figures are: Goods carried from United States seaports to Canada $15,610,519 and goods carried from Canada to United States seaports for outside countries $8,315,683, making a total of $23,926,202. This is the smallest amount since 1870. In 1887 the amount was $33,692,600; that is, in a single year the decrease amounted to over nine and three-quarter million dollars. This trade has been dropping down rapidly since 1883, when it amounted to $60,130,000.

The very large drop, equal to 30 per cent. in the last year, is without doubt due to the determination of our Canadian merchants to use our own seaports and our own railways in preference to those of our neighbor to the south of us. The threats of non-intercourse indulged in by the United States Congress were the principal cause of the change of route. The effect has been to transfer the disbursements of the ships requisite to carry this amount of goods to our own seaports and to increase the carrying business of our own railways. As the non-intercourse act is still unrepealed our merchants will see the necessity and wisdom of turning all the business they can into our own routes.

It may be added that the five great seaports of Canada show an increase in 1888 over 1887 in tons of goods brought into and carried out of them of over 200,000 tons.

THE NEW COUNTIES BILL.

DISCUSSED BY THE ONTARIO LEGISLATURE.

A Field Day for New Bills—The Workmen's Compensation for Injuries Bill Passes Its Third Reading.

TORONTO, March 8.—The members of the Local House earned their salaries yesterday by discussing the formation of new counties question. And they worked hard, at least some of them did, in opposing and supporting the measure.

It was a field day for new bills. Ontario's Premier introduced a couple and there were at least half-a-dozen more from the members.

These bills passed their third reading: To amend the Workmen's Compensation for Injuries act; respecting appeals or prosecutions to enforce penalties and offences under provincial acts; to confirm certain bylaws of the City of Kingston, and for other purposes.

Mr. Hardy's bill respecting drainage to lands by flooding in the new districts passed in committee.

These bills passed their second reading: To make further provisions respecting the Districts of Parry Sound and Muskoka; for enforcing orders under the act respecting master and servant; respecting steam threshing machines; respecting the powers of electric light companies.

There was an Ottawa deputation in the lobby yesterday and its object was to talk to the Attorney-General about the controversy between the merchants of Ontario and Quebec. It appears that Montreal merchants procure debtors in Ontario to assign to persons nominally residents of Ontario and conducting the real assigneeship in Quebec. Mr. Mutchmore of Ottawa as spokesman was courteously heard by the Attorney-General. He, however, replied that it had lately been represented to him by the Toronto Board of Trade that they thought it reasonable that Montreal men should possess this control in the same way that they considered that Toronto men should have the control of estates when nominal assignees were appointed here.

Mr. Wood's bill is to prohibit toll gate keepers from collecting tolls on the public highway in case they allow sand to accumulate on the road so as to impede travel, make it dangerous or compel travelers with any animal or vehicle to leave the highway.

Mr. Conmee introduced a bill yesterday to amend the Waterworks Act. Its object is to make the most very requisite for carrying out the provisions of the act better adapted for unforseen requirements.

Mr. Dack's bill to amend the act respecting the planting and growing of trees, provides that the Lombard poplar be added to the list of trees which municipal councils may bonus to extend not exceeding 25 cents for each tree planted on highways. This particular variety of poplar is extensively cultivated by farmers in some sections.

A BIG IRON COMPANY FAILS.

The Reading, Pa., Iron Works Company Suspend Payment Owing a Million.

PHILADELPHIA, March 7.—The suspension of the Reading Iron Works, one of the largest concerns of the kind in Pennsylvania, is announced. The works are located in Reading and operated by a stock company, and the principal offices are in this city. Edward W. Coit, president of the company, declines to make a statement, but says that a meeting of the creditors will be held on Thursday. Many of the stockholders of the company are Philadelphians. The failure is generally attributed to the stringent condition of the iron trade. About 2500 men are employed in the works at Reading. There are three rolling mills, a steam forge, a large machine shop and foundry, a nail works, and one of the largest pipe and tube mills in the country. The liabilities are said to be about $1,000,000. Of this $600,000 consists of funded debt, and the balance, $400,000, is due to various parties, mostly for material purchased at various times.

The Railway Helmets.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—At the conference of the State Railroad Commissioners and Inter-State Commerce Commissioners yesterday, ex-Railroad Commissioner Coffin of Iowa, now representing the Brotherhood of Brakemen, delivered an address, which was received with marked attention. He said: I want to state this fact, that any labor looking toward the passage by the National Legislature of a law compelling the observance of safety appliances on freight cars will be in the proper direction, and that if such a law were passed it would not at all be detrimental to the railway companies. The only question is that of dollars and cents. I refer to the wonderful slaughter of men by the old link-coupler and the hand-brake. In ten years we have killed and maimed 2439 men in the State of Iowa by these two causes alone. We think in Iowa our roads are managed as carefully as any roads. We are a temperance state, and our railway men are temperate and careful, and still last year there were over 249 men killed and maimed by the causes I have spoken of. There are 180,000 miles of railroad in the United States, and over 6000 active, strong men were either killed or maimed for life from these two causes alone last year.

Chinese Hostility to Foreigners.

SHANGHAI, March 7.—A marked increase in hostility to foreigners is noticeable throughout China. The native soldiery at Che Foo are suspected of plotting to attack the foreign settlement.

A Prohibition Defeat.

ST. PAUL, March 7.—By a vote of 67 to 39 the House to-day refused to submit to the people an amendment in favor of prohibition of the liquor traffic.

Weir and Murphy.

CHICAGO, March 7.—The articles of agreement entered into by Ike Weir of Boston and Frank Murphy of England have been made public. The fight is to be to a finish for $1000, with skin-tight gloves, for the world's championship. Queensberry rules to govern. Should there be police interference the referee shall order the men to finish the fight within three days. Each man is to weigh 130 pounds at the ring side.

The battle is to be fought on Monday, March 18, within 200 miles of Chicago. Al. Smith of New York is agreed upon as the referee. The stakes shall be paid to the winner on the referee's decision. J. N. Taylor is temporary stakeholder, and $250 has been deposited with him. The balance, $750, is to be deposited on March 13, the whole amount to be turned over to the referee, who shall be the final stakeholder. The failure of either man to live up to the articles will cause a forfeiture of all money put up by him or his backers.

The New York State League.

AUBURN, N.Y., March 7.—The New York State League of ball players met here to-day. Utica, Elmira, Auburn, Canandaigua and Waterloo were represented. After an informal discussion of plans for the summer the meeting adjourned at 4 p.m. Rome and Binghamton are expected to come into the League.

Harrison's Cabinet's First Meeting.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—At 3 o'clock the first Cabinet meeting of the new Administration was held. It is understood that it was an informal meeting of the newly appointed officers called in order that they might become acquainted with one another.

Funeral of Mr. S. M. Richards.

OTTAWA, March 7.—The funeral of S. M. Richards was largely attended to-day. The Foresters, of which order he was a member, were present in large numbers.

The French Weavers' Strike Ended.

PARIS, March 7.—The weavers' strike at Armentieres has ended.

A WITNESS FROM CANADA

TESTIFIES BEFORE THE PARNELL COMMISSION.

Queen Victoria Enthusiastically Received at Biarritz—England and the Common Affairs—Two Marine Disasters.

LONDON, March 7.—At the sitting of the Parnell Commission to-day an ex-American Fenian named Coleman, now residing in Ontario and employed by the Canadian Pacific Railroad, detailed the outrages in which he took part while he was in Ireland. He said Macauley told him the League had paid him £300 for shooting Burke. On cross-examination Coleman testified he had received £1000 from the Government for acting as a spy in America. With this money he bought property in Winnipeg.

Mr. Soames, The Times' solicitor, testified that Walsh said he could produce documents to prove that Parnell and O'Kelly were connected with the importation of arms into Ireland, but he did not know Walsh's whereabouts. [Laughter.]

The commission at this point adjourned.

Parnellites in a Flutter.

LONDON, March 7.—The Parnellites are in a flutter over the approaching close of The Times case. Sir Charles Russell is ready to make an elaborate opening address for the Parnellites. He is determined not to risk an adverse decision on any grounds. Most of the witnesses subpœnaed from Ireland have promised their services free.

Dr. Tanner Convicted.

DUBLIN, March 7.—Dr. Tanner, M.P. for Cork, arrested for violation of the Crimes Act, was sentenced at Tipperary to-day to three months' imprisonment without hard labor. He has appealed.

Proposed Increase in the British Navy.

LONDON, March 7.—In the House of Commons to-day Lord George Hamilton, First Lord of the Admiralty, stated that the Government proposed to build 8 men-of-war of 14,000 tons each, and two of 9000 tons; nine first-class cruisers, twenty-nine smaller cruisers, four of the Pandora type of cruiser and eighteen of the Sharpshooter type of torpedo vessels. The total tonnage of all these vessels will be 318,000 and the total cost £21,500,000. Lord George asked that £10,000,000 be appropriated from the consolidated fund for the proposed increase of the navy and that the remainder of the sum required be provided for in the ordinary estimates. He promised that the Admiralty's program would be executed within 6½ years.

Lord George did not think the proposed increase would induce other nations to attempt to rival England in naval strength because England had refrained from military rivalry. He did not believe that any other power was capable of executing such an extensive program in so short a time.

Lord Charles Beresford complained that the Government gave no real reason why just so many ships—no more and no less—should be built. He gave notice of an amendment declaring that England's naval strength ought to be equal to the navies of France and any other great power combined.

The Radicals will oppose every stage of the legislation connected with Lord George Hamilton's scheme. It is expected Mr. Gladstone will lead the Opposition attack on the Government.

England Not Entitled to Interfere.

LONDON, March 7.—In the House of Commons to-day Sir James Fergusson said the Government had not heard of any truce being established between the German Consul at Apia and Chief Mataafa. England, he said, had no right to interfere in the matter. He had no doubt Germany had treated Malietoa well.

The Dissident Liberals.

LONDON, March 7.—The dissident Liberals have formed a central organizing council, which will hold its first meeting March 22. Lord Hartington will make an address.

The Queen at Biarritz.

LONDON, March 7.—Queen Victoria arrived at Biarritz to-day. She was welcomed by the mayor and other prominent persons. The Queen was enthusiastically cheered by the people along the route from the station to her villa. President Carnot sent a telegraphic message of welcome, and has placed a military band at her disposal during her stay at Biarritz.

Wreck of a British Man-of-War.

LONDON, March 7.—The British man-of-war Sultan has been wrecked on the Island of Comino in the Mediterranean. The captain and crew were saved. The Sultan was an iron armor-plated vessel of 9290 tons and carried 10 guns. She was temporarily attached to the Mediterranean squadron.

Sunk by a Collision.

LONDON, March 7.—The British ship Vandalia, Capt. Coon, from Perth Amboy, Feb. 5, for London with petroleum, has been sunk off Bognor by a collision with an unknown steamer. One of the crew was killed by the falling of an anchor and one was drowned. The remainder were saved. The boats of the steamer rendered no assistance.

Legitimo Demands Recognition.

LONDON, March 7.—General Legitimo has sent a telegram to the European Governments announcing that the rebellion in Hayti has been crushed and demanding recognition of his Government.

French Affairs.

PARIS, March 7.—The Cabinet has rescinded the decree of exile against the Duc d'Aumale.

In the Chamber of Deputies to-day the election of Gen. Boulanger to the Chamber for the Department of the Seine was verified.

M. Villain submitted his interpellation of the Government regarding the Panama Canal Company. He urged that the canal scheme should not be abandoned and that a meeting of shareholders of the company should be convened for the purpose of discussing means for the continuation of work on the canal. M. Villain said that if the savings of France were insufficient to build the canal assistance should be invoked from other countries. He suggested that an international conference of engineers be summoned. He moved an order of the day appealing to the Government to safeguard the interests of shareholders.

M. Rouvier, Minister of Finance, disclaimed any responsibility on the part of the Government. He said the Government had no means of interfering, although it approved of every effort made by capitalists and companies to prevent the collapse of the undertaking.

Prime Minister Tirard, replying to M de Cassagnac, said the Government would do its utmost for the success of the canal but he could say no more.

The Chamber then by a vote of 344 to 185 adopted a Government order of the day in regard to the canal.

Crispi's Cabinet Accepted.

ROME, March 7.—Acting under advice of Signori Bianchieri and Farini, the former of whom declined to form a ministry, King Humbert has accepted the cabinet arranged by Signor Crispi.

More Trouble in Zanzibar.

ZANZIBAR, March 7.—An Arab dhow arrived here yesterday and reported that she was boarded by an officer of a German gunboat, who granted her a pass. Afterwards she was fired on by other German gunboats and her captain was killed. This news created great excitement among the people of Zanzibar, and crowds surrounded the Sultan's palace, clamoring for revenge. The Sultan referred them to the German consul.

FAITH, SERVICE, HEAVEN.

Three Kinds of Rests to be Sought For.

Another Largely Attended Meeting—The Attendance and Interest Not Diminishing in the Least—Mr. Hunter's "Sermon in a Nutshell."

Rev. Mr. Hunter selected the 4th chapter of John, from the 4th verse, as a subject for his remarks. The first passage read:—"And he must needs go through Samaria."

There was a work down there for Jesus, and there was a work here at the present time. There are some of you church members, Mr. Hunter said, that were down to the theatre last night while a meeting was going on here. It was strange how some people could act while hundreds of souls were running around unsaved. I tell you, he said, there will be a great scattering of so called church members on the judgment day.

Then "The Jews had no dealings with the Samaritans." They were not like the people of the present day—Episcopalians and Methodists and Presbyterians and Baptists were all working together for God's cause. "Now Jacob's well was there." There was something peculiarly interesting about an old well, and by way of applying the point Mr. Hunter compared Jesus to a well; 1800 years old, but deep and inexhaustible, and the water was sweet and lifegiving. Like the old well by the wayside, so Jesus was ever by us. And this well was a resting place, and oh, what rest was to be found in Jesus. We have been battered about by sin all our lives, and there is a door open where we may enter and rest. Then this well, according to the lesson, was a good place to settle difficulties, for the woman of Samaria had her trouble settled there. A great many women to-day, Mr. Hunter said, won't speak to other women; still they mock God by praying him to forgive them their sins while they have not themselves the spirit of forgiveness. They should bring their difficulties to the well of Jesus to be settled. There were a great many things they would have to bury in settling their difficulties. Lastly this well was a constant one, and free to all the world; as was the Salvation Jesus offered.

THREE RESTS.

Mr. Crossley's subject was "Rests." There were three kinds of rest mentioned in the Bible—rests of faith, of service, of heaven. In seeking rest some people tried morality, some reformation, some joining the church—these were all right but not enough in themselves. They must be added to a change of heart, an acceptance of salvation. Then others sought rest in infidelity, in fatalism, in universalism. But all failed because they did not touch the cause of the unrest which followed the consciousness of their guilt and the fear of penalty. Then there were others who had not this rest and yet they did not know what was the matter with them. None of these doctrines could forgive sin and so secure rest; nothing but the blood of Jesus, through which we may obtain rest by faith. "Come unto Me, and I will give you rest," He says. In seeking, however, ninety-nine out of a hundred make a mistake in seeking for rest instead of seeking to have the cause of the unrest removed. The only way to secure rest was to roll the burden away; peace and contentment would surely follow the removal of the burden of guilt by the grace of God.

The second rest was that of service, referred to in Matt. xi, 29. A great many people say that the service of the Lord is harder than a life of sin, but that was because they had never been Christians. When they get the love of the Lord in their hearts, it is so easy for them, for they instinctively take upon themselves the yoke of Christ. Rest would be found in this service because it is a service of love, and the service is with Him, not for Him. He says, "Take my yoke upon you and learn of me, and ye shall find rest unto your souls." Then there was rest in the service of the Lord because the reward was sure. He must be misanthropic indeed, who does not feel rest in the service of the Lord, in view of all these things. Have you got this rest? Mr. Crossley asked his audience. A great many Christians have not this rest because they do not enter upon active service. As in the natural organization, exercise is necessary to a healthy spiritual growth. It is said that "Satan finds some mischief still for idle hands to do." The trouble is they have been doing nothing for the Lord, but have been doing chores for Satan. These meetings were going to be a blessing or injury to Christians, in accordance with the amount of service they do. But here is another mistake the unsaved make. They seek rest in the diligent service of the Lord before they have the rest of faith. They must get the burden of their sins taken off and then the service of the Lord, instead of being a task, will become a delight.

"There remaineth rest, therefore, for the people of God." Those who have the rest of faith and service will enjoy the sweet rest beyond. But there were a great many who were taking the wrong course to win the glorious reward of a loving service of the Master. In conclusion he earnestly exhorted the unconverted to accept the salvation held out to them, the rest of faith and love that would enable them to meet "loved ones in the better land."

Mr. Hunter closed the first part of the meeting by an appeal to the unsaved to heed the message of Christ. He said:—Listen! Listen!! Where is God? Where is He? Listen! He is knocking at thine heart. He wants in. Don't drive Him away. Listen!

Quite a number stood up as repentant sinners and at the after meeting a large number went forward to the mercy seat.

NOTES.

There will be no meeting Saturday night.

The service in the Baptist church Thursday afternoon was a grand success. As Rev. Mr. Pearson stated, a spirit of earnest prayer and religious enthusiasm seemed to pervade the atmosphere, and a great deal of quiet determination to labor for the Master in connection with these services was evinced by those Christian workers present.

Rev. A. Ball has been out of town for several days this week and was unable to be present at the meetings, and his absence last night was explained on account of illness.

The special prayers last night were for a young invalid aged seven years, for a brother and sister, for a moral young man who was seeking salvation.

During the evening Mr. Crossley sang several solos, and duets were rendered by him in conjunction Mr. W. Daly and Miss Nellie Wrighton.

To-night the evangelists will specially speak to the young people.

TORONTO TOPICS.

Annual Meeting of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association.

TORONTO, March 8.—Judge McDougall and the jurors had a busy time of it in the General Sessions yesterday. An Italian named Pasquis Rogero was tried and acquitted on the charge of having at Hayter and Terauley-streets on the night of Dec. 1 last stabbed James Young, the evidence of Wm. Waldron who swore that Rogero was not the man who struck Young saving him.

John Martin the expressman arrested recently on the charge of having stolen a large quantity of fancy goods from the establishment of C. M. Taylor & Co., 52 Front-street west, by whom he was employed, was tried and found guilty. He had access to the place often during the day and many of the articles were found at his house.

There died at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. P. Fogarty, Pape-avenue, yesterday morning, one of Toronto's old citizens, in the person of Mr. Joseph Pape, father of Messrs. John, James and Joseph Pape of this city. The deceased was born in Yorkshire, England, 75 years ago, and with his wife came to Toronto in 1844.

William Haines, a small boy, was arrested last night for appropriating a diamond ring, the property of Robert Nichols.

David Robb surrendered himself to the police yesterday on learning that there was a warrant out against him for wife-beating.

George H. Chandler was arrested last night on a telegram from Madoc, where he is wanted on a charge of fraud.

Yesterday afternoon the 14th annual meeting of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association was held at the Association office, No. 6 Wellington-street west. President Shorey of Acton delivered the presidential address, dealing with the various questions now occupying a foremost place in the interests of Canadian manufacturers. Referring to the increased interest manifested in the Association in Canada, he extended a hearty greeting to delegates and members present from sister provinces. The officers were all re-elected.

A SENTRY SHOT.

Mysterious Affair at Halifax—An Investigation in Progress.

HALIFAX, March 7.—About 11.15 o'clock last night Private Byford, who was on sentry duty at the powder magazine immediately west of the railway bridge at Richmond, was fired upon twice by an unknown man, the second shot passing through the index finger of the soldier's right hand and necessitating amputation. The whole affair is extremely mysterious, and a military court of enquiry is being held.

Plums For the Boys.

NEW YORK, March 7.—The Herald's Washington special says: It is believed James N. Huston of Indiana will be nominated Treasurer of the United States. Col. Clark Carr of Illinois, it is said, will be First Assistant Postmaster-General and A. C. Matthews of the same State, Speaker of the Illinois Legislature, is likely to be Commissioner of Internal Revenue. John C. New is to have his choice of the European missions. It is understood he desires to go to Vienna. Ex-Governor Porter of Indiana will probably go to Rome and Law Wallace to Turkey. There are a dozen candidates for the collectorship of the port of New York. It is understood Mr. Platt can have the office if he wants it, but his friends say he will name Senator Tassett for the place. Charles R. Pops, formerly a theatre manager in St. Louis, is a candidate for Consul-General at Montreal. It is expected Walker Blaine will have a consulship abroad, or he may be re-appointed to his old position as Third Assistant-Secretary of State. Gen. Longstreet is likely to go to South America. Fred Grant is said to have already been selected for Minister to China. Judge L. W. Brown of Ohio wants to be Consul-General at Montreal.

Mascot Sells for $35,000.

NEW YORK, March 7.—At the combination sale here to-day of the California trotting stock the bay colt Mascot of the T. J. Rose Stables was sold to D. Scott Gaston of Trenton, N.J., for $35,000. A breeding to Mascot was sold to J. H. Schultze for $2000.

Mrs. Bockaby looked on timidly, not venturing to utter a word. Mrs. Wylde's method surprised her somewhat, but she was always too well bred to manifest surprise under any circumstances. Mrs. Wylde's examination lasted for fully ten minutes, at the end of which time she sought an easy chair, sat down comfortably in it, folded her arms and pursed her lips.

"You—you—like the dress?" asked Mrs. Bockaby, nervously, as she noticed that the lovely Mrs. Wylde made no effort to break the silence. Mrs. Wylde grunted—pleasantly but undeniably.

"I wish you to understand," said Mrs. Bockaby, still more nervously, and with the awful knowledge that she was "in for it" now, "that this is the—the—first time I have had dealings with women—ladies of your pr-profession. My husband does not know that I have sent for you."

"He never will," said Mrs. Wylde, suddenly finding her tongue, and feeling that she could now satisfactorily assert herself, as she was so fond of doing. "Mrs. Bockaby, I do a large and confidential business—confidential is the word, ma'am, I assure you. If I were to tell you the names of the ladies whom I—ahem!—relief of—er—superfluous garments, you would start. The list might show the names of some of your best friends—ladies in your set, ma'am. But I am to be trusted. It's no use my beating about the bush—I might as well say it right out. I'm cut out for this business. Ladies all find it out sooner or later. I never breathe the name of one customer to another. If you were to offer me $500, ma'am, I wouldn't reveal to you the name of the person—lady, I should say—whom I have just left, nor that of the customer I shall see after I leave you."

Mrs. Wylde, with this declaration of morality, looked proudly at Mrs. Bockaby. She gloried in "asserting" herself, and generally did so in excellent English.

"I—I—suppose y-you not only buy, but sell?" asked Malvina, rather senselessly, it must be confessed.

"Of course," was the answer. "I don't wear all these fine feathers myself."

"And—and you really mean to t-tell me that ladies—ladies, you understand—will buy second hand dresses, and wear them? I supposed servant girls bought them." Mrs. Bockaby was interested in spite of herself.

The Wylde looked at her would be patron with affable contempt. She enjoyed all this talking, but she liked to appear as though confessions were very painful to her.

"If I buy that dress from you this morning," she said, casting rather an unfavorable glance at the gown, "I shall sell it this evening. A lady said to me only the other day: 'Wylde' (when I have intimate and frequent dealings with ladies they get very familiar, you know), 'I want a nice evening dress, but I don't want to pay for it. If you can get me something pretty for nothing, or next to nothing, I shall be very glad.' Oh! you need not be afraid of me, Mrs. Bockaby. I assure you I am accustomed to the very best people."

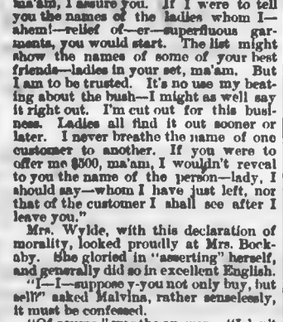
Mrs. Bockaby felt relieved. Since she had dispatched her letter summoning the ubiquitous lady to her side, she had been very uneasy in her mind. She had temporarily forgotten her urgent need of money, in her dread of being discovered dealing with an advertising "superfluous" clothes dealer. Now that Mrs. Wylde had administered a little balm to her self esteem by informing her that her neighbors were equally hard pressed for money she remembered Mrs. De Smigsby's bal poudre and all its alarming requirements.

"Then you like my dress?" asked Malvina, anxiously, as la Wylde's eloquence ceased to flow.

"I never said I did."

"But—but—the lady who wants an evening dress? Surely—surely, she cannot do better than take this one. It's lovely. My husband begged me to wear it next Wednesday evening, but I want a new gown. This cost £100 in London only last year. Look at it Mrs. Wylde, look at it."

Mrs. Bockaby was really agitated. She had felt so certain that the "superfluous" clothes dealer would take her dress, that even the bare possibility of her not doing so was vexatious.



"Oh! you need not be afraid of me, Mrs Bockaby."

"It's so conspicuous," said Mrs. Wylde, deliberately, standing away from the dress and becoming critical. "Ladies don't like to buy anything so uncommon. It's handsome—yes. But, I ask you frankly, ma'am, would you like to buy a gown such as this from me? You'd say: 'Oh, no, I shall meet people who have seen it, and they'll say that I'm wearing Mrs. So-and-So's old clothes.' Whereas, if I buy an ordinarily pretty dress people won't be afraid of its being recognised. You understand?"

"Yes," very faintly, "my dress, however, has never been worn in America."

Mrs. Wylde reflected a few moments. The garment most certainly had the faults to which she had so touchingly referred—it was conspicuous, and yet—she could not help admiring it. It was certainly exquisite.

"Come, Mrs. Bockaby," she said, with the determination of the accomplished buyer, "I'll stretch a point, and give you £50 for the dress."

"Fifty dollars!" exclaimed Malvina, aghast. "Why, my dear woman, the cost £300, and I'm selling it because I

"Ha! ha!" laughed Mrs. Wylde, mirthfully. "Very good—very good indeed, I assure you. Ah, Mrs. Bockaby, I can see that this is your first dealing with ladies of my profession. We never depart from our first bid. Fifty dollars, or nothing."

Mrs. Bockaby thought for a few moments, then going to her wardrobe, she took out two handsome morning dresses and threw them on the bed. "Now," she said sharply, "give me $150 for the lot."

La Wylde's keen business eyes flashed. She closed the bargain at once. Taking from the bosom of her dress a greasy pocketbook, she handed the amount required in clean bills to Mrs. Bockaby, and that lady triumphantly pocketed it.

"You'll find that I do business very squarely," said the intrepid little woman, as she prepared to leave.

"I trust I—I shall not have any necessity to call you again," ungratefully remarked Malvina.

La Wylde laughed. "All you ladies say the same thing," she remarked. "You'll send for me again, Mrs. Bockaby. The first step is the one that costs, you know."

Mrs. Bockaby herself, showed her visitor to the door, went down stairs with her, and assisted her departure from the house. Then ensconcing herself behind a curtain, she saw the little black woman deposit her bag, filled with "superfluous" dresses, in the neat little phaeton, and drive off. Mrs. Bockaby blushed, but she had the money.

To be Continued.

PIGOTT DOUBLY A TRAITOR.

It is Now Said He Wrote the Secret History of Fenianism.

CHICAGO, March 6.—Col. Richard Burke, of this city has known Pigott, the Parnell letter forger, since 1868, and charges that Pigott gave the English Government information about Burke's connection with the Irish Republican Brotherhood that sentenced him to prison for 15 years, five of which were served.

"Last November," says Col. Burke, "I wrote The London Times a letter suggesting the likelihood that Pigott had a hand in forging the alleged Parnell letters. There has been published a secret history of Fenianism, and the English press has made a great ado over its alleged exposures. I associated Pigott with its authorship, for the half truths in it could come only from the Government officers, who had all the facts accumulated during the trials of 1867-8, or from those certain men who were in the confidence of the Brotherhood leaders. One of these was Pigott.

"The others may be implicated, but, to my mind Pigott is probably the man who wrote the book. I am tracing up the thread of the story in its connection with Pigott and the other two men and I think I will be able to say soon who wrote that book."

On a Friday, in Room 13.

LONDON, March 6.—A large number of dispatches have passed between the Government and the British Embassy at Madrid concerning the disposition of Pigott's effects. The informer's papers have been ordered into the custody of a special detective now in Madrid, and they will be put in evidence before the Parnell Commission on Thursday. It is stated that a letter has come to light in Madrid addressed to Fitzgerald, otherwise Pigott, regarding Mr. Shannon's promise to pay the informer money. This letter is said to contain important evidence concerning the responsibility for Pigott's escape. It is rumored ominously that Pigott committed suicide on Friday in room 13.

A Blaze in Belmont.

Early on Thursday morning last, the Register says, Mr. Wm. Coon's saw mill, in Belmont, was destroyed by fire. The engine house, which contained the engine and boiler, was saved after a hard fight. Mr. Coon estimates his loss at between $700 and $800. The fire is supposed to have been the work of an incendiary. No insurance.

A Century Old.

A rare curiosity is shown in the window of Mr. J. Carey's boot and shoe store. It is a pair of child's boots of the period of 1789, just 100 years ago. The soles are of thick wood, trimly shaped, the uppers being tacked on to the sides. The soles are shod with iron similar to a horse shoe, while brass toes and buckles complete the outfit. The leather has been well preserved. Mr. Carey got the curio from an Englishman not long out from the old country.

"Little Jim" Sold.

Dan Dwyer's horse "Little Jim," which has been sweeping in the prizes at all the Canadian winter races this year, has been sold to W. French, Toronto, for $600. "Little Jim's" last victory was at Collingwood, where he won the free-for-all over "Maud S." and "F.O.P." While in Dwyer's possession, "Little Jim" won a heap of money.

The Coming Twelfth.

The district Orange celebration will be held at Cobourg this year on the twelfth of July. Several years ago the Orangemen of Peterborough, Durham and Northumberland in order to avoid clashing, agreed to take the celebration in rotation. Port Hope had it last year and Peterborough the year before. Cobourg's turn is coming. The county of Victoria was included in this arrangement at first but afterwards dropped out. Victoria Orangemen will celebrate at Lindsay.

Matinee To-Morrow.

Signor Giovanni's gift and novelty show has been running at the Opera House every night this week with fair success. The company's engagement closes Saturday night. To-morrow afternoon there will be a matinee commencing at two o'clock, when the prices will be reduced to 15 cents for children. This is a show specially adapted for the amusement and entertainment of children, and, besides, a large number of valuable presents are given away at every performance. Some of the articles in glassware are shown in the window of China Hall.

Curlicans.

With the drop in the temperature curling has revived somewhat. To-day three rinks of Toronto curlers are playing with an equal number of the Peterborough club. At three o'clock the Toronto men had a big lead. To-morrow they go to Lakefield.

The Lindsay rink fell out of the Winnipeg bonspiel on the fourth draw. Only Winnipeg clubs remain to play off.

The point game which was to have been played to night has been postponed on account of the visit of the Torontos. It will instead be held Monday afternoon and evening.

From San Francisco.

The San Francisco Chronicle publishes a report of a meeting of the Scotch citizens of 'Frisco to discuss a plan of organization for the purpose of raising funds to erect a monument to Robert Burns, the poet, in Golden Gate Park. Mr. John Elder, a former resident of Peterborough, took a prominent part, addressing the meeting and submitting for inspection a cut of what he considered the handsomest monument of Burns in America, that which is now in Washington Park, Albany. Committees were appointed and the meeting broke up in the enthusiastic determination to erect a fitting tribute to the immortal memory of Scotland's bard in the city of the setting sun.

Who Can Vote?

There seems to be a misapprehension among many as to who are entitled to vote for or against the Canada Temperance Act repeal:

Section 12 of the Canada Temperance Act provides:—All persons qualified to vote at the election of a member of the House of Commons, in the county or city to which any proclamation issued under this Act relates, on the day on which a poll is held, in compliance with such proclamation, and no others shall be qualified to vote and to have their votes polled on that day, for or against the adoption of the petition mentioned in such proclamation.

The proclamation referred to is the proclamation which orders a vote on the repeal of the Scott act. The list of voters will, therefore, be the list last revised by the revising barristers, as the persons named therein will be the only persons entitled to vote at an election for a member for the House of Commons on the day of the polling for the repeal of the Act.

A Reasonable Subject.

Spring is approaching rapidly, and with its advent new duties will demand the attention of the housekeeper. The inevitable house-cleaning crusade will be in full swing and everybody will be making improvements. In these will be included new house furniture and the tidying up and repairing of that which shows signs of wear. To be prepared, the housekeeper should keep in mind D. Belleghem, the Furniture King of the Midland District, who has at his spacious warerooms a magnificent stock of furniture of every conceivable variety—and range of price. Special attention is given to repairs, upholstering in particular. A good dose of upholstering makes a piece of furniture as good in appearance as a new article. Therefore, if you don't want to buy a new article of furniture which you can get at Belleghem's of the best quality and at the lowest living price, then leave your orders for repairs in time. Don't delay for if all delay and come at once their will be more danger of the job being longer in doing. Remember when you want anything of first class quality whether new furniture or tasty repairs, be sure to call at Belleghem's, the furniture shop furthest west on Hunter street.

"Held by the Enemy" at Palmer's Theatre New York.

The New York World says:—Palmer's Theatre was well filled with spectators as the curtain rolled up for the first act of Gillette's justly celebrated play "Held by the Enemy," and their interest in the excellent performance did not flag until the end. "Held by the Enemy" is distinctly an American Drama and illustrates incidents and scenes down South during the late war, and it is unanimously conceded to be one of the finest dramas upon the American stage. Unlike most plays of a similar nature, "Held by the Enemy" dispenses with the bloody and scheming villain, and the tribulations of the heroine are portrayed through a force of circumstances in a natural manner which makes the thrilling situations more realistic and interesting. The artistic impersonation of the characters last evening, coupled with frequent acoustic music, made the representation of the play a most delightful one. Miss Beatrice Moreland, who appeared in the leading female role of Rachel, is a young lady of marked talent in the emotional line, and is one of the few who can personate a character of that nature without overdoing the matter. The dignity and tenderness combined in her acting of the difficult role won the admiration of all, and gave evidence of careful and painstaking study. As Susan, Miss Friend gave an impersonation that was at once original and funny. The lisping voice of the young lady, whether natural or assumed, is certainly very appropriate to the part, and the naive interpretation created much laughter, especially in the last act. J. W. Remple, in the leading role, gave a quiet and dignified rendition of his part; and Fitts H. Owsley was excellent in what little he had to do as the Rebel spy. In fact, it seemed a pity that the author could not have provided for the spy by letting him marry the old lady, for instance, instead of killing him in order to have the play end properly. Miss Alice Gray gave an excellent interpretation of the part of the elderly female, and Jack Farrell, as the "special artist," portrayed the irrepressible reporter and sketch artist in a faithful manner. The other characters, without exception, were well enacted, and the general stage settings were very fine. "Held by the Enemy" will hold the boards again to-night, and will undoubtedly be greeted with a full house. Bradburn's Opera House, Peterborough, Monday evening, March 11th. Reserved seats at Doucet's. Prices, 35, 50 and 75 cents. d

Teachers' Convention.

Half-Yearly Meeting of the Teachers' Association.

THURSDAY, March 7th.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

At the afternoon session there was a larger attendance than in the morning. After routine, Mr. J. J. Tilley, Inspector of Model Schools, Toronto, illustrated the subject of Grammar, with a class of pupils unacquainted with the subject. At the outset he insisted on the importance of giving Conversation work a practical shape. He would try to show just how he would proceed to teach grammar at the beginning, a time when a good start was of the highest importance. He began by writing on the board a sentence and teaching the children to point out the functions of words and their relations, a primary form of analysis, without a view to technical terms, and the next step was to classify these words. The teaching led up to giving the child the idea of a part of speech and then its use. The teaching of inflection was also illustrated by the objective method. The various steps deduced were, first,—present the example to the pupil; second, teach the use of the example; third, make comparison of forms or operations; fourth, lead the pupils to generalize from example, and, fifth, teach pupils to apply the knowledge they have gained. Taking a more advanced class he illustrated the mode of teaching case by the same method. His presentation of the subject was listened to with great interest, and his method of catechising the teachers upon the subject taught, and the difficulty they had, or seemed to have, in promptly answering the Inspector's posers, will teach teachers to have more sympathy with their pupils.

Rev. JOHN MCEWAN of Lakefield presented an address upon "Vital Steps in the process of Education." After defining education he proceeded to show that the first matter to be attended to was to make pupils understand that they had a being. Presupposing a teacher and learner, it was pointed out that the various vital steps in order were first mental contact involving the adaptability of teacher's methods to the capacity of his pupils; the impression upon the pupil, their recognition; these three steps involving the approach to the pupil. Then followed attention, co-operation, instruction, assimilation, which constituted the process. The conviction of the possession of knowledge influencing conduct, conduct creating habit and habit lead to character, which was the man, the being. It was important to get clear views of the capacity and mental calibre of pupils.

MR. TILLEY'S LECTURE.

There was rather a small attendance at the court room last night to listen to a capital address by

Mr. J. J. TILLEY, Inspector of Model Schools, on the subject of "Success in Life." He defined success in life as making the most of one's self. A divine law required that man should labor; constant toil and struggle marked the whole history of the race. Individual and national observance of this decree was essential to national and personal success. The decadence of the Roman Empire was graphically portrayed as consequent upon idle and luxurious habits. That nation was the most prosperous whose inhabitants were engaged in the practice of industrial pursuits. The condition in the way of prosperity of Canada and the "States" was contrasted with that of Mexico, where honest industry was disregarded and where the results of idleness were plainly to be seen. The dignity of labor was insisted on at length in eloquent terms. We all must work in some way mental or physical, or otherwise steal—yes steal, in some way, no matter how we might disguise our theft. Steady, plodding toil would succeed where idle genius will fail. We must work if we would achieve distinction—nothing worthy of note was accomplished without work. Complaint was sometimes made that the remuneration of mental labor was disproportionate to that of manual labor. But the speaker contrasted the mental strain and terrible sense of responsibility of a train despatcher compared with that of a switchman. The arduous duties of the teacher—day after day following the dull path of routine—giving out all and receiving nothing—daily associating with his mental inferiors—and carrying with him to his home the cares and petty annoyances of the school life, under the strain of which he soon breaks down, without adequate provisions for old age, and yet teachers received very little more remuneration—and in back townships less—than is given to manual labour. In view of this, it was not to be wondered at that withdrawals from the teaching profession were constant. Another element in success was that, when once a young man selected a calling, he should strive to make himself master of his calling—no matter how humble. When times became depressed the faithful, competent employee was retained, when he that was contented with a perfunctory performance of his duty, was dispensed with. Instances were given where mechanics, who had made themselves masters of their trade, were enjoying independence of feeling, money-making capacity, and respected citizenship; kings and princes compared to those dainty paupers who were contented with mediocrity in some "genteel" occupation. Perseverance was another important and necessary element of success. Success in life depended on each one's individual self. Help from without was debilitating compared with inward self-reliance. Legislation contrasted with self-reliance was a futile factor in national success. A self-reliant and industrious people was better. The best capital for a young man to start in life with was robust health, a good education, and a resolved will and determination to work his way. Teachers were urged to impress upon their pupils the nobility of principles of self-reliance, rather than dependence upon the assistance of others. Character was the man and character was the result of action. Stocks might fall in value and riches flee away, but character was a permanent investment, that is always at par value. The beauty and value of moral lives, honesty of conduct, devotion to duty and faithful discharge of all the responsibilities of life, were eloquently insisted on, and the young men reminded that they could never have more faithful friends and valued monitors than their father and mother.

Mr. D. W. DUMBLE was pleased with the practical and valuable nature of the lecture, and he was sorry that more young people were not present to be profited by it, and he hoped that at some future time Mr. Tilley would be able to repeat it. He moved, seconded by Mr. Wm. Smith, a cordial vote of thanks which was unanimously tendered the speaker.

FRIDAY, March 8th.

There was a good attendance.

After routine, Mr. W. S. Ellis, M.A., gave an address upon "The Practical Side of Education." Our present educational system was in a state of development, and its development was hurriedly sketched and the point made that there had been changes—there would be changes—there naturally must be changes in our educational system. Education was defined as something that qualified the possessor to take an intelligent view of things going on around them; a mere accumulation of knowledge was not education. A chief defect in our present system was the lack of cultivation of habits of observation in children. Our school system should give both education and learning in due proportion. The question to be decided was where the teaching of the practical, as referred to the several callings, should be limited. The points insisted on as necessary were indicated as reading—reading intelligently, so as to bring out the sense of what is read. A valuable object lesson was to teach the pupil to put the sense of a reading lesson in his own words. As regarded grammar, a text book on the subject, except as a book of reference, was unnecessary. Pupils should not be worried about the cases of nouns when there were no such things as cases of nouns. It was a waste of time to teach grammar in any other way than that which may be derived from reading lessons. In geography the main principles should only be taught—that was all the average adult could retain and use. History as it should be taught was beyond the comprehension of the ordinary public school pupils. History as taught at present was largely a waste of time. As to arithmetic, what was practical for one, was not practical for an other, and the so called practical arithmetic did not give education—did not develop the powers of the mind. In regard to what was taught and was not well taught, necessarily, the speaker had dealt, but he emphasized —teach the left hand to be equally useful with the right hand—teach children the facts regarding familiar plants, and natural objects which they were daily meeting. The speaker insisted that it was more important to learn the reason of baking powder being used in making bread, and each other familiar facts, than to learn all there was in the pages of many of the text books. As a matter of importance it would be better to discard our history text books, and teach children the familiar facts of our Dominion, provincial and municipal institutions. In regard to examinations, these were useful if rightly conducted, but an examination which brought out the amount of cramming the pupil had undergone, and failed to show mental development, was vicious and ought to be abolished.

THE IMPORTANCE OF MANUAL TRAINING

A somewhat animated discussion followed in which several teachers took part, generally endorsing the views advanced by Mr. Ellis.

MR. INSPECTOR TILLEY addressed himself to the theoretical subject of the Principle of Education—upon which method should be based. All practice contained the essentials of the theory and the theory of education was derivable from the practice of education. That theory of education which approached perfection corresponded with the means by which the child naturally acquires information. Education was defined as cultured growth. The first principle of education was that mind and body were interdependent. The second principle that faculty of all kinds grew only by activity and exercise. There could be no mental development without mental activity. Repetition of action with reference to the mind gave clearness of perception. The exercise of a child's activities led to the acquisition of knowledge. Teachers were assured that unless the pupil could interpret in his own consciousness, the attempted lesson, he could not learn. The teacher's part was to develop and train the mind, to afford information, by means of influences from without operating on internal impressions. Nature begins her education with facts, gives no verbal explanations, and teachers were urged to give their explanation through the things he or she was attempting to explain. Nature furnishes faculty, material and occasion for the operation of the faculty, and the material was the teacher's occupation to furnish. To secure the attention was an effect due to a cause, which the teacher should supply. The aim of the teacher should be to afford as little help as possible to the pupil and teach him to help himself.

Lenten Regulations.

The Fasts Which all Good Roman Catholics will Observe.

Following are the Lenten regulations for Roman Catholics in the diocese of Peterborough:—

All days in Lent (Sundays excepted) are fasting days—one meal and a collation.

All persons who are twenty-one and under sixty years, are bound by the law of fasting and abstinence.

By virtue of powers granted by Apostolic Indult, the use of meat is permitted on all Sundays at discretion, also at the one meal on all Mondays, Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays, except the Saturday of Ember week, 16th March, and Holy Saturday.

Fish and flesh are not allowed at the same meal.

The use of milk, butter, cheese and eggs, is allowed on all days.

The use of dripping or lard (not suet) is allowed as a condiment in preparing food on all days except Good Friday.

Those exempted from fasting are:—All persons under twenty-one and over sixty years of age, the sick and infirm, women carrying or nursing infants, all employed at hard labor.

All who cannot fast should give more abundant alms, be more assiduous in prayer, and attend more frequently to their religious duties, so as to make up for the want of corporal mortification.

Further dispensations, when occasion requires, can be obtained from the respective pastors, who are empowered to grant them

It is recommended in missions, where the people can conveniently attend, that special devotions be held on Wednesday evenings and Friday evenings. On Wednesday evenings the Rosary may be said, followed by instruction and Benediction of the Holy Sacrament. On Friday evenings the "Stations of the Cross," wherever erected, may be substituted for the Rosary.

Personal.

The Rev. Dean O'Connor, of Barrie, Bishop-elect of the diocese of Peterborough, yesterday paid a visit to Bishop Dowling.

Mr. C. Donovan, of Toronto, Inspector of Separate Schools, has been in town two or three days this week inspecting the Separate schools and convent.

Messrs. W. H. Law and Jas. Kendry, Peterborough, attended the annual meeting and banquet of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association in Toronto yesterday, and both were elected members of the Executive Committee.

A Centreville correspondent of the Millbrook Reporter says:—We have much pleasure in noticing that Miss Phoebe Barry, of Peterborough, is visiting with her uncle, Mr. Thos. Doyell, and other friends in this part. Miss Barry is an intelligent and conversible young lady and enlivens the social circle very much by her cheerful and agreeable manner.

Willow and Wicket.

The St. Paul's School Cricket Club, of Concord, N.H., propose making a tour of Southern Canada this summer, beginning about the end of June, and have written to Mr. G. G.S. Lindsey, of Toronto, to arrange dates for them. Mr. Lindsey is in favor of the following fixtures being arranged for the visitors:—Montreal, Kingston, Ottawa, Peterborough, Trinity College School, Port Hope, ex members of Upper Canada College, Hamilton, Guelph and Toronto.

Baseball.

Toronto University baseball club intends making a tour of the United States this year, playing all the College teams they can secure matches with. On their way across the lines they want to have a few matches with Canadian clubs, and have written Lindsay and Peterborough for a date about the 24th of May. If the local club wish to make an engagement now is the time.

Why People Wonder

How it is W. J. Morrow sells his teas and all other lines so cheap—well, he buys in large quantities owing to his extensive trade turns over his goods quickly, as he is not so anxious for large profits as other houses are, and does the largest trade of any grocery house in town. Something new—our 5 lb. Japan for $1.00. See our advertisement in another column.

The Jesuit Question.

The regular debate of the Otonabee Canoe Club will be held to-night, when the Jesuit Estate Bill will be discussed. The chair will be taken at nine o'clock sharp, and all members are requested to be on hand. This debate promises to be one of the best of the series.

TURNBULL'S

The Flood of the Season's French and English Printed Calicoes is rolling in—white capped and aglow phosphorescent, color play. How the Priscellas of the past would joy to see them? Pretty as you have seen them, they were never so handsome before. Persian designs, leaves, buds, flowers, polka, dots, plain stripes, scrabbles and scrawls, angles and tangles. More than 300 different styles, small figures, large figures, and mourning designs, better printing was never done 'exquisite.' If you don't want to buy, don't pass the window or come in. Prices range from 6 to 15 cents.

The trouble with low grade Marseilles Bed Spreads has been loose threads at the back—lace, all right, but you didn't like the fiddle-string arrangement at the back, needn't. Here are $2.50 Marseilles Bed Spreads, full size and handsome patterns, with backs firm and well finished. Look at this honey-comb quilt for $1, which needs no apology for either size or weight.

Flannelettes—what are they? are they all-wool? No they are mostly cotton, finished to imitate a Flannel, and especially adapted for childrens' dresses and ladies' wrappers. They consist of Cream Grounds, with pink, blue and cardinal Stripes, blue and white, pink and cream, pink and blue, and pink, cream and grey, some 18 patterns in all—the best quality being only 12½ cents a yard.

Opened out this week, a line of Linen Tablings, the maker of which is noted the world over. They are specially suited for every day wear—the warp is well twisted and they wash and iron well.

Before you hear from us again, I will have visited the wholesale markets where I will be on the look-out for Bargains for my Customers.

ONTARIO'S LAWMAKERS.

A LIVELY DEBATE IN THE LOCAL HOUSE YESTERDAY.

The Question of Teaching the French Language in the Public Schools Discussed—Railway Deputations.

In the House yesterday Mr. Craig moved an order of the House as follows:

Return showing the number and location of public schools in Ontario in which any language other than English is used in the work of teaching, either wholly or in part. A list of text books in any language other than English used in such schools. The total number of scholars attending each of such schools. The number of scholars in each of such schools using text books in any language other than English. The number of teachers in such schools who cannot use the English language in teaching.

Mr. Craig made a speech in which he attacked the teaching of the French language in the eastern counties public schools of the Province of Ontario. This, he said, was an English-speaking province, and it was the wish of the people that this province should remain such. "I am," he said, "always glad to welcome our German friends who come here, but I believe that it will be admitted that whoever comes to this country ought to submit to its laws and institutions, and they should be willing that the English language should prevail in all these institutions." Most of us were aware that in this province we had French and German schools. "I don't refer," said he, "to high schools, and I wish to make it distinctly understood that I have no reference to our high schools or collegiate institutes, but I refer to what we know as our public schools." Nor did he wish to throw contempt upon any religious views. He continued: "I respect the religious opinions of every man, but it is my duty to present the facts and show the true state of affairs which I find existing."

The Minister of Education replied to the mover. He was glad that Mr. Craig fell in line with the sentiment of Ontario: That our school system was an excellent one, and that its defects were trifling compared with its points of excellence. Mr. Craig has censured the department, but had failed to give it credit for its insistence upon the study of English in every school under its jurisdiction in the counties referred to. He repudiated the charge that teachers were engaged who could not teach the English tongue. On the contrary all candidates totally ignorant of English were rejected. With regard to the licensing of teachers he would say in a word that no teacher could be authorized to teach in a school where both languages were taught unless he could teach English as well as French. He was prepared to accede to the motion of his friend, but he did not wish that the impression should go forth that this Legislature of Ontario was not broad enough, not liberal enough to respect even the prejudices of any nationality which might choose Ontario as its home. We would not accomplish anything as a people unless we entertained more liberal views.

Mr. Meredith followed. He contended that the English language should not be taught as a foreign tongue in the schools of Canada. He maintained that no school supported by the State, no school receiving a dollar of the public money, should with regard to the education which is given by means of it, be without the control of the State. We have in this Province of Ontario, he said, departed from a system of unity of education. We have created a separate school system and I believe it was a great mistake, not only in the interest of Protestants but of Catholics, when these separate schools were established. These matters are not under control of this Legislature, and we can only express our opinions upon them as upon abstract measures. Mr. Meredith concluded: "There will never come the fibre out of which is built a nation if the rights of a majority of the people are not recognized.

Mr. Awrey moved the adjournment of the debate at 6 p. m., but the Attorney-General stating that several deputations were in attendance, moved the adjournment of the House.

Mr. Leys' bill introduced yesterday to amend the Voters' Lists Act provides for amending voters' lists in cases where subsequently to their final revision a voter has sold his property or has died. This bill will enable the purchaser or the devisee or heir to be substituted for the name of the seller or the deceased voter.

Mr. Meacham introduced a bill which allows a council to appoint fire guardians, on the petition of one-fourth of the ratepayers. It enacts that no one shall set out fire in open places, where there is danger of its spreading, between July 1 and Oct. 1 without consent of fire guardians.

Mr. Guthrie's bill introduced yesterday, to amend the Ontario Insurance Act, provides for a prompt appraisement by competent appraisers, mutually chosen by the insured and the company, of goods partially destroyed by fire and also for the expense of the preparation of a particular account of goods lost should the insured refuse to prepare one.

A deputation from Parry Sound waited upon the Attorney-General after adjournment. Their object was to obtain a grant for a line of railway from Arnprior, across the Northern Pacific Junction by Burk's Falls and thence to Parry Sound. A delegation was also in attendance to ask a grant of $5000 per mile for the Ottawa, Arnprior and Parry Sound Railway. The line would cover a distance of 220 miles. The object of both deputations were practically the same. The idea is to get a short route from the upper lakes to ocean points such as Portland and Boston and facilitate the opening up of the country.

Edison's Patent Void.

OTTAWA, March 8.—One of the most important patent decisions ever rendered in Canada has just been given by the Commissioner of Patents, in which the patent on the incandescent lamp, held exclusively in the Dominion by the Edison electric light company, has been declared null and void, the ground of the decision being failure to comply with the patent regulations, which provide that the articles thus patented must be manufactured within Canada one year from the issue of the patent, and the importation of the same patent from the United States must cease within two years.

Noted Counterfeiters Arrested.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., March 8.—Marshal Faulkinburg arrested in Conway County yesterday Martin Thorp and William Garner, leaders of the most extensive gang of counterfeiters in the Southwest. Officers have been on their track for months. An immense sum of bogus money, comprising $5, $10 and $20 imitation gold pieces, was secured. Over a dozen persons are implicated, comprising some well-known people of Perry and Selina Counties. The arrest causes a great sensation.

Midland Voted $30,000 for Its Harbor.

MIDLAND, March 8.—A bylaw approprieting $30,000 for the completion of harbor improvements in conjunction with the Dominion Government and Grand Trunk, was carried here to-day by a large majority, only 27 votes being recorded against the bylaw.

To Meet the Soo Line's Rate.

CHICAGO, March 8.—The Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railroad has announced a reduction of five cents per one hundred pounds on wheat and flour from Minneapolis to Chicago. This is to offset the reason cut which has opened the carrying of the articles east by way of Duluth and the Soo line.

PROPOSED INCREASE IN THE SALARIES OF JUDGES.

The House Gets Through a Lot of Business and Finds Time to do Considerable Speechmaking.

OTTAWA, March 8.—Sir John Thompson to-night gave notice of an amendment to the act respecting the salaries of judges of provincial courts, to increase the same. The Minister of Justice introduced the amendment at the last session of Parliament, but it was withdrawn, presumably because of the large amount involved by these increases.

The judges of the county courts of Ontario will learn with regret that no mention is made in Sir John's amendment of an increase to any of their salaries. The attention of the Minister of Justice was called to the matter some time ago by Mr. Mulock, but it is not likely that any of them will receive increases in the near future. The principal question now is, Will the Government really make the increases of which the Minister of Justice gives notice this evening?

The amendment proposes, as it did last year, that the salary of the Chief Justices of Ontario shall be increased from $4000 to $7000 per annum, three Justices of Appeal from $3000 to $6000; the Chief Justice of the Queen's Bench from $3900 to $7000; two Puisne Judges of the same court from $3600 to $6000; the Chancellor of Ontario from $3600 to $7000; three Chancery Justices from $3600 to $6000; the Chief Justice of the Common Pleas from $3900 to $7000; two Puisne Justices of the same court from $3600 to $6000.

The salaries of the Judges of the Superior Courts in Quebec, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island and Manitoba are also all down for increases of $1000 per annum. The Chief Justices in Quebec will get the same as the Ontario Chief Justices, $7000. The Senior Puisne Judge residing at Quebec, however, if the Chief Justice resides at Montreal, or the Senior Puisne Judge residing at Montreal, if the Chief Justice resides at Quebec, is to receive $1000 in addition to his other salary.

The Chief Justice of Nova Scotia is to receive $6000, of New Brunswick $6000, of Prince Edward Island $5000, of Manitoba $6000, of British Columbia $6000 and the five judges of the territories $5000 each.

The amendment also provides that the salaries of five County Court Judges in British Columbia shall be $2400 and that each judge may in addition receive a salary from the province for acting as stipendiary magistrate. Also that there may be paid to each judge of a provincial court attending as such any court held at any place other than that at which he is directed to reside, for traveling allowances, his moving expenses and such sums as are allowed from time to time by the Governor-in-Council for each day he is absent from his place of residence. These increases affect 14 judges in Ontario, 38 in Quebec, 7 in Nova Scotia, 6 in New Brunswick, 3 in Prince Edward Island, 4 in Manitoba, 1n in British Columbia (including County Judges) and 5 in the territories.

The lowest salary paid to Superior Court Judges under the increased schedule will be $4000 in Prince Edward Island.

LAWMAKING AND TALK.

The Minister of Justice Passes Four of His Bills Through the House.

OTTAWA, March 8.—The proceedings in the House this afternoon and to-night were divided between lawmaking and talk. The Minister of Justice monopolized nearly two hours in passing to a finishing stage four of his own bills. He was assisted in a criticism of them by the three Opposition lawyers who sit straight across the floor from Sir John Thompson: Mr. Weldon, Mr. Mills and Mr. Davies.

The bills referred to are the act respecting rules of court in relation to criminal matters, an act respecting corrupt practices in municipal affairs, an act to make further provision respecting enquiries concerning public matters and an act to permit conditional release of first offenders in certain cases. The first and last of these acts are adapted from British statutes. The Minister explained that the judges have been in the habit of suspending sentence or certain first offenders, and it was to give this action legislative authority that the bill was introduced.

The act respecting corrupt practices in municipal affairs was to provide punishment for persons who offer bribes to anyone who is a member of a municipal council or to the person who receives a bribe. Col. Amyot wanted the bill extended so as to punish bribers at municipal elections, and Mr. Mills wanted the bribery of members of Parliament included. Sir John Thompson said Mr. Amyot's suggestion was a good one. As for Mr. Mills' remarks no demand had yet been made for such legislation. It had, however, as regards municipal bodies. To further reply to Mr. Mills the minister said the Parliament of Canada was competent to raise to "the rank of a crime the offering to or taking of a bribe by any member of a municipal council or body."

The act respecting public enquiries was suggested by the recent "boodle" trials in Quebec. The minister said that by the bill persons who were called to give evidence at an enquiry ordered by Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council could not plead "privilege" on the ground that his evidence would incriminate him. No such "privilege" will be permitted, but no criminal action shall follow the giving of any evidence in such an enquiry except in cases where the witness may have committed perjury. All of the bills were read a third time and passed.

Private bills Nos. 32, 43, 45, 47, 51, 22, 34, 50, 54, 40, 57, 60, 61, 65, 33, 41, 42, 48 were considered in committee and passed through all their stages. A big batch of private bills were also advanced a stage.

Mr. Armstrong resumed the debate on the budget speech. Mr. Porter followed Mr. Armstrong in a two-hours' speech against Sir Richard Cartwright's amendment. Mr. McMullen spoke next in favor of the amendment and Dr. Ferguson of Welland moved the adjournment of the debate.

GOSSIP FROM THE CAPITAL.

Scott Act Repeal Elections—The Montreal Hides and Leather Inspectorship.

OTTAWA, March 8.—About fifteen elections for the repeal of the Scott Act will be held on April 4. The latest additions to the list are Lincoln, Ontario and Carleton.

The fight over the Montreal inspectorship of leather and hides was settled to-day by splitting the office. Ex-Ald. J. H. Meagey is appointed inspector of leather and Antoine Blanson inspector of raw hides. The office was formerly said to be worth from $3000 to $4000 per annum.

The capital stock of the Laurentide Pulp Company has been increased from $200,000 to $300,000.

Sir Donald A. Smith, M.P., Senator G. A. Drummond, Andrew Robertson, R. B. Angus, Hugh McLennan, Andrew Allan, Adam N. Kaile, E. W. Parker, Dame Lucy Ann Bossé (wife of G. A. Desbarats), George Edward Desbarats, W. A. Desbarats, Montreal; G. W. Wicksteed, Q.C., Sandford Fleming, Ottawa, and J. H. Brownlee, Brandon, have been incorporated as the Dominion Illustrated Publishing Company, with headquarters at Montreal, and a capital stock of $50,000 in $100 shares.

A notice will appear in The Gazette to-morrow that the Board of Examiners of the Dominion Land Surveyors have granted commissions as land surveyors to L. A. Dufresne, Montreal; J. F. Ritcie, Lethbridge; J. L. Bompas, Winnipeg; C. H. Pintrey, Ottawa. C. W. R. M. White of Toronto is awarded a commission as Dominion topographical surveyor. The following notice will also appear: "John Joseph Dalton of Toronto, a Dominion topographical surveyor, having been found guilty of gross negligence in the execution of the duties of his office, has been suspended for ten months, dating from Feb. 16, 1889."

Mr. Marshall to-day withdrew the bill to incorporate the London Mutual Fire Insurance Company.

Adam Brown's pigeon shooting bill comes up again on Wednesday.

The Week's Failures.

NEW YORK, March 8.—Failures occurring throughout the country during the last seven days number for the United States 241 and for Canada 40, or a total of 281 as compared with a total of 238 for last week and 270 the week previous to the last. For the corresponding week of last year the figures were 253, made up of 195 in the United States and 58 in the Dominion of Canada.

THE END OF AN ELOPEMENT

M'LACHLIN KILLS THE GIRL HE RAN AWAY WITH AND HIMSELF.

They Spend two days Together and Seem to Have Died by Agreement—A Note from the Girl Foreshadowing the Event.

PAW PAW, Ill., March 8.—The elopement which threw this community into excitement on last Monday has ended in a tragedy. It was regarded as an abduction rather than an elopement, owing to the tender age of the girl and the unenviable reputation of the man with whom she fled. On last Sunday night Cora Carnahan, the 16-year-old daughter of the landlord of the Dotsmoe House, disappeared, and it became noised abroad that she had eloped with a young fellow named McLachlin, who was notorious for his evil conduct among women. To-day the abductor and his victim are dead, the suspicion being that McLachlin first took the girl's life and then his own with the same weapon, a heavy revolver.

Just at dark on Sunday night the girl's mother saw her go out of the back door of the house and disappear in the darkness. The haste she made caused suspicion and an alarm was given, and several parties started in search of her, but owing to the darkness she made her escape.

The next morning the discovery was made by tracks in the mud that the girl and her companion had gone north out of the town. He had led her through a corn field for some distance, in which the mud and water was almost knee deep. After crossing the corn field, they turned to the east until they reached the railroad track, which they followed, going south to Earlville. The trip thus far made an eleven-mile walk over a slippery and muddy track, full of bridges and pits on a dark and foggy night. The only protection or the girl's feet were a pair of shoe shoes with high heels, and on this account the footprints as far as Earlville were easily traced. At the last end of the journey the tracks indicated that the girl was much fatigued. She had stumbled and staggered from side to side on the track.

The couple reached the farmhouse of Albert Phillips, six miles southeast of Earlville, on Tuesday night, and applied for shelter. The place is now occupied by Elmer Davis, a young married man. He is well acquainted with McLachlin, and having been to Earlville the same day the couple came to his place; it is the belief that he knew of the elopement. Davis asserts, however, that McLachlin said they were married. The couple stayed at the place on Tuesday night and occupied the same room. They remained in the house all day Wednesday. They retired early Wednesday evening, shortly after supper, saying they were very tired. They went to bed about 7 o'clock, and shortly after the report of a revolver was heard and Phillips started for the room. Before he reached it another report was heard, and upon his reaching the room McLachlin and the girl were both dead. They were in bed. The young man had evidently put the weapon back of the girl's ear and sent a bullet into her head. Not satisfied with one shot, he again placed the weapon to her temple and discharged it. He then shot himself in the crown of the head, the bullet coming out under the chin. The handsome girl had evidently died without a struggle. The expression on her face was calm and peaceful.

The tragic end of the couple is in accordance with this note the girl left in her trunk before leaving home:

"DEAR MAMMA: By the time you receive this letter I will be in my grave."

A short time previous to the elopement the parents discovered that Cora was deeply infatuated with McLachlin. They opposed all intercourse, but by the assistance of Gilbert Still a correspondence was secretly carried on and clandestine meetings held. Young Still is now under arrest.

TO CORRUPT CANADA.

Exiled Boodlers Said to be Trying to Buy Up Parliament.

NEW YORK, March 8.—The World to-day says: John Keenan, assisted by John C. Eno, is said to be engaged in the congenial task of collecting a boodle, estimated at $100,000, to defeat in the Dominion Parliament Prof. Weldon's bill for the surrender of fugitive criminals whose offences are not embraced in the existing Extradition Treaty. Failing to defeat the bill, the exiles would be content to make it non-retroactive. Here is a list of United States citizens who are deeply interested in the proposed legislation:

Thomas Axworthy, defaulting Treasurer of Cleveland, O.; short $450,000; in Toronto.

George M. Bartholomew, ex-President of the Charter Oak Life Insurance Company, Hartford, Conn., who absconded with about $2,000,000; in Quebec.

Robert De Lacy, New York beedle Alderman of 1884; in Montreal.

Charles Dempsey, New York beedle Alderman of 1884; in Montreal.

Henry Dickman of St. Louis, who carried off $60,000; in Windsor.

Amandus Ebert of Cincinnati, the swindled American merchants out of $130,000 recently; in Montreal.

John C. Eno, ex-banker of New York, who absorbed $4,000,000 from the Scottish National Bank, in Quebec.

John Keenan of New York, professional handler and distributor of boodle; in Montreal.

Franklin W. Krum of Schoharie, N.Y., bank wrecker; in Hamilton.

"Mother" Mandelbaum of New York, receiver of stolen goods, employer of thieves and burglars; shop-keeper in Hamilton.

William Moloney, ex-Reading Clerk of New York Common Council and professional handler of boodle; now in Amsterdam, Holland, but would prefer Montreal if assured of safety there.

Joseph A. Moore of Indianapolis, who embezzled $300,000 of Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance funds; in Windsor.

Robert Sayles, New York boodle Alderman of 1884, who forfeited his bail; in Montreal.

H. D. Scholl, defaulting cashier of Chicago and Northwestern Railroad for $14,000; in Toronto.

Harry G. Stickney, Boston defaulter for $17,000; in Toronto.

John E. Sullivan of Indianapolis, ex-County Clerk, whose stealings exceed $100,000; in Windsor.

Wealth in a Poorhouse.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, Ind., March 8.—George Cook, aged 70, an inmate of the poorhouse, was yesterday discovered to have $6000 hidden in a box under his bed, $4000 of it being gold. He is a queer character and claims to be a Russian exile.

Chicago's Common Crime.

CHICAGO, March 8.—At Lake to-day Jack Galle, colored, quarrelled and fought with his wife and cut her throat with a razor, the woman soon dying. The deed is attributed to jealousy. Galle has not been arrested.

The First of the Season.

WINNIPEG, March 8.—At the Liberal banquet at Manitou resolutions were passed endorsing the Government and the amended contract with the Northern Pacific and Manitoba road, and also accepting the explanations of Premier Greenway touching the charges against him by The Free Press.

The first immigrant party of the season arrived here to-day, 214 strong.

HOT SHOT FROM GOSPEL GUNS!

Raking the Serried Ranks of Social Sin.

The Evangelists Have a Fling at Social Abuses—Practical Advice for Young Men and Women—The Same Standard of Morals Should Govern Both Sexes.

It is about one week since Messrs. Crossley and Hunter first dropped the gospel net into the sea of sin in Peterborough, and the indications are that hundreds of engulfed sinners will be gathered into the ship of salvation as a result of the labors of these "fishers of men." Friday night's meeting, the last of the week, was probably the best of them all, and, as Mr. Hunter stated in his opening prayer, there appears to be a general enquiry after salvation amongst all the people that attend the meetings—and these are to be counted by the thousands. Every night there are scores at the mercy seat pleading for divine pardon. It is estimated that about 200 have been converted during the past week, at least fully that number have gone forward. The services for Sunday are announced elsewhere. Next week the meetings will be continued in the George street church, and the two weeks following in St. Paul's Church.

IT'S NO ENTERTAINMENT.

Rev. Mr. Hunter opened the services Friday night by giving the large congregation a pointer to the effect that these meetings were not to be considered as entertainments—if people came there to be entertained simply they made a huge mistake. He said he and Mr. Crossley were there to work for God, and the people should make up their minds to do as much good and get as much good as they possibly could.

SOME BAD HABITS.

His address was upon the subject of the prodigal son, whose riotous career and subsequent reformation are so simply but powerfully sketched in the 15th chapter of Luke. To the young man he would say, avoid bad company, bad books and bad habits. "Show me your company and I'll tell you what you are," was an old "saw" that was true as steel. As to books he recommended mothers to see that their boys got hold of no trashy material. He was particularly severe upon this "yaller kivered literatoor" which he said was ruining the youth of the country. And if he were giving advice to ladies in this respect, he would advise mothers never to give their daughter's hand in marriage to the young man who would strut down street with one of these cheap but soul-destroying books under his arm, instead of a Bible, as proudly as if he was leading a poodle dog at the end of a string. In the category of bad habits the young man should avoid, Mr. Hunter included

SMOKING AND DRINKING.

He read a card which, he said, he had received that day, asking if a man could be a Christian and smoke. To the enquiry he would reply, in the words of Moody: "Yes, a man may be a Christian and smoke, but he'll be a very nasty one." Mr. Hunter related his own experiences with his first cigar, which were of such a depressing nature that he never tried to smoke another. He was often shocked, he said, to see young boys strutting down street puffing away at a cigar as if they were doing something manly, while the combination appeared to sensible people as "a little fire at one end and a little fool at the other." Mr. Hunter gave a unique illustration of the tenacity of a bad habit. It was a hard thing to get rid of. Take off the first letter and there is "a bit" left; take off the second letter and still it is not gone, the "bit" remaining; yet further take off the third letter and "it," the thing itself, is there. It seems impossible to shake off a habit when once it fastens upon you.

THE ROOT OF ALL EVIL.

Mr. Hunter pointed out another bad thing young men should avoid, but for which parents were to blame. Some fathers hoarded up the savings of a lifetime that they might give their sons a fortune, but it too often proved a curse rather than a blessing. It was a wrong principle altogether, for the reason that if a boy is worth anything in himself he will not need the money, while if there is nothing in him the money is liable to do him incalculable injury.

Speaking of the miserly habits of some men, Mr. Hunter said: "I would not like to see some of you get into heaven with your old habits clinging to you. Why, the first thing you would be digging up the pavements looking for gold, and they would have to turn you out."

A WELCOME HOME.

Then this prodigal wasted his life in riotous living—just what 19 out of 20 of the young men to-day would do. He wasted his all, and there was no one to take him in. The tavern keepers with whom he had spent most of his patrimony would have nothing to do with him; oh no, they had his money and when he had no more they kicked him out. But this young man finally "came to himself"—just what every one must do before they can come to Jesus. He returned to his father and was received with open arms. So the Father above was waiting to receive the prodigal of to-day who will repent of his sins and accept the joy and peace of heart which He alone will give.

THE HOPE OF THE COUNTRY.

The young men caught it when Mr. Crossley rose. He pitched into them like a locomotive on a down grade—and the young women came in for a share of his scathing rebuke. In order to include both sexes of his hearers, he chose two texts:—Zech., ii, 4, "Run, speak to this young man"; and Acts xvi, 13:—"And we sat down and spake unto the women which resorted there."

Mr. Crossley said he would speak to the young men and women as one of themselves; he had no old fogy ideas of Christianity or how young people should act. He urged them to listen to and heed his remarks. He first pointed out that the young men and women were the hope of our country and our church, and he hoped that they would realize the responsibility that rested upon them and accept the glorious privilege they had of being able to speak to their fellow-beings about the welfare of their souls.

"Why," said Mr. Hunter, "I would rather be a young man than the angel Gabriel himself, for I would have greater privileges for leading others to Christ than the angels in Heaven."

Young people should act upon the command of the text, and see to it that there be not a young man or woman in Peterborough who shall not have been spoken to personally about their souls by some one of the young Christian workers. He exhorted young people to entertain a high ideal of life, such as that set down in Thessalonians, v, 22:—"Abstain from all appearance of evil."

WHERE THE TROUBLE IS.

Mr. Crossley hit the nail fairly on the head when he insisted upon having a uniform standard of morals to govern both sexes. And he drove it home when he pointed out that the present state of affairs, by which young men may be over so loose in their habits and yet be accepted in good society, was due to the women themselves, the ones who suffered most in consequence of this great inconsistency. A young man is permitted to drink, smoke and loaf around corners, telling stories not always the cleanest; but for a young lady to indulge in these vices would be scandalous and she would become an outcast. Why should not the principle be the same in both cases; if it was disgraceful for a woman to be lame it was just as much so for a man. What was the cause of this? The demand regulates the supply, and there was a greater demand for virtuous women than for virtuous men. "Why," said he, "there is not more than one man in twenty who in point of virtue, sobriety, morality and Christian and moral excellencies, is at all comparable to every 19 out of 20 among the ladies." For this state of things he blamed the ladies themselves more than the men. They did not demand of the men what the latter demanded of them, and what they so rigidly demanded of themselves. The dissolute young man was pampered by society, but the fallen woman, who is no more guilty than the man she associates with, would not be allowed to do even kitchen work. "And if she aspires to virtue or purity," Mr. Crossley said "if she is struggling up through the brakers, and has her hand on the edge of the rock, you will put your foot on her and crush her down. She is a woman. Young woman, help your fallen sister and don't make it harder for her to rise. Help her to something better and purer." The young men he urged to be honorable and not demand of women that virtue which they did not themselves possess. He did not mean to say that there were no good young men; no, thank God, there were many bright Christians in the ranks of the young men. But their proportion was lamentably small.

TWO SIDES TO IT.

Mr. Crossley quoted Ecclesiastes xi., 9:—"Rejoice, O young man in thy youth, and let thy heart cheer thee in the days of thy youth, and walk in the ways of thine heart and in the sight of thine eyes—"

People say to-day, oh, boys must be boys but never girls must be girls; and that young men must sow their wild oats. That was just what the above passage advised—go it while you are young and have your fling. But read the verse through—

"—But know thou, that for all these things God will bring thee unto judgment."

It puts it ironically in the first part; but the latter clause clearly points out what will be the result of the young man's youthful follies. Mr. Crossley gave a word of advice to ambitious young men, urging them to lay their plans not for this world only but to think of the world beyond, after this life is closed forever.

For the special benefit of young ladies he quoted the passage, "She that liveth in pleasure is dead while she liveth." This exactly described the condition of many young women to-day, living only for the enjoyment of the world, and being practically dead in sin all the while. They should receive the more abundant life from the Lord Jesus Christ. To both young men and women he said, view your life from the tomb, and if it is found vain and worthless from that standpoint, see it that way now.

FOR THE UNSAVED

Mr. Crossley quoted a couple of passages, Proverbs, iii, 17: "Her ways are ways of pleasantness, and all her paths are peace," as over-riding the idea that piety is gloomy and dull. There was a certain amount of fun in the world, of course, but in God's service there was the concentrated essence of joy. The Christian enjoyed his life with a deep pleasure that was soul-satisfying, though he was not always talking about having "a jolly good time." Proverbs, xxiii, 26: "My son, give me thine heart, and let thine eyes observe my ways," was a direct appeal from the father. It would be considered disgraceful in these days if a son refused to listen to his father or to love him, and it was unfortunately more so—it was inhuman and unnatural—for sinners not to heed the call of their Heavenly Father, He who had done so much for, and bore so much from them. In conclusion, he urged the unconverted not to delay till too late—now was the accepted time, and they might never again have the opportunity of throwing themselves on Jesus' mercy.

Mr. Hunter clenched the nail which Mr. Crossley had driven home, by a rousing appeal to the young people, that had a noticeable effect. About 150 young persons under 25 years of age stood up as being engaged in the Master's service, and in response to an invitation a number of others joined them as seekers of pardon.

NOTES.

Mr. Hunter announced Friday night that they intended holding a meeting for men only at some early date, probably in the opera house if it could be secured.

Among the special requests for prayer laid before the congregation, were a number from outside places. Mr. Clarkson, of Port Hope, asked the prayers of Peterborough Christians for the success of the revival services now being held in that town. Other requests for individual prayer were also read from Cobourg and Port Hope.

Mr. Crossley's solo, "My Mother's Prayer," sung at the meeting last night was one of the most affecting of all his songs. The air was a beautiful one and it was sung with indescribable pathos and tenderness.

Rev. Messrs. Shorey and Parker offered up earnest prayers at the meeting.

Mr Crossley wired into the choir in a mild way last night. He was delighted with the large chorus—never more so with any other—but he didn't like to see so many of the singers in the audience. He would rather have them take their places on the platform.

bring to the surface every latent pain. A change of even a few degrees marks the difference between comfort and pain to many persons. Happily disease now holds less sway. Science is continually bringing forward new remedies which successfully combat disease. Polson's Nerviline—nerve pain cure—has proved the most successful pain relieving remedy known. Its application is wide, for it is equally efficient in all forms of pain, whether internal or external. Ten and 25 cents a bottle, at druggists. 6dw10

Partly Gave Up.

"In the year 1885 I coughed for six months, and having unsuccessfully tried many remedies, I partly gave up, thinking I had consumption. At last I tried Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam, less than one bottle of which cured me, leaving me as well as ever I was." Henry W. Carse, Wabash, Ont. 2w10d.

A High Valuation.

"If there was only one bottle of Hagyard's Yellow Oil in Manitoba, I would give one hundred dollars for it," writes Philip H. Brant, of Montcith, Manitoba, after having used it for a severe wound and for frozen fingers, with, as he says, "astonishing good results." 2w10d

James E. Richardson, Custom House, New Orleans, on oath says:—"In 1879 Scrofulous Ulcers broke out on my body until I was a mass of corruption. Everything known to the medical faculty was tried in vain. I became a mere wreck. At times I could not lift my hands to my head, could not turn in bed; was in constant pain, and looked upon life as a curse. No relief or cure in ten years. In 1888 I heard of the CUTICURA REMEDIES, used them and was perfectly cured."

CHAPTER III.

It was a wet, unpleasant night, and J. Archibald Bockaby, as he slowly descended the wide, marble steps of his club, felt the influence of the weather. There had been rather a heated discussion at this annual meeting, and Mr. Bockaby had not been entirely silent.

He would go home and forget these petty annoyances in the company of his charming Malvina. He would ask her to sing for him, play for him, talk to him. Since their discussion, a week ago, Mr. and Mrs. Bockaby's relations had been rather "strained." She had clearly shown resentment at what she was pleased to consider her husband's ungenerous treatment, while he—well, he simply had not taken the trouble to set things right. He hated explanations—as all men do—and he knew that eventually peace would reign again in his domestic midst.

He suddenly remembered, with a mental and vigorous "By Jove!" that this was the night of Mrs. De Snigsby's bal poudre. Malvina would not be at home, of course. It was 10 o'clock, and she had doubtless departed, in a glory of black and gold, to grace the salons of Mrs. De Snigsby. What an insufferable nuisance! Bockaby felt that a quiet, home spent evening with Malvina would do him a world of good.

Then it occurred to him that he would go to Mrs. De Snigsby's ball and surprise Malvina. How delighted she would be! He would see her in her old black and gold dress—poor little thing, how she had rebelled against wearing it—and he would tell her, as enthusiastically as he could, that she looked better than any one present; that he knew she would do so; that her dress was a great success; that he was glad—yes, really glad—he had been cruel enough to refuse her another, and so on. Then he would whirl Malvina away in a waltz, the unpleasantness of the past week would be entirely forgotten, and all would end happily.

Mr. Bockaby took a cab home, freshened up his evening dress a little and started for Mrs. De Snigsby's. It was nearly 11 o'clock when he arrived there—a fact at which he was supremely pleased. His soul delighted not in ball poudres, and the sooner Malvina was ready to go home the better he would like it.

Mrs. De Snigsby received J. Archibald Bockaby with subdued grace. Her dress and her face were flamingly scarlet, and she felt that she must be subdued somewhere.

"So charmed to see you, Mr. Bockaby," she said sweetly. "Your little lady is here, enjoying herself, I think. Ah, Mr. Bockaby, you young married men are sad creatures. You won't escort your wives to our little entertainments. You present them with money, tell them to go and buy themselves something pretty, and then you think your duty is done. You can go to your clubs in peace."

"I assure you that you are in error, dear Mrs. De Snigsby," said Archibald, feeling that he spoke the truth for once in his life at any rate.

"Well—well, there are exceptions," quoth the hostess, with consideration. "They all seem to be enjoying themselves," she went on, putting up her eye glasses, which, it was generally known, were made of window glass, and would therefore suit anybody who was neither long sighted nor short sighted, but was anxious to appear one or the other, because it looked nice. "At midnight they will remove their dominos. Powdered hair and dominos—that was my notion, Mr. Bockaby. Do you not think it a delightful one?"

But Archibald's eyes and Archibald's thoughts were far away from Mrs. De Snigsby and and all her fat suaveness was lost upon him. His glance was roving among the lady's guests. There they all were—with white hair, black satin covered faces and elaborate evening costumes. They all seemed happy in the present, and wotted not of the morrow when the flour and egg would no longer be a pleasing addition to their head dress, and the cleansing process would make itself painfully felt.

"Ah!" the exclamation came from the lips of Mr. Bockaby. There, sure enough, was Malvina, with the arm of some black coated whipper snapper around her waist, whirling round the room as though she had never done anything else in her life. How lovely she was, even though her face could not be seen! The black and gold dress had never looked more regal; its soft gleaming folds fell artistically from her waist; while from the vice, low cut bodice gleamed a throat of wonderful whiteness. Bockaby groaned. His wife evidently had partners by the dozen. Six dances had taken place since his arrival, it was close upon midnight, and he had found no opportunity of speaking to her. Would she never be disengaged?

At last with utter satisfaction he saw her seat herself alone. Her partner had left her, probably ice bound. Now was his time. Bockaby moved quickly in the direction of the black and gold dress, and reached it without accident. There was a chair beside Malvina. It was partly screened by ferns and palms. Bockaby dropped into it.

"Dearest," he said softly, reaching for the tiny gloved hand, which was not refused him, "will you ever forgive me?"

The powdered head gave a coquettish little nod. The gloved hand remained in his—pressed his, slightly. Ah, after all, there was no one in the world like his wife, he thought.

"How foolish we were to misunderstand one another," he went on, stupidly glad, "and about such a trifle, too."

"Hush," whispered his companion, turning from him and removing her hand. A little lady in apple green silk was close beside him. She had evidently seen the manifestations of mutual approval. Bockaby laughed to himself as he thought how absurd it was for a married couple to fear being seen in affectionate communication. Yes, a bal poudre with dominos was certainly a delightful affair. The complications [illegible] never would economize. Well, he would not quarrel about the fan. He would never quarrel any more, in fact——

Twelve o'clock! A big clock, with a solemn cathedral chime, which had been placed in a conspicuous position by Mrs. De Snigsby in order to warn her guests of the important hour, struck slowly. In a moment there was a rustling, silky sound, and every lady held her masque suspended by its lace string in her hand. Bockaby glanced with a smile at his black and gold clad neighbor. The smile faded from his lips, his eyes opened in utter bewilderment. He recoiled involuntarily.

"Letitia Ruggsmith," he gasped.

Mrs. Ruggsmith indulged in a sugared smile. "And whom did you think I was?" she asked, jauntily.

"He mistook you for me, I presume," interposed the little lady in apple green silk, coming hastily forward.

"Malvina!" exclaimed the luckless Archibald, so supremely surprised that he realized nothing.

Now, if Mrs. Bockaby had been equal to the occasion, she would have marched her husband away from Mrs. Ruggsmith before further harm was done. But her femininity got the better of her diplomacy. She had heard Archibald's honeyed language, and Letitia's outrageous acceptance of it, and she could not leave the hated Mrs. Ruggsmith so soon. She made a great mistake.

"Mrs. Ruggsmith," stammered Archibald, with a nervously imbecile smile, "you—you—must r-really excuse me. I—I thought you were my wife. I c-could have sworn that w-was her dress."

It was an awful moment! Letitia Ruggsmith, practiced as she was in the art of deception, could not avoid the telltale blush that came to her cheek. Not a word could she utter, she was tongue tied. Malvina Bockaby, of all women in the world, now knew that she bought "superfluous" clothes.

Mrs. Bockaby's anguish was no less bitter than that of her rival. It expressed itself by a marble pallor which robbed even her lips of every vestige of color. Letitia Ruggsmith, of all women in the world, now knew that she sold "superfluous" clothes.

Yes, man like, J. Archibald Bockaby had "put his foot in it."

Mrs. Bockaby was the first to recover herself. "You are a foolish boy, Archibald," she said, with a carelessness she did not feel. "Mrs. Ruggsmith's dress is not in the least like mine, but to men, I suppose, ladies costumes are all alike."

Then she led Archibald away before he had time to make any other ridiculous remark, and requested that he call her carriage. Five minutes later they were on their way home.

Malvina could bear nearly all the ills that fall to the lot of women, and bear them with perfect equanimity, too. But the events of to-night were too much for her, and soon she was sobbing in the arms of her husband, who was himself again.

"Never mind, dear," he said soothingly. "What does it all matter? You sold your dress; Mrs. Ruggsmith bought it. I said pleasant things to her because I thought she was my little Malvina, and I wanted to make my peace with her."

"Y-yes, I know th-that," sobbed Malvina, convulsively. "I—I—d-don't m-mind that. B-but—oh, Archibald!—she l-looked so l-lovely in that b-black and g-gold dress. It w-was the finest in—in the room. And I s-sold it. Oh! Oh! Oh! I m-must have been m-mad. You w-were the b-best j-judge, after all."

GERMAN

HAIR MAGIC.

The equal of this great preparation is yet to be found. It is an unfailing illesterer for grey hair—it stops all falling out of the hair—it removes all dandruff and keeps the scalp clean. On bald heads (if there are but the faintest traces of roots) the Magic will produce a fine growth. Will you try it? Or will you let your hair go, and become prematurely old? What do you say? All druggists everywhere have it for sale. Ask for it. Do not let the druggist tell you he has something just as good—many have dead stock of other hair tonics on hand and try to shove them off in this way.

See that each bottle bears seal as signature:

MacAllister.

A Momentous Question Bottled.

The Otonabee Canoe Club has decided the momentous Jesuit question, and Sir John's course has been justified. The debate last night upon the question: "Resolved, that the Dominion Government should be censured for not vetoing the Jesuit Bill." Mr. A. E. DIXON was chairman, Messrs. R. B. Hall and L. A. Pearson leaders for the affirmative, and W. H. Hill and S. R. Armstrong for the negative. The latter won the debate.

A First Class Entertainment.

The Whig says:—"There was a large audience at the opera house last evening to see the performance of "Michael Strogoff," by Charles L. Andrew's special company. The history of the play is well known here, having been presented before. The piece was acted out well, and the entertainment gave entire satisfaction. The members of the troupe are actors in the true sense of the term, and gave creditable accounts of themselves during the evening. This company appears at Bradburn's opera house Tuesday evening. 1d

The Emigration Tide.

Already the exodus to the Northwest that occurs every spring amongst the farming community has set in, and large numbers are preparing to "leave the country." At the C.P.R. office tickets have been sold to 25 or 30 in the past ten days, and the tide is increasing as spring approaches. Only yesterday arrangements were made for the removal of two families to Birtle, Man., one a family of ten and the other of seven. The emigration is almost entirely confined to the Northwest or Manitoba. The C.P.R. will do a big business carrying settlers and their effects out to the new country.

"Immense Enthusiasm."

The following from the Kingston News of March 8th, shows how acceptably the play of "Michael Strogoff" is put on the stage:—"The attendance at the opera house last evening was large, and the performance more than reached expectations. The company is a good one, and time and again was greeted with applause. Miss Gussie Curtis, in the representation of Nadea Fedor, created sympathy for herself. Marfa Strogroff, mother of Michael, by her acting during the trial of her son before Trafar, Emir of Bokhara, when the order was given to burn his eyes, created immense enthusiasm Nangane, a gipsy woman, Miss Ella Woman and company, with Ivan Ogaraff, a disgraced Russian officer, and the two newspaper correspondents, were fully equal to their parts. The two latter were the comedians of the company, and kept the audience highly amused. William Fredericks, in the leading character of Michael Strogoff, was the centre of the plot. His commanding figure, handsome face and heavy voice, and his fidelity to his country, brought out rapturous applause Despite the punishments, trials and temptations he met with, he was true to his oft repeated cry: "For God, for the Czar, and for my country." The jugglery performance by Nelson was probably the finest ever given in the opera house. Bradburn's Opera House, Tuesday evening, March 12th. 1d

The Army's Trouble.

Major Spooner, the commander of the Montreal branch of the Salvation Army, comes forward with an indignant denial that the Army's property was all deeded to General Booth. The property, he contended, was held in trust for the sole benefit of the Army in general, and was enrolled in Chancery in Toronto. He thought that the fact of the Army having acquired half a million of dollars' worth of property in Canada was sufficient proof in itself that the Booth family did not get it, for people would not give money to such an extent if they first were not quite sure that there was no fraud connected with the organization. Speaking to the charge made that all the good positions in Canada were held by English officers, he said there were twenty-two divisional officers in Canada, and out of these eleven only were Englishmen. In the Dominion of Canada there were 880 field officers, and only 35 of them English. It was not true that there was no place provided for the aged and the sick, for they had a home where fifty could be accommodated, and where the best of doctors and nurses were provided.

"Totem of Health" Remedies.

The world's progress in other respects includes improvements in the art of healing. The presence in town of Prof. S. R. Olmsted, of London, Ont., represents a new healing power, the "Totem of Health" remedies. The Professor has for some days been in town, and will remain for three weeks longer introducing these remedies, his office for the time, being in Mr. G. A. Schofield's drug store. The Totem of Health remedies are no dubious concoction of herbs and barks, but the waters of Medical Lake, Washington Territory, U.S., concentrated or sublimed by evaporation till a yellowish powder remains. The waters of this lake have wonderful healing properties, which are largely increased by the foregoing process, and a little water added to either converts them into water like the original. These remedies are guaranteed a cure for the following diseases and others of an allied character:—Rheumatism, paralysis, catarrh and all diseases of the blood and skin, sour stomach, blood poisoning, salt rheum, eczema, and kidney, urinary and venereal diseases. The confidence of the proprietors of this medicine in its healing powers is so great that the price of the remedies will be refunded if the medicine, on fair trial, fails to give satisfaction. These waters are evaporated by a large company in London, and they are making arrangements for establishing a business place in each principal town. These remedies are for the present in charge of Prof. Olmsted, and when he leaves town they will be found in every drug store. The afflicted will learn of this with great interest, for the confidence of the proprietors, as shown by their guarantee, gives strength to the claim of their curative powers. A trial will involve no expense, for the price of the remedies will be refunded if their effects are not as described.

News Nuggets.

—The Chronicle records the death of Mr. Wm. Stabler, sr., of Lakefield, at the age of 60 years.

—The True Blues held their weekly dance in their Simcoe street hall last night. There was a goodly number in attendance.

—Dr. Bell and Jas. Davis are, it is understood, to act as deputy-returning officers for Lakefield in the Scott Act repeal voting.

—Messrs. White and English, are holding evangelistic services in the Baptist church Orillia.

—A company with a capital of $10,000 has applied for incorporation for the maintenance of the Orillia hospital and Convalescent home. Mr. Maxwell Hall is one of the promoters.

—Bobcaygeon is after a dry dock, and Mr. Hudspeth, M.P., is after the government for an appropriation. Bobcaygeon will probably get its dry dock on the completion of the Trent Valley Canal.

—The marriage of Miss Minnie Carveth, daughter of Mr. J. C. Carveth, to Mr. W. H. Monroe, was celebrated on Friday evening last, at Lakefield. The event took place at the residence of the bride's parents, and Rev. Mr. Johnson performed the ceremony. The bride was assisted by her sister and Miss Taylor of Peterborough. The groom was supported by Messrs. G. W. Wyatt and W. Taylor, both of Peterborough. The presents were numerous and costly.

On the resumption of the convention, Mr. Burton Earle addressed himself to the subject of "The English Language and Literature." Literature was the most important subject of the school course, the whole man and woman. As a mental development it was not inferior to mathematics, as a developing element and in an esthetic sense it was superior. And literature was the worst taught subject in the schools. In teaching literature a distinction should be made between philology and grammar and literature. The study of philology was important in the study of pre-Miltonic literature. It was pointed out that the study of the Greek and Latin classics was not necessary to the study of philology. All that could be claimed for Latin could be claimed successfully for English. The highest knowledge of a language, the greatest purity of style, can be best acquired by a study of the language itself. It was claimed for the English language that it had produced more grand literature than that of any other land. Since the Anglo Saxon period there had been a steady outflow of lofty thought and unapproachable literature. The teaching of literature proper should begin with the first book. There was a tendency to underestimate the capacity of children. In a general way there could not be too much preparation, but for a specific lesson the speaker preferred that the teacher and pupil should work out a lesson together. General principles should be taught rather than a specific lesson, and examinations should be taken from other subjects than those in the prescribed course. The teacher should not try to explain everything, because there was much in poetry that could not be explained—it could only be felt. Nor should a teacher be ashamed to confess his ignorance of a passage, for pupils were sharper than might be thought and they would be sure to find him out and he would lose their confidence. Mr. Earle treated his subject in a very lucid and interesting manner, and at its conclusion was greeted with warm applause.

ELECTION OF OFFICERS.

The report of the nominating committee was adopted, appointing the following officers:—

PRESIDENT—Mr. W. S. Ellis, M.A.

VICE-PRESIDENT—Miss L. Scott.

SECRETARY (re-elected)—Mr. J. J. Rooney.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE—Miss Camming, Miss Jennie Smith, Mr. J. Stirling, Mr. Campbell and Mr. J. D. Mellmoyle.

The report of the committee on Promotion Examinations was presented as follows:—

1. A programme of studies absolutely necessary; such programme to be forthcoming at once.

2. We recommend a committee to prepare the examinations.

3. We object strongly to the changing of teachers during said examination.

4. Allow only those pupils to write whom we prepare for such examination.

5. Each teacher to examine papers in his or her school; then, within ten days, to forward said examination papers to the inspector, enclosing, on a paper expressly for the purpose, a list with the names of pupils who wrote, the number of marks obtained by them, and marked either "passed" or "rejected," also explanatory notes concerning any special case.

6. Have it understood the number of marks to be deducted for mis-spelled words; also the number of marks to be allowed for neatness. This subject was thoroughly discussed by the committee and, therefore, we conscientiously feel that our ideas expressed in the foregoing will meet with your approval and will bring about a uniformity in our schools which cannot be accomplished in any other way.

The report was considered clause by clause. The second clause was amended, empowering Mr. Brown, the Inspector, to prepare the papers, with the assistance of a committee to be selected by himself.

The third clause was adopted with the addition of a trustee being present. The fourth clause was adopted as in the report. The fifth clause was amended by providing for sub-committees for the examination of different subjects.

The sixth clause was referred to the Committee on Examinations.

The report of the auditors stated that the accounts were perfectly satisfactory and showed a balance on hand of $59.81.

After votes of thanks to Mr. Tilley and the retiring officers, and the singing of "God Save the Queen," the convention adjourned.

DRAW SHOTS.

Last night a return match was played between two rinks of the Torontos, (one rink having to return home) and two Peterborough rinks skipped by Messrs. Ferguson and Rutherford. The Peterboroughs won easily by 21 shots, skip Rutherford on a score of 23 to 5, and skip Ferguson by 16 to 13.

To-day the two Toronto rinks are playing in Lakefield.

A rink of Millbrook curlers is expected up this evening to play a return match with the Juniors.

In the Winnipeg bonspiel a Winnipeg rink skipped by Hgrstone, the same gentlemen who visited Peterborough with a rink not long ago, won the trophy.

The Mail in its report of yesterday's curling match says:—The ice was in capital condition and the game spirited throughout. The Toronto men are loud in their praises in regard to the treatment they received at the hands of the Peterborough representatives, who not only met them at the station and escorted them to the train, but gave a luncheon in their honour and otherwise made their brief stay in Peterborough as pleasant as possible.

MATRIMONIAL.—On Wednesday evening of last week the residence of Mr. H. Strickland, Mill street, was the scene of an interesting ceremony conducted by the Rev. J. W. Mitchell, M.A., by which he united in the bonds of matrimony, Mr. A. Johnston, of Bailliebord, and Miss Maggie Pelleck, Ross Mount. The groom was assisted by Mr. T. Jordon, of Bailliebord, the bride by Miss Annie Robinson, of Port Hope. The presents were numerous and valuable. We unite in wishing the happy couple a future of unalloyed happiness and prosperity.—Guide.

YOUNG LOVE TURNS ON THE GAS.

A Bride of Sixteen Discovered That She Couldn't Live Without Money.

NEW YORK, March 9.—Hattie Chrostowska, a married woman, 16 years old, attempted suicide yesterday morning by turning on the gas in the third story front hall bedroom which she had occupied for one night in Lillian Lescourt's boarding house at 217 East Fourteenth-street. She revived in Bellevue Hospital and will be arraigned at the Yorkville Police Court this morning.

In the young woman's room was found a letter addressed to "My dearest husband." The letter begged him to forgive her for what she was about to do. There was, however no help for it, she said, as she had found it "impossible to get the money" from her mother. The letter concluded by chiding the husband gently for his suspicions that she had been untrue to him. She assured him that she had been always and wholly his.

Mrs. Chrostowska gave her husband's name as Mecsysteau Chrostowska, and said he lived at 9 Fayette-street, Brooklyn, E.D. He is said to be a reporter. Hattie eloped with him from her mother's house, 35 East Third-street. The young couple couldn't support themselves and the wife returned to her parents. Her father warned her that if she ever saw her husband again he would turn her out of doors.

The girl says that as she was a minor, her parents sought to get her marriage annulled, intending to marry her to a wealthy Pole, whose name is equivalent for Alfred Patterson. So she ran away again, but her husband would not take care of her and she had no more money.

CLEVELAND'S SUPERIOR BAKING POWDER

THE PUREST AND BEST

Is made only of strictly pure grape cream of tartar, strictly pure bicarbonate of soda, and a small portion of flour as a preservative, nothing else whatever, and is warranted entirely free from alum, ammonia, phosphates, lime, and all the adulterants frequently found in baking powders. The character of materials used, their purity, and the nicety of their combination, render Cleveland's superior baking powder the most healthful and most economical in use, and it always affords wholesome, nutritious, and delicious food.

It is recommended for purity, healthfulness and efficiency by Government and State chemists, chemists of Boards of Health, and professors in institutions of learning throughout the country.

Sold only in Cans, full weight.

Had Strong Jaws.

How the Galloping Effect is Produced in "Held by the Enemy."

W. C. Boyd, Business Manager of "Held by the Enemy," rather delights in telling a story on the profession. Chatting recently to a newspaper man he said:—

"The peculiar effect in 'Held by the Enemy,' by which the sound of galloping horses is produced, creates a great deal of speculation, and the curiosity people exhibit in regard to it is often amusing. One night last week, just after the close of the performance at Palmer's Theatre a couple of 'rubens' came round to the stage door and asked for Mr. Gillette. They were told to wait and in a few minutes Gillette came on. Tee tallest of the two, a heavy set countryman with blonde whiskers, acted as spokesman.

"'Wal, sir,' he said, 'Jeames here an' me 'low'd as how we'd get yeare to settle a bet for us. Jeames 'lows as how that gallopin' is did by the orchestry, but I 'low as how they is made by real hosses. Who's right, mister?'

"Gillette looked solemn for a moment. Finally, he said, without the trace of a smile:—'You're wrong, gentlemen; you're both wrong. The entire effect is produced by a gentleman with iron jaws.'

"'Go way, neow,' said the tall ruben, 'yeow don't mean it! How does he do it?'

"'Just by snapping his teeth,' answered Gillette, soberly.

"'Wal, got durn me, but he must have powerful strong jaws.'

"'So he has,' said Gillete, 'he used to be a lightning rod agent.'"

This play will be on the boards at the opera house Monday evening next. 1d

INTERIOR DECORATION

A Few Practical Illustrations from the Room Paper Department of the Peterborough Bookstore

OUR New Designs have all been selected with direct regard to their harmonious combination. DADO, WALL SPACE, FRIEZE, BORDERS and CEILINGS have been carefully chosen with regard to their relation to each other, and therefore by the use of our different Combinations Artistic and Harmonious results are obtained. Hitherto the purchaser has been forced to search through the stock of other dealers in order to find the patterns of Wall Paper, Frieze and Dado that would combine even fairly well, and it has required great skill, judgment and patience to accomplish this satisfactory. However, by the use of our Paperhangings it is possible for anyone to have rooms decorated with perfect harmony, a great improvement over the old system, under which a successful interior was possible only through a skillful decorator, or by reason of a happy accident in the selection of the necessary papers. To our customers at a distance we will be pleased to forward samples and estimates of cost.

THE VESTIBULE.

The first place of your house is the Vestibule, and decorated with our new Saracenic Patterns, the prevailing effect of which is a pale sea green and a shimmering white in Arabic Design above the low Mosaic dado of blue green, traced with white and accented with cream color and chocolate on a background of sea-green Mosaic. Surmounting this is the wide frieze of intricate interlacing tracery, singularly brilliant and effective. The ceiling is covered with closely worked arabesque in the same colors but in a different pattern. It is impossible to convey any idea of the flashing brilliance of this effect. The architectural treatment of the vestibule is very simple. Since it is only a room for transient occupancy, it follows that the ornament must be bold and striking, not delicate and intricate, for there is no time for the eye to grasp these qualities.

THE STAIRWAY.

In the decoration of a stairway three things are almost indispensable. Solidity and massiveness of form and construction, breadth and effectiveness of ornament and design and the utmost richness of color. This last consideration seems almost the most imperative of all; perhaps, because hitherto the stairways have been so bold and barren. Fortunately the period of caverous tunnels and step-ladders is gone forever, and people realize now that not only does the stairway offer the best chances for effective treatment, but that it really demands almost the richest decoration in the house. It almost always happens that a hall will be more or less dark, and the deep Indian yellow and venetian red used in our designs do the most that is possible towards lightening the room and improving its appearance. A fountain of dark green verde antique, dull green rugs and blue-green draperies give the required contrast and complete the color effect.

THE DRAWING ROOM.

At the time of the esthetic revival some years ago, the revolution was universal and complete, and, as is always the case during time of revolution, much that was inherently good suffered disgrace with that which merited its destruction. When the world awoke to a clear sense of its artistic depravity, it resolved to turn over a new leaf, leaving nothing to remind it of its former shame. So in an instant all former modes of decoration vanished, and in their place came the rigid forms, the sombre hues, and the impotent rectitude of the new regime. The actual truth and right existing in the new covenant was very great, and to it we owe our present high artistic position. Among other errors it was supposed that there was something iniquitous in white and gold; but white and gold was and still is the very noblest and most beautiful combination of color that can be made, and almost the only one which is perfectly in harmony with the character of a drawing room. The effect of this superb paper is charming—the rich design of creamy white being relieved on a ground of coppery gold. The large, broad masses of the design and the strong flowing lines combine to produce an effect that is beyond improvement.

A MORNING ROOM.

A Smoking Room, "A Den" could be applied with equal propriety. We have a design, slightly Japanese, but not slavishly so, for nothing can be more inartistic than the dull copyism which has lately been in vogue, whereby a nineteenth century room has been transformed into some exotic apartment, distant, perhaps, three thousand miles and fifteen hundred years.

Ingrains, the general color of which is warm, with a light chocolate brown, broken by small touches of many harmonious colors. The High Dado is in rather dark chocolate, covered with carelessly arranged circles of a lighter shade, and bearing different designs. The wall is very simple. Metallic flowers conventionalized on a light terra cotta ground. The ceiling is in strong contrast, a lustrous blue green, set off here and there by crimson leaves. The design is exceedingly rich and elaborate.

THE DINING ROOM.

The "Velours" and Micas with which the Dining Room is decorated are particularly rich and elaborate, giving to this most important room the dignity and repose its character demands. The designs are in varying shades of brown and gold, with coppery and irridiscent gleams. The chief section of the wall is the very broad frieze. The ground is light, warm brown, with wavering parallel lines. The whole effect is most ingenious and artistic in design, and shows to excellent advantage the rich effect obtained by our combinations of varying tones of gold and plain back-ground of simple color.

THE BED CHAMBER.

The delicacy and softness of color, and tone which the character of this room requires are qualities specially noticeable in the combination of our designs. Nothing rigid or formal is admissable in a chamber, neither are brilliant colors or marked designs to be desired. Everything should be mellow, informal, perhaps luxurious, certainly not florid or gorgeous; light soft colors in quiet combinations. Hangings with large indistinct figures, of furniture with delicate curves, soft fur rugs, and plenty of cushions. These are the things most to be sought for. A chamber should be restful in every way. The velours which cover the walls are admirably suited to their purpose. The general effect is of a luminous silvery hue. The combinations of colors is most satisfactory, rich but subdued, elaborate yet broad in effect. It would be hard to find an arrangement of papers more surely successful, than the New Designs just opened out at the Peterborough Bookstore.

TURNBULL'S

The Flood of the Season's French and English Printed Calicoes is rolling in.—white capped and aglow phosphorescent, color play. How the Priscellas of the past would joy to see them? Pretty as you have seen them, they were never so handsome before. Persian designs, leaves, buds, flowers, polka, dots, plain stripes, scrabbles and scrawls, angles and tangles. More than 300 different styles, small figures, large figures, and mourning designs, better printing was never done 'exquisite.' If you don't want to buy, don't pass the window or come in. Prices range from 6 to 15 cents.

The trouble with low grade Marseilles Bed Spreads has been loose threads at the back—face, all right, but you didn't like the fiddle-string arrangement at the back, needn't. Here are $2.50 Marseilles Bed Spreads, full size and handsome patterns, with backs firm and well finished. Look at this honey comb quilt for $1, which needs no apology for either size or weight.

Flannelettes—what are they? are they all-wool? No they are mostly cotton, finished to imitate a Flannel, and especially adapted for childrens' dresses and ladies' wrappers. They consist of Cream Grounds, with pink, blue and cardinal Stripes, blue and white, pink and cream, pink and blue, and pink, cream and grey, some 18 patterns in all—the best quality being only 12½ cents a yard.

Opened out this week, a line of Linen Tablings, the maker of which is noted the world over. They are specially suited for every day wear—the warp is well twisted and they wash and iron well.

Before you hear from us again, I will have visited the wholesale markets where I will be on the look-out for Bargains for my Customers.

Thirty Years Paying Rent in Peterborough.
I frequently hear statements akin to above, followed by remarks of deep regret for having missed many golden opportunities of buying whole lots at a price they would now have to pay for one foot of the same land. Buying property in Peterborough is the safest kind of a safe and profitable investment. I have at present cheap homes, medium class homes and a few exceedingly fine Residences and grounds some of which were built for home comforts, regardless of cost. Uncontrollable circumstances have now caused those to be offered for immediate sale much under value. I commence at $475, for good house and large lot. I can suit any reasonable buyer. I have also good value in Market Gardens and Farms.

THE HIGH COM'S REPORT.

WHAT SIR CHARLES SAYS ABOUT COLONIAL MATTERS AT HOME.

Immigration From Great Britain and the Continent to This Country—Trade and Commerce with the Mother Land.

Ottawa, March 11.—Sir Charles Tupper has issued his annual report in connection with his office as High Commissioner for Canada. The document is an appendix to the report of the Minister of Agriculture and deals exclusively with the question of emigration from Great Britain and the Continent to Canada and colonial trade and commerce with the Mother Country.

The following is an extract from the emigration returns issued by the British Board of Trade, so far as they relate to Canada:

Nationalities.	1888.	1887.
English	33,720	34,611
Scotch	5,344	5,613
Irish	2,794	3,888
	34,994	32,008
Foreigners	14,234	12,351
	49,168	44,059

The returns show an increase, both of British emigrants and foreigners, although there is a decrease in the number of departures for the United States. The figures for the latter country were 233,079 as against 226,901 in 1887. There was also a falling off in the emigrants to Australasia, the numbers being 31,511 and 33,198 respectively.

In 1888 the total quantity of wheat imported into Great Britain was 47,404,344 cwts., valued at £17,888,155; in 1887, 55,784,695 cwts., valued at £21,335,902; in 1886, 57,224,934, valued at £21,971,331, of which there went from British North America and the United States:

On the Atlantic	1,095,852	2,017,189	691,800
On the Pacific	889,573	1,250,447	966,875

Of wheat meal and flour there were imported into Great Britain in 1888 14,739,232 cwts., valued at £8,254,407; in 1887, 18,056,545 cwts., valued at £10,030,436; in 1886, 16,912,775 cwts., valued at £9,530,800, of which there came from the United States and British North America:

	Quantity. 1888. cwts.	1887. cwts.	1886. cwts.
United States	11,473,126	14,372,443	12,557,028

United States	6,197,389	8,044,154	6,885,976
B. N. A.	421,741	535,541	432,409

The imports both of wheat and flour from Canada show a considerable decrease compared with that of the previous year, and the same remark applies to the United States. The feature of the year was the increase in the imports from Russia and Germany. The total imports show a tendency to increase, but it is an important fact for consideration that out of the total quantity of wheat which was imported, about 57,000,000 cwts., less than 12,000,000 cwts. came from British possessions. In the case of wheat, meal and flour, out of nearly 17,000,000 of cwts. imported only 788,163 cwts. came from British territory. It will be seen, therefore, how great a margin there is for a development in the imports from British possessions and particularly from Canada. Great Britain would certainly be in a very serious position in the event of her being embroiled in any war, considering the extent to which she has to rely upon foreign countries at the present time for the means of feeding her rapidly increasing population.

The High Commissioner then refers to the smallness of the imports of barley and oats from Canada, and says this country should have a much larger showing.

The following figures relate to the imports into Great Britain of living animals:

I am sorry to notice, says Sir Charles, that Canada seems to be falling rapidly out of the line in connection with the export of butter. Of over 15,000,000 cwts. imported during the year only 9173 cwts. came from the Dominion. There is no reason whatever that I can see why Canada should not make butter on good as that produced by the other countries which send the bulk of Great Britain's supplies. I trust some means can be found by which Canada may assume the position in this trade which she has a right to occupy, considering the advantages she possesses. Of course the great increase in the exports in cheese from the Dominion may have something to do with the decrease in the exports of butter, but as Canada is able to produce cheese which is regarded as among the best that is imported, it is the subject of remark that she does not occupy a similar position in regard to butter. The question is one which will repay investigation, considering the prices paid in the country. I should think that if butter were properly made, and if care were taken in its packing and in its export, it would realize a handsome profit to all those who interested themselves in the trade. Greater attention might also with advantage be paid to the raising of poultry for consumption here. There is a large market for this kind of produce, and the prices are high. The demand would certainly be greatly increased if the prices were a little lower. The cost of transport from Canada is comparatively light at the present time, and I believe that fowls, ducks, geese and turkeys could be sold here to realize large returns to any persons in the Dominion enterprising enough to engage in the trade. Fowls, ducks and hares are already on the market in London from Russia. The import trade is not very large yet, but it will be seen from the figures that it is rapidly growing.

The cheese importations from Canada and the United States show these figures:

Quantity.	1888. cwt.	1887. cwt.	1886. cwt.
From Canada	897,276	893,357	997,461
From United States	644,776	749,449	812,430
Value.	1888. £	1887. £	1886. £
From Canada	3,136,178	1,462,764	1,422,889
From United States	1,852,370	1,274,413	1,206,776

J. E. Woodley, boot and shoe manufacturer of Quebec, is in financial difficulties arising out of the complications of an Ottawa jobber.

Stole a Statue of St. Joseph.

Ottawa, March 9.—A sensation has been caused here by an affair which eclipses anything of the kind ever heard of in Canada in the way of church robberies. Last night thieves entered St. Anne's Catholic Church and stole a statue of St. Joseph. The priests are indignant over the sacrilegious act and have secured the services of detectives.

THAT TINY SPECK OF WAR

NOTHING KNOWN AT WASHINGTON ABOUT THE SAMOAN STORY.

The Belief That the Report is False Unchanged—Stirring Rumors Cause Wild Excitement in San Francisco.

Washington, March 10.—There is still a dearth of news from Samoa in the State and Navy Departments. In the State Department the fact that they have not been officially advised of the blowing up of the Nipsic is regarded as sufficient evidence that no such thing has happened. They have not telegraphed the acting consul for the reason that it is not to be supposed that he has neglected his duty and failed to inform his government of an event of such importance. In answer to the suggestion that the Germans would control every avenue by which the news could reach the United States, it is said that they could not prevent the information from reaching England through some of the English vessels at Samoa, even supposing that the reported engagement had been followed by a declaration of war, which might have resulted in cutting off Consul Blacklock from the cable at Auckland. Naval officers here without exception also discredit the story, although they admit that the Nipsic would have been overmatched by the Olga in a sea fight. They are rather inclined to accept the view taken by certain of the English papers that the publication in the German newspapers was thrown out as a feeler to learn how an attempt to chastise the Mataafa forces for the killing of the German seamen would be received in Germany and America.

Secretary Tracy and Commodore Walker denounce the story as an absurd fabrication. It is learned that the reported destruction of the Nipsic was not even mentioned at the cabinet meeting yesterday afternoon, which fact is an additional proof that none of the executive departments are in possession of information which would confirm the rumor.

Prince Excited.

San Francisco, March 10.—The newspapers here yesterday put out bulletins stating that the rumor that the Nipsic had been sunk and the Alameda captured by the Germans, had been confirmed by private advices. Tremendous crowds collected about the offices and the excitement was intense.

In an editorial article headed, "The First Shot," commenting upon the reported engagement between the United States steamer Nipsic and the German corvette Olga, The California Democrat, leading German paper of this city, will say to-morrow: "As an American citizen of German extraction we cannot but deeply deplore this unfortunate quarrel between the country of our choice and that of our birth. But whatever may come, there remain but two roads to follow: Either we must rally round the starry flag and defend it with our lives and our fortunes, or we have to shake off American citizenship by emigrating from this country, and since we have come here to stay we will stand and fall by our flag, our country right or wrong."

The Situation in Samoa.

Washington, March 10.—The following is a part of the last letter from Capt. Mullan, of the United States steamer Nipsic, received by his brother in this city. The letter is dated Apia, Jan. 18:

"Here in Samoa we have war times and excitement. Germany has declared war against Mataafa and proclaimed martial law here and in Samoa. I have protested against this martial law business, and think it has had a beneficial effect. Things are all exciting here. They are at war with Mataafa, but all their proclamations are directed against foreigners. They carry on a high game here, and our Government has but one vessel while they have three good ships.

"I hear by way of Auckland that we will have more ships here. God only knows how this affair will end. The Samoans do not want Germany to annex their island, but have long ago asked both England and the United States to take them.

"The little paper published here, The Samoan Times, has been suppressed by the Germans. On Jan. 9 the German consulate, German Consul's house, etc., were burned. Loss $100,000. It was the greatest fire ever in Apia. I sent men to render aid.

"I hear Germany intends sending out troops. The German Consul at Auckland chartered a small English steamer the other day and sent her here with important German despatches, but what these despatches were no one but Germans know."

TEN PER CENT.

A Windsor Alderman Receives an Objectionable Letter Concerning a Contract.

Windsor, March 10.—For some months Windsor has been agitating the opening of certain streets in the western part of the town and a bylaw was introduced and passed for that purpose. Arbitrators were appointed and are now holding meetings listening to the different sides of the question as to what will be allowed the property owners through which the streets will pass. The survey as made will require the moving of a number of residences, and these will have to be let by tender to the Board of Public Works, who make the award.

Thursday last Ald. John Harmon received a letter purporting to be from Goodman & Clark house movers of Detroit, which is a flagrant violation of the criminal law of Canada. The letter is written on the letter heads of the above firm and purports to be signed by Mr. Clark, the junior partner of the firm, who was in Windsor a few days previous to the date of the letter. It winds up with the following: "I have this proposition to make, Mr. Harmon. It is customary in Detroit, when a job is given to remunerate the one who has the giving of it, and if you will secure me the job of moving the houses on the proposed streets I will give you 10 per cent. on all jobs."

As yet comparatively few are aware of the receipt of the letter by Ald. Harmon. The law states that the attempted bribery or intimidation of any public officer is punishable by a long term in prison. Magistrate Bartlett said last evening that it was one of the grossest pieces of impudence he had ever seen. The letter will be laid before the Committee on Public Works on Tuesday.

WHEN THEY ARE RIPE.

An Ex-Torontonian's Prophecies About Canada and the States.

New York, March 10.—To-day's Herald contains a long letter from Rev. W. A. Crawford-Frost of St. Paul's Church, Charlottetown, P. E. I., in which the writer prophesies that within the next century the United States will become a monarchy, that Canada will not be a colony of Great Britain more than twenty-five or thirty years longer but will become independent, and that when both countries are ripe for it they will unite in one kingdom.

A GAS SYNDICATE.

The Kingsville, Ont., Well to be Piped for Detroit's Benefit.

Ottawa, March 10.—American capitalists are organizing a powerful syndicate to convey gas to Detroit from the famous gas well recently discovered accidentally at Kingsville, Ont. The intentions of the capitalists were kept a secret until yesterday, when one of them visited Ottawa to interview the Government with the object of ascertaining whether legislation would be required to enable them to convey gas in pipes from Canada to the United States. Sir John Thompson, Minister of Justice, assured them that they could go ahead without any further delay.

THE EIGHTY CLUB DINNER.

A REMARKABLE PASSAGE IN MR. PARNELL'S SPEECH.

Lord Randolph Churchill's Attack on the Admiralty Proposals—Conybeare's Conduct at the Cornish Dinner.

London, March 10.—"I do not know," said Lord Rosebery Friday evening, "whether it may be the lot of the Tory party—but I feel it already not obscurely adumbrated by some of their organs—to offer Mr. Parnell and his party such a measure of Home Rule as they can accept. If they do, I am sure that we can only rejoice." That is the first response from any Liberal of Cabinet rank to Mr. Parnell's speech last week in the House of Commons.

What Lord Rosebery said was said at a dinner given by the Eighty Club to Earl Spencer. Mr. Parnell spoke just before Lord Rosebery. It was a purely political dinner, the guests all Gladstonians or Parnellites, and not, therefore, a moment to be holding out olive branches to the Tories. No fresh one was offered. But none the less remarkable was this passage of the speech:

Lord Spencer has expressed to you his belief that Ireland is capable of self-government; that there is no such wrong in the minds or the genius of the Irish people that they cannot be trusted to do for themselves that which all your Colonies are trusted to perform, and that which every State of the American Union has the power to perform to the internal economy of that country, with advantage to itself and with increased strength to the Federal body of which it forms a part.

Now that is not a direct declaration of a willingness to accept Home Rule on either the Colonial or the American basis. Taken, however, in connection with his House of Commons speech, it may show in what direction Mr. Parnell's mind is wearing. Mr. Chamberlain is never weary of praising the Canadian parallel, but the American example and the relations of the American States to the American Union offer analogies so remote from Ireland that they have hitherto been left mainly to the amateur. It is not at all likely that Mr. Parnell will propose or accept what may be called American Home Rule, but a modification of Gladstonian Home Rule is certain, and particulars suggested by American experience would be a very different matter.

Earl Spencer, whose speech was of great weight and authority, spoke of a day coming when Mr. Gladstone should introduce a Home Rule measure, not in the same form, but on the same principles, probably in an improved form. This, too, is significant. It even begins to look as if others than Mr. Parnell might be ready for a new departure.

Canada and the States.

London, March 10.—Fanatically Protectionist is the verdict of The Spectator on President Harrison's inaugural address, and this journal is, therefore, of the opinion that the new administration will try to bribe or compel Canada to enter a customs union.

The Admiralty Proposals.

London, March 10.—Lord Randolph Churchill's first speech in the House of Commons on his return was an attack on the naval proposals of the Government. He follows it up yesterday with a hard-hitting letter in The Times. He condemns not merely this present scheme of Lord George Hamilton and his Admiralty colleagues; he protests that all schemes emanating from the Admiralty as at present constituted must be received with the gravest suspicion and mistrust. Lord Randolph is not the only critic of these proposals. The expenditure on announced additions to the navy amounts to $60,000,000, spread over seven years. The Gladstonians, probably with Mr. Gladstone at their head, will oppose this as a waste of public money. Lord Randolph promises them his best help, and there is every prospect of lively work.

Conybeare's Poor Taste.

London, March 10.—Mr. Conybeare, M.P., attended the annual Cornish dinner at the Holborn restaurant Saturday. A toast was proposed to the Prince and Princess of Wales as the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall. All present with the exception of Conybeare rose and swung "God bless the Prince of Wales." Seeing Conybeare sitting the diners became furious and shouted "Stand up, Conybeare!" "He is disloyal!" "Turn him out!" etc. Conybeare finally rose.

The Floods in England.

London, March 10.—Further damage by floods is reported in the Midland and Western counties of England.

Russia's Triumph in Servia.

London, March 10.—King Milan's abdication is the visible sign and seal of Russia's triumph and of Austria's defeat in Servia. It is the end of a long game, played rather low down on both sides. Austria is Prince Bismarck's close ally; Russia is dreaded as a probable ally of France; and Prince Bismarck's policy is to postpone to the latest possible date the turning of that probability into fact. He has therefore every motive to keep on easy terms with both Russia and Austria. Russia's triumph is regarded at Vienna as momentary. Certain it is that Austria will not lightly relinquish her claim to ascendancy in Servia. What Russian intrigue has achieved Austrian intrigue is likely sooner or later to undo. The situation in the Balkans becomes in fact more critical than ever.

Received Quietly at Berlin.

Berlin, March 10.—The abdication of King Milan of Servia, though not expected as soon, was received here very calmly, having been long considered inevitable. In foreign official circles no fears are entertained that the event will disturb the existing peace, Prince Bismarck having taken precautionary measures to restrain Austria from any precipitate action, and Russia having all to gain by maintaining a waiting attitude. The news that Servia had decided to reduce her army further restores confidence that no adventurous policy will be pursued.

Won the Wager and Lost His Life

London, March 10.—A blacksmith in the town of Marne, Schleswig-Holstein, recently made a wager that he could eat three pounds of raw meat and one pound of raw sausages and drink six quarts of beer at one sitting. He accomplished the feat, but died almost immediately afterward. A post mortem examination of his body revealed the fact that his stomach had been rent by the pressure of its contents.

Sufficiently Punished.

Paris, March 9.—The revocation by the government of the decree of exile against the Duke d'Aumale was accepted by the Chamber of Deputies to-day. The chamber, by a vote of 316 to 274, sustained the action of the government.

M. Millerand demanded urgency for and the immediate discussion of the question of granting amnesty to persons imprisoned under the laws dealing with strikes, public speaking and press offences.

Premier Tirard accepted

DIFFERENT DEFINITIONS

Of Bible Terms and Doctrinal Theories.

Rousing Meetings in St. Paul's and the George Street Churches—Messages for All Kinds of People—Subjects for This Week's Services.

Sunday's services in the Presbyterian, Baptist and Methodist churches of the town were particularly interesting on account of the presence of Rev. Messrs. Crossley and Hunter, the evangelists. Besides, the other ministers exchanged pulpits—Rev. Messrs. Pearson and Torrance in the morning, and Rev. Messrs. Shorey, Parker and Torrance at night, Mr. Shorey being in St. Paul's, Mr. Torrance in the Baptist church, and Mr. Parker in the Charlotte street Methodist church. Good congregations attended all these services, the ministers having expressed the wish that people attend their own churches as far as convenient on Sunday.

Rev. Mr. Crossley preached in the Charlotte Street Church Sunday morning. Before beginning his sermon he sang "Ever Remembered," the theme of the song being that everyone should do something good in life, which would cause them to be ever remembered therefor. The text of his sermon was I John, iv, 18:—"Perfect love casteth out fear." This was a subject, he said, about which there was much unnecessary mist, confusion and opposition, because it was not understood. What was the perfect love spoken of? Christianity was love—love of God and fellowmen. The Christian has this love in his heart; though to a greater or less degree as the case may be. Persons converted do not all have the same degree of love. Some at the outset are filled with "perfect love that casteth out fear," while others may love the Lord, but things belonging to their old nature—temper, pride, licentiousness, etc.—still occupy a place in the heart, and occasionally exhibit themselves. It was well that people should understand that a man may exhibit an un-Christian spirit and yet be a Christian, so that they may not disparage such exhibitions in themselves or others. In these cases it would simply be the old spirit, which had not been entirely supplanted by that of divine origin, cropping out. The new nature had not been received by the convert to such a degree as to obliterate the old nature, but it was their privilege to have this divine nature to that extent. Some Christians who have not this fulness of love are apt to disparage what the Lord has given them, and so retrograde instead of progress in grace. They should seek more earnestly after that perfect love which casteth out fear. Much of the misunderstanding regarding the text was due to the many names given this blessed experience by people in the church—some appropriate, others inappropriate and misleading. For instance the term "Christian perfection" so often used does not convey the idea of perfection of love. "Sanctification" and "entire sanctification," meaning set apart from God, as distinguished from justification were unfortunate terms, for sanctification and justification went together. "Holiness" bore a meaning imported into it by the people that used it, while really it was synonymous with sanctification; they speak of "holiness meetings" as special occasions, whereas the church, Sunday school and prayer meetings were all holiness meetings. Then the "second blessing" spoken of by many implied that it was impossible for a man to get the fulness of love in his heart at the first experience of salvation; besides, the blessing of perfect love cannot be placed in any numerical order. It may be the second, or 50th or 100th blessing, according to the individual who receives it. "Entire consecration" was another mystifying term, meaning really the same as sanctification or justification. There were, however, many terms he did like—the Episcopalian "higher light," the Presbyterian "Rest of Faith," and the Methodist "perfect love, or purity of heart." This latter was a Bible term, commendable for its uniformity of thought and expression, because their are no perfect love "cranks," because it admitted of no wrangling, confusion or opposition, and because it drew people into the blessed experience who would not be attracted by the same experience under any other name. Mr. Crossley urged Christians to get this idea of perfect love in their heads and seek it to the fulness of their hearts. All those other terms were Biblical, but they were not given a Biblical construction, and the result was confusion and mischief wrought amongst seekers of salvation. In conclusion he pointed out how sinners might obtain this perfect love and peace of heart.

AT ST. ANDREW'S CHURCH.

There was a fair attendance on Sunday morning at St. Andrew's Church, where Mr. Hunter preached the sermon. After the usual devotional exercises, the speaker stated that since the special work had begun about two hundred persons had manifested a desire to lead a Christian life. He took for his text the 21st verse of the 23rd chapter of St. Luke's gospel—"Crucify him! crucify him!" After vividly painting the scene of the trial, he pointed out that it behooved that Jesus must die the death of the cross, but that did not justify those concerned in His condemnation and death. All the agony, suffering and ignominy that Jesus endured was for the sinner. The iniquity of all was laid upon Him. Christ laid down His life for sinful man, and sinners were urged to come to Him and find salvation—to come at once—not to delay their coming till the last hour. The thief on the cross, who accepted Christ in his last moments was the only instance recorded in the Bible, where repentance at the last hour availed. The design of Christ's death was to save people from their sins. The speaker closed an earnest address by pointing out the five fold benefits of accepting Christ—pardon, peace, purity and paradise—conjoined with an earnest appeal to sinners to give their hearts to God.

CHILDREN'S MEETING.

A monster meeting for Sunday school pupils was held in St. Paul's church Sunday afternoon. The large edifice was filled to overflowing. Rev. Mr. Hunter spoke to the children first, pointing out to them the five "open doors"—first Christ, then the church, then prayer, then opportunities and lastly heaven. On each of these points he enlarged, urging the children to give their hearts to God while young, to become members of the church and accept all the opportunities offered of working for God's cause. Mr. Crossley spoke from the text.—"Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth," advancing a number of reasons for so doing. First, the reward is great—greater to the one saved while young than to the sinner who repents at the last moment. Then it would give a better enjoyment of life, and besides the chances were that if children did not give their hearts to God while they were young they never would. This statement was corroborated by church statistics. It would be easier to begin a Christian life while young than in later years, and those saved in youth made the best and most enduring Christians. He pointed out to them that God in his infinite love had given his son as a sacrifice for them—they should return God's love and accept Him as their Heavenly Father.

THE NIGHT SERVICE.

If proof were wanted of the deep interest that the evangelistic meetings is exciting amongst the people of Peterborough, it was amply afforded in the immense congregation that attended the services in the George street Methodist church Sunday evening. Every seat was crowded, the platform was filled, people lined the walls and sat on the stairways, and yet scores turned away unable to gain admittance. Many had to stand up during the entire service, and had the place and occasion been anything but what they were, a church on Sabbath evening, no doubt the very eager ones would have climbed to seats on top of the organ or the gaseliers. And if proof were required of the effect these meetings are having, it also was forthcoming in the almost unanimous response of those present Sunday night, to the request of Mr. Hunter for those who had determined to live for God or who were determined to make a start for Christ, to stand up. The great majority of the congregation rose to their feet.

After the usual introductory songs and prayers, Rev. Mr. Hunter addressed the congregation soliciting the sympathy and support of all Christian people in this movement. He had a deep conviction that Peterborough would be stirred by these meetings as it never had before. He choose as a lesson the 18th chapter of Luke, beginning at the 9th verse, containing the parable of the Pharisee and the publican who went up to the temple to pray. In commenting thereon, Mr. Hunter said that a great many people tried to get to heaven on the church ladder, and they get up so high they cannot be reached. They drink, gamble, swear and dance, but still they are pious, oh! so pious that no one can reach them. Now, this publican was a much better man in his way than many to-day, for he fasted and gave tithes. Most men to-day never fast until they get sick, and who among them gave a tenth of their possessions to the church? Speaking with reference to a passage demanding humbleness of heart, Mr. Hunter said many men attempted to ride into heaven on their high horse. They are so proud and self exalted that they push everyone aside, and they would even shove Peter away from the gate if they could. Some women, too, were oh! so proud that they buried their souls under a high hat. They must all humble themselves in order to enter the kingdom of heaven. Jesus, in speaking to the ruler who questioned him, named the sin of adultery the first among the commandments. "Oh," said Mr. Hunter, "My heart bleeds for some of you men and women. You have in this town some men and women who are guilty of this damnable sin. There are some of them before me to-night. Oh! what will become of them at the judgment?" Mr. Hunter also emphasized the commandment, "Honor thy father and thy mother," urging young people to take care of the old folks and give them the best of everything in life. From the conversation of this rich ruler with Jesus and his refusal to give up his possessions and follow Him, Mr. Hunter drew the lesson that it was in every individual's personal power to be either saved or damned forever. As surely as they declined to heed God's warning call, so surely would their souls be lost. All things were possible to God; He could save the worst sinner if only the poor, darkened heart would come to Him in contrition and plead for pardon.

After Mr. Crossley sang "Peace, be Still," requests for prayer were read for a young man, for a mother and three boys, for two brothers, for the conversion of a brother, for a friend in Lakefield, for a father about to leave the town, for two young men whose mother died from an accident a few weeks ago, for two other young men, and, lastly, for a child who had been for three years in the hospital on a sick bed.

MESSAGES FOR THEM.

Mr. Crossley quoted:—"I have a message from God unto thee."—(Judges, iii, 20), and announced several different messages to suit the requirements of different persons. The first message was to the backslider:—"Return, ye backsliding children, and I will heal your backslidings."—(Jer., iii, 22). This was blessedly true, for many backsliders had been healed of their backsliding and kept right by the grace of God. There was every encouragement for the backslider, because rarely ever did a backslider return to sin twice. Mr. Crossley said he knew of only one instance in his whole life where this had occurred, and then the person referred to had been converted a second time and was now a local preacher steadfast in the faith. A backslider once returned was usually prepared to die for his Lord.

Isaiah, iii, 10, contained a message to the Christian:—"Say ye to the righteous it will be well with him." Some Christians thought it presumptious to say that all is well with them, but if they have yielded everything to God they are justified in saying so. It will be well with the Christian's soul in life, well in death, and well forever more. Who wouldn't be a Christian! Mr. Crossley sang a song describing the Christian's happy lot.

Here was a message to the skeptics and the sinner, Isa., i, 18:—"Come, now, and let us reason together, saith the Lord; though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow; though they be red as crimson, they shall be as wool." Skeptics called themselves free thinkers, but really they thought only on one side. They reason with men instead of reasoning with the Lord, as He invites them to do and be convinced of their error. The sinner's case was most forcibly put. Scarlet and crimson were the two fast colors that could not be destroyed by chemicals, but a man's sins, though as scarlet and crimson, might, by the grace of God, be swept entirely away. Then in Eccl., xii, 1:—"Remember now thy creator in the days of thy youth," there was a message to the young people. Mr. Crossley pointed out that the habits and character formed in youth were liable to remain through life, and it behooved young people to become Christians while in their youth, for the longer they delayed it the harder it became for them to break away from sin. It was a fact, he said, that more than half those converted were young people under 20.—By statistics it was proven that, on an average, two out of 100 persons converted were 40 years of age or over; 8 of the 100 were between 30 and 40; 32 of the 100 between 20 and 30; and 58 of the hundred under 20 years of age. Every day they neglected salvation lessened their chances of being saved. If they were not saved before 20 years of age, the great probability was they would continue in sin till at last Satan got them. He strongly urged the young people not to let the opportunity pass, but make up their minds to come to Christ. He sang for their benefit the invitation of Jesus "Come unto me and I will give you rest." He had also a message to unconverted husbands, Eph., v., 25;—"Husbands love your wives." Out of love for his wife Mr. Crossley said, if for no other reason a man should be a Christian. In this important matter a husband should lead, and his wife would follow him. In their past five years experience, Mr. Crossley said, they knew only two instances where husbands who had been converted were not followed by their wives, whereas there were many wives with unconverted husbands. Husbands should not stand in their wives' way, but set the example that would lead them and their children to Christ. It was cruel and heartless for a man to pledge himself to love his wife and yet not participate with her in a Christian experience nor lead the way there for her. Mr. Crossley earnestly pleaded with husbands, for their wives and children's sakes, to throw themselves on the mercy of the Lord.

Mr. Hunter brought the meeting to a close with a stirring exhortation to the unsaved to escape from the doom that awaited them while the opportunity offered, and to seek the rest and peace which Jesus offers. At the after meeting about 100 persons went forward as indicating that they were anxious for a change of heart

ENGLISH POLITICAL TALK.

Relations Between Great Britain and the States.

LONDON, March 8.—Sir Julian Pauncefote leaves England for Washington at the end of this month. His first visit will be a brief one. He will return to London for the summer and not settle in Washington as British minister till autumn. Lord Salisbury's political opponents give him credit for having made a wise choice. I asked one of them, says Mr. Smalley, perhaps better qualified to judge than any other living Liberal, whether he thought Sir Julian likely to do well at Washington. "In my opinion," answered he, "there could not be a better appointment."

The same eminent Liberal dissents strongly from the suggestion cabled here, truly or not, that President Harrison regards English relations with the United States as of less practical importance than those of South and Central America. "We have," he said, "more than one burning question to settle. We have not yet got you as good a man as we could find and we strongly hope your new president will do as much for us. We have no wish to discuss grave subjects with a weak ministry; it is of no advantage to us, but a positive disadvantage. These matters cannot be finally settled unless they are fairly settled, and fair settlement can only be reached by the help of able men on each side."

Lord Randolph Churchill's absence during the whole debate on the address is thought significant. He returned two days ago. He finds the ministry of which he was once a member in a condition more critical than at any period of its existence; has the Parnell commission, on which Lord Salisbury insisted, and which Lord Randolph opposed, has half ruined the Union cause, and that Parnell has himself come forward with suggestions for a new deal for some new form of home rule—if such there be—that shall not imperil the empire or alarm England. The situation is, in fact, very different from the situation when Lord Randolph quitted this island of east winds for Monte Carlo and sunlight. He has been loitering in Paris watching events from that easy distance. He has not returned to do nothing. What he will do is a question of no little interest to the Government and of no little importance outside the Government.

Time was when Lord Randolph and Parnell were politically intimate. What could be more natural than one or both should think the time had come to renew that intimacy?

It would not be the first time that Lord Randolph has shown his clever colleagues the way to popular favor and political good fortune; but his colleagues have not carped of late any great will from their former leader, and should they want his help they will discover that it is not to be had with out asking—perhaps not even if asked for

The Opposition seems still to be in doubt whether to attack the Government in connection with the forged letters. Various forms of motion have been suggested and rejected. Meantime, they are fishing for more evidence of their alleged complicity. The Home Secretary, the Irish Secretary and other officials are nightly plied with questions in the House of Commons relating to the employment of the police to collect testimony for The Times, the admission of The Times' agents to prisons to extract statements from prisoners, the appearance in London of Irish magistrates waiting to testify before the commission, and twenty other kindred topics.

These questions have another object. They are meant to impress by incessant repetition on the public mind the fact, if it be a fact, that the resources of the Government have been put at the disposal of The Times throughout the inquiry. Mr. Balfour meets this with his usual frank courage. He avows that the Government has thought it its duty to aid in the inquiry, and it offers equal aid to both parties. Hitherto the evidence given has come from one side. When the turn of the other side comes the other side will have equal facilities, or may, if they like, have them now.

They Will Raise a Discussion.

LONDON, March 8.—If the Parnell Commission does not report on the forged letters the Opposition in the House of Commons will raise a discussion Monday on the Attorney-General's action.

The Record Will Stand.

LONDON, March 8.—The House of Commons by a vote of 112 to 79 rejected Mr. Bradlaugh's motion to expunge from the records the particulars of his expulsion from the House in 1880.

The Flurry in Copper Shares.

PARIS, March 8.—Prices of copper shares improved to-day on the Bourse.

LONDON, March 8.—The Stock Exchange reopened to-day and closed heavy on continental sales. At the Metal Exchange, G. M. B. copper closed at £55, a fall of £7 since yesterday, and £20 on the week. It is reported that a large Paris order to buy was received to-night.

The Czar Won't Meddle With Bulgaria.

VIENNA, March 8.—In an interview to-day M. Zankoff said the Czar had emphatically declared he would not meddle forcibly with Bulgaria, the expulsion of the Prince being an internal affair.

An Inquiry Ordered.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 8.—The Czar has ordered an inquiry into the Atchinoff expedition and the Sagalle incident.

A Bombmaker Killed.

ZURICH, March 8.—While a party of students were making bombs to-day an explosion occurred, killing one and wounding several others. Many arrests were made.

To Name the Opening Quadrille.

NEW YORK, March 8.—The Committee of Entertainment on the centennial celebration of the inauguration of George Washington have decided to invite the following ladies to dance in the opening quadrille at the ball to be given at the Metropolitan Opera House on April 30: Mrs. [illegible] Adams, Mrs. William Waldorf Astor, Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Mrs. Frederick J. Dallgren, Mrs. Elbridge T. Gerry, Mrs. Alexander Hamilton, Mrs. Benjamin Harrison, Mrs. Robert[illegible] R. Hayes, Mrs. John Jay, Mrs. Archibald Gracie King, Miss Carola Livingston, Mrs. Levi P. Morton, Miss Schuyler, Mrs. Henry Van Rensselaer and Mrs. Sidney Webster.

A BIG FIRE.

Louisville Scorched to the Extent of Nearly Half a Million.

LOUISVILLE, March 8.—Fire here to-day caused a loss of $435,000, insurance $255,000. The chief losers were Kleinhans & Simonson, the W. P. Churchill estate, H. Swetzer and H. Victor Newcomb. Two [illegible] injured.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

THE WOMAN TEMPTED ME!

Milan's Abdication Causes General Uneasiness in Europe.

NEW YORK, March 7.—The Times London despatch says the abdication of King Milan will create considerable uneasiness on the Continent, chiefly because M. Ristchis, who is left in charge, has no majority at the back of him, either in the Skuptschina or the country, and has intrigued equally with Russia and Austria. The situation at Vienna is regarded there with despondency. Every effort has been made on the part of Austria to keep King Milan up to the task. Abdication now is regarded in the Austrian Capital as meaning that Queen Natalie will be back in a month, and that Servia will be fully under the Russian wing before summer. Such a situation may easily precipitate a crash, and certainly will if Austria is encouraged by her allies, Germany and Italy, to interfere against Russian ascendency at Belgrade. So far Milan himself, he has been for years the scandal of royalty, and personally all will be glad to see him disappear. It is taken for granted that he will live in Paris with the woman who was responsible for his rupture with Queen Natalie.

It is said that Archduke Rudolf's suicide is what prompted him to take this resolve to quit the throne. This would seem to be woman's special decade, for the number of instances in which during the last ten years great men have been killed and great places lost by feminine influence is probably unequalled in the history of Europe. From Gambetta to Gortschakoff and from Louis of Bavaria to Alexander of Battenberg the story has been written of late in the biggest sort of type. The new King of Servia is a lad in his thirteenth year. He is said to be an exceptionally bright, good boy, but the chances seem to be that by the time he comes to years of discretion there will be no Servia for him to rule. It is stated that the new King will be declared of age on his fifteenth birthday, and that he will then assume the government himself.

The Raw, Cutting Winds

bring to the surface every latent pain. A change of even a few degrees marks the difference between comfort and pain to many persons. Happily disease now holds less sway. Science is continually bringing forward new remedies which successfully combat disease. Polson's Nerviline—nerve pain cure—has proved the most successful pain relieving remedy known. Its application is wide, for it is equally efficient in all forms of pain, whether internal or external. Ten and 25 cents a bottle, at druggists. 6dw10

The Loss of the Hair

Is a great misfortune and the sight of a bald head should be a warning to you to take the best possible care of your hair. A little of Dr. Dorenwend's "Hair Magic" used occasionally will prevent all chances of its falling out or turning gray, and will remove all traces of dandruff. Every druggist has it in stock. Ask for it. dw

Partly Gave Up.

"In the year 1885 I coughed for six months, and having unsuccessfully tried many remedies, I partly gave up, thinking I had consumption. At last I tried Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam, less than one bottle of which cured me, leaving me as well as ever I was." Henry W. Carse, Wabash, Ont. 2w10d.

Health Failing Fast.

"I was swollen from head to foot from dropsy of six months' standing, and my health was failing fast, but after taking one bottle of Burdock Blood Bitters I am quite well, and think there is no medicine equal to B. B. B., and to it I remain a true friend." Joseph Heric, Linwood, Ont. 2w10d

Piles! Piles! Itching Piles.

SYMPTOMS—Moisture, intense itching and stinging, most at night, worse by scratching. If allowed to continue tumors form, which often bleed and ulcerate, becoming very sore. SWAYNE'S OINTMENT stops the itching and bleeding, heals ulceration, and in most cases removes the tumors. At druggists, or by mail, for 50 cents. Dr. Swayne & Son, Philadelphia. Lyman, Sons & Co., Montreal, Wholesale Agents. dw

Nothing Like It.

"I was troubled with liver complaint for a good many years, but was cured by one bottle of Burdock Blood Bitters. I have never found any medicine to help me like B. B. B., in fact one bottle made a complete cure." W. J. Best, Parkhill, Ont. 2w10d

Common Croup

is often fatal when not remedied in time. Leslie B. Nicholson, 19 Wellesley avenue, Toronto, says:—"As a quick cure for croup, colds, sore throat, chilblains, etc., I can recommend Hagyard's Yellow Oil." It is a sure cure. Directions accompany each bottle. 2w10d

LOCAL NEWS.

Piano Tuning.

Mr. G. Gamprieht is in town. Orders may be left at Messrs. Taylor & Macdonald's or Mr. A. L. Davis' store. d

GOT TO MOVE ALONG; therefore the price is no object. Good groceries within the reach of all at M. R. Kidd's.

Pleased With It.

"It is well worth the price and practically useful," said a young man in business here, after he had his head examined by Professor Campbell at the Grand Central. The Professor is kept very busy. 1d

The River Spar.

Work on the C. P. R. river spar is progressing rapidly. Already the track has been laid across Hunter street and is being continued up Dickson street to the mills. The line will be ready for traffic in a few weeks at the most.

Subjects for This Week's Services.

Following are the subjects for this week's services:—Monday, "Blunders"; Tuesday, song service; Wednesday, "Blaspheming against the Holy Ghost"; Thursday, song service; Friday, sermon especially to business and professional men.

Make Sail for the Sale.

The sale of the Brophy stock of boots and shoes is still going on at the old stand, Hunter street, opposite the Oriental. "Now is the accepted time" to buy boots and shoes cheap. This stock having been bought at a very low price, bargains may be expected in every line. d

Why People Wonder

How it is W. J. Morrow sells his teas and all other lines so cheap—well, he buys in large quantities owing to his extensive trade turns over his goods quickly, as he is not so anxious for large profits as other houses are, and does the largest trade of any grocery house in town. Something new—our 5 lb. Japan for $1.00. See our advertisement in another column.

Closed their Engagement.

Sig. Giovanni's variety troops closed their engagement in the opera house Saturday night, when a handsome gold watch was won by Mr. Jos. Glass and a large ham by Mrs. Murray. Besides a large number of other useful household articles were distributed to the lucky ticket holders. Signor Giovanni carried out his gift enterprise to the letter, and no doubt he will do a good business should he return.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

"Still they Come."

The crowds keep rushing to secure the bargains at Elliott & Tierney's stock taking sale.

A Weather Prophecy.

A close observer states that we won't have fine weather till after the 17th of March. That just answers the purpose for the Firemen's Carnival, the grand wind-up of the winter, to be held at the Charlotte street rink on Friday evening. The very last and the very best of the season. Every preparation is being made to work the carnival for the grandest kind of a success. Next Friday night. 1d

Trampled on by a Horse.

Sunday morning between ten and eleven o'clock Mr. James Stothart, of Smith, while watering a horse was kicked on the thigh by the unruly beast, and knocked down and trampled upon, his arms and head being severely cut and bruised. Mr. Stothart considers it miraculous that he escaped with his life. Dr. King was called in and attended the injured man, who will not be able to be around for some time under the most favorable circumstances.

A Couple of Accidents

Friday afternoon a young man named Richardson, of Smith, cut his foot quite severely with an axe. He will be laid up for a few weeks. Miss McWha of Ashburnham on Saturday slipped on the ice in front of her house and received such a gash over her eye that the surgeon had to put in several stitches. Dr. Scott attended both cases.

The Manufacturers' Accident Insurance Company, Wilcox & Morrison, agents, have cheap rates and large indemnities. No one should be without an accident policy.

Campbellford and Belleville.

At the last meeting of the Belleville Board of Education, a deputation was appointed to view the working of the Smead & Dowd system of heating and ventilating in the Campbellford High School. The deputation have been there and were received by a number of the members of the Board of that village. They were very attentive to the deputation in every way, and gave them all the information required. The opinions which were formed by the deputation will be presented at the next regular meeting of the Board.

30 CHESTS of our double extra fine new Japan tea arrived to-day, 5 lbs for $1 at M. R. Kidd's.

Cathedral Chimes.

In St. Peter's Cathedral Sunday Rev. Father Cotey, of Paris, said mass at 10:30 and Rev. Father Rudkins preached upon the Lenten duties of Catholics. In the evening Rev. Father Cotey delivered a masterly address upon "Venal Sin," the gist of which was that while venal sin was not in itself a mortal offence meriting eternal punishment, yet it was to be avoided because it was liable to lead a person into sin of a more deadly nature. Rev. Father Cotey is a very young man but his sermons display a deepness of thought and elegance of expression of an unusually high order.

Next Sunday, St. Patrick's day, the services will be particularly interesting. At the eight o'clock mass the children's choir will sing some Irish hymns, and in the even- His Lordship Bishop Dowling will preach a sermon having direct reference to the occasion.

Services will be continued during Lent on Wednesday and Friday evenings.

To Fight the Repeal.

The temperance people are organizing for battle against the repeal of the Scott Act. The W.C.T.U. rooms on George street are their headquarters, and already committees have been appointed to canvass the town and Ashburnham. Dr. Fife is chairman of the central committee and Mr. Lindsay secretary. Every night meetings are held for the purpose of completing organization, and it is intended also to aid the cause outside the town limits. Arrangements are being made for meetings to be held in the county, at which the Peterborough people will take part. Saturday afternoon a conference of temperance workers from Keene, Norwood, Lakefield and other places was held in the W.C.T.U. hall. The temperance party intend to fight the repeal all through the county, and already meetings on behalf of the Scott Act have been begun in Keene. In Peterborough and Ashburnham committees of about a dozen workers for each ward have been appointed to canvass. A public meeting for the discussion of the Scott Act was called for Saturday evening, but there being a small attendance and some persons expected to take part not arriving, no meeting was held.

St. John's Church.

There were large congregations yesterday both morning and evening, the morning congregation especially being unusually large. Rev. J. C. Davidson preached the sermon in the morning and Rev. Mr. Kearick in the evening.

The special preacher for the Wednesday evening service in St. John's this week will be Rev. J. D. Cayley, Rector of St. George's Church, Toronto. Rev Mr. Cayley is widely known both as the head of a most successful parish and as an organizer in diocesan affairs. His visit will be looked forward to with interest. Rev. Mr. Cayley's subject will be "Faith vs. Formalism."

Notice was given yesterday of a proposed meeting of the young men of the congregation, on Tuesday evening, 19th inst., in the school room. The meeting will be addressed by Rev. R. J. Moore, of Toronto. The object of the meeting will be to discuss the possibility and means of securing the co-operation of young men in the active work of the church.

The Bishop of Toronto will administer the apostolic rite of confirmation in St. John's church on Sunday, June 23rd. It is expected that a large number will be confirmed. Classes will be formed at once.

Daily service is now being held in St. John's at 5.15 p.m., except on Wednesday and Friday, when the services are held at 8 and 7.30 p.m. respectively.

The Bible classes in St. John's on Sunday afternoons are arousing considerable interest among the young people of the congregation.

Sunday Night's Fire.

Ashburnham was visited by quite a serious fire Sunday evening. About a quarter after eight o'clock flames were noticed bursting from the end of a double frame house on the corner of Elizabeth and railway streets, and in a short time the building was all ablaze. The end in which the fire started was occupied by Mr. Robt. Henderson, and the other apartment by Mr. Armstrong. Both families were away from home and very little was saved from the fire. In fact Mr. Henderson's family are left with nothing but what they have on their backs, while the portion of Mr. Armstrong's property rescued from the flames is in a badly damaged condition. The fire quickly spread to the frame house occupied by Mr. Isaac Dormer, only a few feet distant, and it too was consumed, though the household goods were saved. The alarm was not rung for quite a while, but the firemen lost no time in getting across the river. The engine was stationed at the tank at the foot of the hill, and soon a stream of water was pouring into the burning wrecks. Other buildings in the vicinity would likely have been destroyed but for the protection afforded by the engine. The firemen complain that the snow was so deep about the tank that the engine fires were almost put out. The engine had to be worked from the middle of the road. If the village authorities wish to be prepared for fire they should see that the entrance to the tank is kept clear. There was no insurance on the double house, which was owned by a Mr. O'Brien, neither had the occupants any insurance on their property. The house occupied by Mr. Dormer was owned by Mr. Thos. Smiley, and it was fully covered by insurance in the City of London. His household effects were uninsured.

Shot by a Jealous Lover.

A Young Lady Killed by a Young Man On Coming out of Church, Because She Wouldn't Go With Him.

(Special to the Examiner.)

WATFORD, Ont., March 11.—A fearful tragedy occurred last evening on the second line of Warwick north. Miss Sarah Marshall had just come out of the Methodist church, after the service, when Albert Wilcox came up and asked if she would come with him? She answered "not to-night." He immediately drew a revolver and fired at her; the bullet striking her in the head, killing her instantly. Wilcox fled and has not yet been captured.

Ashburnham Brevities.

Mr. J. Time, recently from England, presided at the organ in St. Luke's Church on Sunday.

Mr. H. Rollins has been confined to his room for the past few days, owing to an attack of inflammation.

The Rev. G. Warren preached a sermon on temperance on Sunday in St. Luk's. He commenced by saying that intemperance was the greatest of all the vices and the parent of nearly every other vice. The saloon keeper, by the sale of intoxicating liquor, stood in very great danger of losing his own soul. He would not say a saloon keeper could not be a Christian, but he was afraid very few were. By intemperance family ties were severed, and all the evils which result from this sad state of affairs follow in its train. The temperance cause was one in which every Christian could join as it was universally acknowledged that intemperance was not only a sin but a disgrace to society. While he believed temperance societies had done a good work and are still doing a good work, he believed this was essentially a church work, and as such was the duty of every church member to engage in the cause of temperance actively. He closed a powerful address by appealing to church members to become members of the temperance organization in connection with the church.

The Juniors Win From Millbrook—Items of Interest.

Two rinks of the Millbrook curling club came up on the 5.15 train Saturday evening and played until 8.30, leaving for home on the 8.50 train. They were defeated by the juniors by a majority of 4 shots. The boys feel proud of themselves now, and justly so. They have recovered the laurels they lost when they visited Millbrook a week ago. Following is the score:—

DRAW SHOTS.

Saturday night some young ladies took a hand in a game of curling at the rink. Their previous practice on their bangs, it is said, enabled them to curl "perfectly splendid."

On Saturday night evangelists Crossley and Hamber were interested spectators of the curling match, and this morning bright and early they were down at the rink, deeply engrossed in a practice game, learning to hurl the stones and fan with the besom. If they put as much vigor into their curling practice as they do in their revival work, the cry of "scop 'er up" will be an unnecessary injunction.

The Toronto curlers were beaten by Lakefield Saturday by 3 shots

The point game is being played this afternoon and evening.

English Church Diocesan Changes.

Rev. A. W. Spragge, of Newmarket, has been offered the rectory of Cobourg, in succession to Rev. Canon Stennett, recently deceased. It is one of the most important rectories in the diocese. Rev. Mr. Spragge is a graduate of Trinity College, has done hard and energetic work in Newmarket, and is in every way well qualified for his new incumbency.

Rev. W. S. Westney has been appointed to Uxbridge, in succession to Rev. J. Davidson, now rector of Colborne.

News Nuggets.

—A meeting of the school board is called for to-night.

—The "Held by the Enemy" Company are registered at the Grand Central.

—Trenton has a band of organized White Caps, who make things unpleasant for obnoxious citizens.

—The Morris twine factory building, in Port Hope, is completed and the Port Hopers are very proud of it.

—If the branch line from Cobourg is not built, Crossen's car works may be removed; if the line is completed, they stay where they are, so Mr. Crossen says.

—A few days ago Mr. Archibald Scott, of the township of Snowdon, departed this life at the advanced age of 105 years, retaining his senses to the last. Mr. Scott was born in county Cavan, Ireland, and came to this country 75 years ago. He leaves one son, Mr. John B. Scott, and three daughters to mourn his loss.

Personal.

Mr. Frank Dumble left on Saturday for Minneapolis, Minn., where he intends residing.

Mrs. Dingle, of Oshawa, with her son and daughter, are visiting Mr. W. H Dingle, town.

Hon. Chas. Drury, John C. Field, M.P.P., and J. E. Stratton, M.P.P., will speak at a free platform meeting this evening in connection with the church opening services of the Ernest Avenue Methodist church, Toronto.

The Deputation's Departure.

It is probable the deputation appointed at the last meeting of the council to visit Toronto and Hamilton will leave on their trip to-morrow. The deputation comprises Messrs. Robert S. Davidson, Thomas Cahill, E. H. D. Hall, Wm. Lasgford and A. Retherford. The deputation will first interview Attorney-General with reference to town debentures and will then proceed to Hamilton to inspect the new market building there for the purpose of getting "pointers" to apply on the new market it is proposed to erect here.

Retiring from Business.

Owing to ill health we regret to say that Mr John Braden is compelled to retire from the grocery business. By reference to his advertisement, the public will learn that he is selling his entire stock of the very freshest groceries, canned goods and provisions at cost. His sale will only last for two weeks. Everything must go as he is giving up immediate possession of his premises. d

SMOKE Gladstone, 5 for 25c. at Legros'. Cheap smokers should use Legros' Best, 2 for 5c.; very fine imported cigars, 3 and 4 for 25c. He is selling all best Havana cigarettes that cost 15c. per packet, at 10c. El Padre 4 for 25c.; Creme de la Creme, 4 and 5 for 25c. One of the handsomest and best fitted shaving and hair-dressing parlours in town in connection. Hot and cold baths ready at all hours. Remember the place, 339 George street. d

TORONTO TOPICS.

Another Fatal Coasting Accident—The Cardwell Election Case.

TORONTO, March 11.—At the meeting of the Toronto Ministerial Association on Saturday a motion condemning the Jesuits' Estates bill was passed without a dissenting vote.

Mrs. Shannon, 160 Bathurst-street, was passing along King-street west on Saturday night when a thief deftly snatched her purse containing $3 and made good his escape with it.

About 10 o'clock on Saturday night Walter Nicholson of 15 Alice-street was walking along Yonge-street when three men set upon him near Cumberland-street, and knocking him down, went through his pockets. All they got for their trouble was a pawn ticket for a silver watch.

The Cardwell election case was again before Judge Street at Osgoode Hall Saturday morning. The five days' statutory notice of Smith's withdrawal not having been announced in the county paper the case was again adjourned two weeks and will be finally disposed of March 23 at 11 a.m.

It is officially announced that these companies have been incorporated: "The Constructing and Paving Company of Ontario," "The Windsor Manufacturing and Novelty Works Company," "The St John's Good Templar Hall Company of Toronto," "The D. W. Beadle Nursery Company of St. Catharines."

James Alexander Irwin is a Hamilton moulder, 40 years old, who is in custody here on the serious charge of bigamy, it being alleged that he has two wives living, No. 1 in Hamilton and No. 2 in Toronto. He came down from Hamilton Saturday afternoon to see the second wife but was met by Detective Slemin, who arrested him on a warrant sworn out by the Toronto wife.

Where the Grand Trunk Railway crosses Greenwood's sideline seems to be a bad place for accidents. Several have taken place there in past years, and it was only last Thursday night that a man named Donald McBrian met his death there. On Saturday night another was added to the list of victims in the person of James Kirk, a foreman carpenter employed by the Grand Trunk, and who lives at Little York. He was struck by a train and almost cut to pieces, the accident occurring within a few yards of where McBrian met his death. The patrol wagon was summoned and the remains brought to the Morgue, where at 4 o'clock to-day Coroner Duncan will open an inquest.

A SCORCHER AT WALLACEBURG.

Two Blocks in the Heart of the Town Wiped Out by Fire.

WALLACEBURG, March 9.—A disastrous fire broke out about 7 o'clock this morning in the restaurant of George H. Keys, South Wallaceburg. The building being frame, the local fire company, though promptly on hand, could not save it. Next to Keys' was McDonald & Bros.' hardware store. This was soon consumed. To the westward was situated Halpin's bakery. This went next. A vacant store between was also consumed.

A strong northwest wind was blowing at the time and in a few seconds the flames crossed the street and enveloped T. Redpath's fine new hotel, the Oriental. This, with most of its contents, was consumed. Spreading southward the fire engulfed a dwelling occupied by Pierce Welch and owned by Mrs. Smith. Then followed the destruction of the buildings belonging to the Kerr estate and occupied by Green & Christian, butchers; Wm. McGregor, grocer, and B. Wellman, dwelling.

Again crossing the street to the south, Wm. Murdock's butcher shop and dwelling, a tenement house owned by S. Barfoot of Chatham and occupied by S. Terrall; S. Collinge's harness shop and residence, R. C. Stonehouse's grocery store and residence and J. Rose's cooper shop were burned.

CLEVELAND'S SUPERIOR BAKING POWDER
THE PUREST AND BEST
Is made only of strictly pure grape cream of tartar, strictly pure bicarbonate of soda, and a small portion of flour as a preservative, nothing else whatever, and is warranted entirely free from alum, ammonia, phosphates, lime, and all the adulterants frequently found in baking powders. The character of materials used, their purity, and the nicety of their combination, render Cleveland's superior baking powder the most healthful and most economical in use, and it always affords wholesome, nutritious, and delicious food.
It is recommended for purity, healthfulness and efficiency by Government and State chemists, chemists of Boards of Health, and professors in institutions of learning throughout the country.
Sold only in cans, full weight.

SACKED AND BURNT.

Anti-Europeans Attack an Opium Factory in China—The Rioters in Exile.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 9.—The steamer Belgia, which arrived here this morning from Hong Kong and Yokohama, brings the first detailed advices on the recent anti-European riots at Chin Kiang. Chin Kiang is a ruin. The trouble began, it is claimed, in a street row, when a Chinaman was knocked down by a policeman. This excited the mob, and their first act was to destroy the police station. Then they made for the British consulate, where a Chinese inspector, who has not since been seen, is believed to have taken refuge. On the way they fired three foreign houses. The Chinese general in command sent 300 men to protect the consulate. As soon as the mob appeared the soldiers capitulated. Some fled and the rest joined the mob. The Consul's wife fled barefoot with her children from the back door of the consulate, while the mob, aided by the soldiers, sacked and burned everything. The missionaries' houses and a chapel nearly shared the same fate, while the British Consul himself was twice in imminent danger of death.

It is officially announced that these companies have been incorporated: "The Constructing and Paving Company of Ontario," "The Windsor Manufacturing and Novelty Works Company," "The St John's Good Templar Hall Company of Toronto," "The D. W. Beadle Nursery Company of St. Catharines."

The American consulate was looted and more houses were burned. The residents took refuge on hulks and the mob tried to follow them, but the connecting bridges were raised. The viceroy telegraphed to the British Consul that he was sending 2000 soldiers to restore order.

The riot broke out again on Wednesday afternoon. When Gen. Kennedy reached Chin Kiang he had the American flag raised at the United States consulate. The British ship Mutine arrived on Thursday and fired a salute to the British flag. Within five minutes after the firing of the first gun the Chinese in the settlement had fled in all directions. The United States steamer Omaha has been recalled from Corea and goes to Chin Kiang direct.

The North China Daily News says: "The chief lesson learned from this outbreak is that it will not do to believe that foreigners are in absolute security at any of the treaty ports."

A BELLEVILLE GIRL'S FATE.

Abandoned by Her Betrayer She Takes Her Own Life.

ROCHESTER, March 10.—Anna Diamond, about 25 years old, committed suicide at the Waverly House this morning by taking poison. She came here from Belleville, Ont., with Charles Macklin, a member of the "Shamus O'Brien" Company, last week. Saturday the company left for Syracuse and Macklin told her he was tired of her and would no longer be bothered with her. This, it appears, caused the woman to take her life.

Project For a Monster Bridge.

MONTREAL, March 9.—A deputation has gone to Ottawa to look after the project to construct a bridge across the St. Lawrence, from Longueuil to St. Helen's Island, with nine spans, and from the Island to Point St. Charles, with fourteen spans. Provisions will be made in the plan for a double track line of railway for tram cars as well as a roadway for vehicles and foot passengers. The estimated cost is $2,000,000.

INTERIOR DECORATION

A Few Practical Illustrations from the Room Paper Department of the Peterborough Bookstore

OUR New Designs have all been selected with direct regard to their harmonious combination. DADO, WALL SPACE, FRIEZE, BORDERS and CEILINGS have been carefully chosen with regard to their relation to each other, and therefore by the use of our different Combinations Artistic and Harmonious results are obtained. Hitherto the purchaser has been forced to search through the stock of other dealers in order to find the patterns of Wall Paper, Friezs and Dado that would combine even fairly well, and it has required great skill, judgment and patience to accomplish this satisfactory. However, by the use of our Paperhangings it is possible for anyone to have rooms decorated with perfect harmony, a great improvement over the old system, under which a successful interior was possible only through a skillful decorator, or by reason of a happy accident in the selection of the necessary papers. To our customers at a distance we will be pleased to forward samples and estimates of cost.

THE VESTIBULE.

The first place of your house is the Vestibule, and decorated with our new Saracenic Patterns, the prevailing effect of which is a pale sea green and a shimmering white in Arabic Design above the low Mosaic dado of blue green, traced with white and accented with cream color and chocolate on a background of sea-green Mosaic. Surmounting this is the wide frieze of intricate interlacing tracery, singularly brilliant and effective. The ceiling is covered with closely worked arabesque in the same colors but in a different pattern. It is impossible to convey any idea of the flashing brilliance of this effect. The architectural treatment of the vestibule is very simple. Since it is only a room for transient occupancy, it follows that the ornament must be bold and striking, not delicate and intricate, for there is no time for the eye to grasp these qualities.

THE STAIRWAY.

In the decoration of a stairway three things are almost indispensable. Solidity and massiveness of form and construction, breadth and effectiveness of ornament and design and the utmost richness of color. This last consideration seems almost the most imperative of all; perhaps, because hitherto the stairways have been so bold and barren. Fortunately the period of entrance tunnels and step-ladders is gone forever, and people realize now that not only does the stairway offer the best chances for effective treatment, but that it really demands almost the richest decoration in the house. It almost always happens that a hall will be more or less dark, and the deep Indian yellow and venetian red used in our designs do the most that is possible towards lightening the room and improving its appearance. A fountain of dark green verde antique, dull green rugs and blue-green draperies give the required contrast and complete the color effect.

THE DRAWING ROOM.

At the time of the æsthetic revival some years ago, the revolution was universal and complete, and, as is always the case during time of revolution, much that was inherently good suffered disgrace with that which merited its destruction. When the world awoke to a clear sense of its artistic depravity, it resolved to turn over a new leaf, leaving nothing to remind it of its former shame. So in an instant all former modes of decoration vanished, and in their place came the rigid forms, the sombre hues, and the importunate rectitude of the new regime. The actual truth and right existing in the new covenant was very great, and to it we owe our present high artistic position. Among other errors it was supposed that there was something iniquitous in white and gold; but white and gold was and still is the very noblest and most beautiful combination of color that can be made, and almost the only one which is perfectly in harmony with the character of a drawing room. The effect of this superb paper is charming—the rich design of creamy white being relieved on a ground of coppery gold. The large, broad masses of the design and the strong flowing lines combine to produce an effect that is beyond improvement.

A MORNING ROOM.

A Smoking Room, "A Den" could be applied with equal propriety. We have a design, slightly Japanese, but not slavishly so, for nothing can be more inartistic than the dull copyism which has lately been in vogue, whereby a nineteenth century room has been transformed into some exotic apartment, distant, perhaps, three thousand miles and fifteen hundred years.

Ingrains, the general color of which is warm, with a light chocolate brown, broken by small touches of many harmonious colors. The High Dado is in rather dark chocolate, covered with carelessly arranged circles of a lighter shade, and bearing different designs. The wall is very simple. Metallic flowers conventionalized on a light terra cotta ground. The ceiling is in strong contrast, a lustrous blue green, set off here and there by crimson leaves. The design is exceedingly rich and elaborate.

THE DINING ROOM.

The "Velours" and Moras with which the Dining Room is decorated are particularly rich and elaborate, giving to this most important room the dignity and repose its character demands. The designs are in varying shades of brown and gold, with coppery and irridescent gleams. The chief section of the wall is the very broad frieze. The ground is light, warm brown, with wavering parallel lines. The whole effect is most ingenious and artistic in design, and shows to excellent advantage the rich effect obtained by our combinations of varying tones of gold and plain back-ground of simple color.

THE BED CHAMBER.

The delicacy and softness of color, and tone which the character of this room requires are qualities specially noticeable in the combination of our designs. Nothing rigid or formal is admissable in a chamber, neither are brilliant colors or marked designs to be desired. Everything should be mellow, informal, perhaps luxurious, certainly not florid or gorgeous; light soft colors in quiet combinations. Hangings with large indistinct figures, of furniture with delicate curves, soft fur rugs, and plenty of cushions. These are the things most to be sought for. A chamber should be restful in every way. The velours which cover the walls are admirably suited to their purpose. The general effect is of a luminous silvery hue. The combinations of colors is most satisfactory, rich but subdued, elaborate yet broad in effect. It would be hard to find an arrangement of papers more nearly successful, than the New Designs just opened out at the Peterborough Bookstore.

DINNER
is always a subject for sighs with a housekeeper and she often wishes that the law settled the question of "What shall we have for dinner," and prescribed certain dishes for certain days. Such a law would certainly save a great deal of worry and questioning to many tired women. But it is not such a difficult problem to solve after all especially in Peterborough, where we have such a good market, besides at China Hall you can secure full Dinner Sets that will grace any table for so little money that anyone can afford the outlay.

TURNBULL'S

The Flood of the Season's French and English Printed Calicoes is rolling in—white capped and aglow phosphorescent, color play. How the Priscellas of the past would joy to see them? Pretty as you have seen them, they were never so handsome before. Persian designs, leaves, buds, flowers, polka, dots, plain stripes, scrabbles and scrawls, angles and tangles. More than 300 different styles, small figures, large figures, and mourning designs, better printing was never done 'exquisite.' If you don't want to buy, don't pass the window or come in. Prices range from 5 to 15 cents.

The trouble with low grade Marseilles Bed Spreads has been loose threads at the back—face, all right, but you didn't like the fiddle-string arrangement at the back, needn't. Here are $2.50 Marseilles Bed Spreads, full size and handsome patterns, with backs firm and well finished. Look at this honey-comb quilt for $1, which needs no apology for either size or weight.

Flannelettes—what are they? are they all-wool? No they are mostly cotton, finished to imitate a Flannel, and especially adapted for childrens' dresses and ladies' wrappers. They consist of Cream Grounds, with pink, blue and cardinal Stripes, blue and white, pink and cream, pink and blue, and pink, cream and grey, some 18 patterns in all—the best quality being only 12½ cents a yard.

Opened out this week, a line of Linen Tablings, the maker of which is noted the world over. They are specially suited for every day wear—the warp is well twisted and they wash and iron well.

Before you hear from us again, I will have visited the wholesale markets where I will be on the look-out for Bargains for my Customers.

A NUMBER OF NEW BILLS INTRODUCED IN THE HOUSE.

Proposed Amendments to the Civil Service Act and to the Law of Conspiracy—Proceedings in the Senate.

OTTAWA, March 11.—In the House this afternoon half a dozen bills saw the light for the first time. Four of them are Government measures. The Postmaster-General sent up a bill to amend the Civil Service Act. It has for its object provisions that the salary of the clerk of the board of civil service examiners shall not exceed $700 per annum and that such examiner shall not be paid more than $400. This is a considerable reduction in the stipends of these gentlemen. The bill also provides that postoffice inspectors may be exempt from the provisions of the Civil Service Act, also in the postal service that the annual salaries of railway mail clerks shall be the same for night as for day work, and that each railway clerk may be paid a mileage rate of ¼ cent for day and 1 cent for night work. The salary of the postmaster at Toronto, the bill further provides, shall be increased from $3000 to $4000 and of Ottawa from $2400 to $2800. The Montreal postmaster receives $4000. The condition of Postmaster Patteson's increase is that the annual receipts of his office exceed $250,000. That in the inland revenue service the annual salaries of accountants shall range from $600 to $1400 and of special excisemen who are chief officers in charge of distilleries from $1400 to $1600.

Sir John Thompson sent up his bill to amend the Canadian Copyright Act. The bill is in line with the recommendations of the Canadian Copyright Association and provides that a foreign author must publish or republish his works in Canada within three months after their appearance and have them copyrighted. In default of this the Government can grant a license to Canadian houses to publish such works on the payment of 10 per cent. royalty to the authors.

Dr. Wilson of Elgin introduced a bill of considerable importance to members of trades unions. It is an amendment to the act respecting threats and intimidation (Chap. 173, R.S.C.). Sub-section 2 of section 13 of said act reads:

No prosecution shall be maintainable against any person for conspiracy in refusing to work with or for any employer or workman, or for doing any act or causing any act to be done for the purpose of a trade combination, unless such act is an offence punishable by statute.

Dr. Wilson's bill is an outgrowth of the late trouble in Bricklayers' Union No. 1, three of whose members were convicted of conspiracy in the Court of Sessions at Hamilton and the conviction was afterwards held to be good in an elaborate decision given last month at Osgoode Hall by Chief Justice Armour. The act of conspiracy consisted in the union passing a resolution that none of its members should work with a "scab" named Bascombe, who was superintending certain corporation work for Contractor Pirgot under the City Engineer. Bascombe was deprived of his means of livelihood by the action of the union and three of the members of No. 1 were convicted of conspiracy and heavily fined, the Chief Justice of the Queen's Bench subsequently holding the conviction to be good. The Doctor proposes to do away with the conspiracy clause under similar circumstances. His amendment proposes that if a trades union passes a resolution refusing to work with objectionable men or employers, and if the members act on such resolution, they may not be prosecuted for conspiracy.

There was a big question paper to-day. In answer to Mr. Mulock, the Minister of the Interior said the total amount of Northwest land scrip of all kinds outstanding was about $700,000. Mr. Carling told Sir Richard Cartwright that between July 1, 1888, and Feb. 1, 1889, $70,286 had been expended for all purposes on the experimental farm just outside this city. Mr. Dewdney informed Mr. Edgar that in future elections in the Northwest Territories would be by ballot.

Mr. McDonald of Nova Scotia had a lengthy question on the paper respecting the continued absence from duty of Mr. Justice James of the Supreme Court of that province. The Minister of Justice read a number of telegrams from the judge in question to the effect that he was a confirmed invalid and that he was doing what official duties his physicians would permit at his private residence at Dartmouth. Sir John Thompson also announced that he understood there was a remonstrance from the bar of Halifax against Mr. Justice James' absence and thus compelling judicial business in Nova Scotia.

It is said Mr. Justice James' condition is so serious that he may never be able to perform his full duties any more as judge of the Equity Court, and that he will be superannuated.

Mr. Charlton's resolution providing that the House of Commons should not sit after midnight was quietly dropped after a friendly talk across the floor between the leader of the Government and Mr. Laurier. Sir John Macdonald pointed out that while very late sessions were undesirable yet he did not think it was wise to pass such a dangerous resolution. "At my age," said Sir John, "I would sooner be in my bed at midnight than in my place in the House."

It is believed that arrangements are to be arrived at between the leaders to abolish peep-o'-day sessions except when important questions are before the House.

Nearly all of the balance of the sitting of the House was monopolized by the Nova Scotia members discussing railway matters in their province. The Nova Scotians, like many other people, suffer from "a long felt want," viz, a missing link in their railway system and they want it filled up. The missing link is from Digby to Annapolis, a distance of 18 miles. Nova Scotia sends men to Parliament who can talk and they made the fur fly for several hours. Beaker Kenny of Halifax in a vigorous speech on another alleged species of Nova Scotia's railway grievances said the Canadian Pacific Railway had broken its sacred agreement in connection with the "short line" to the seaboard.

The House had a lively talk for an hour over the permit system in the Northwest Territories. From remarks dropped by some of the members from the rolling prairies it would seem that permit or no permit there is plenty of 4 per cent. grog and even 40 rod in the territories.

The House adjourned at 12.25.

The Senate.

OTTAWA, March 11.—The Senate this afternoon discussed Mr. Girard's notice of motion to have brought down all the papers and answers in the possession of the Government in reference to the questions sent to the officers of the Hudson Bay Company missionaries, Arctic explorers and others by the committee appointed by the Senate last session to inquire as to the value of that part of the Dominion lying north of the Saskatchewan watershed and built by the undersigned. It is a very comfortable and substantial dwelling and was not erected cheaply for sale. It has two good wells and first class cistern. Rev. T. W. Jeffery's $1000 Suit Withdrawn —A Bigamist Punished.

TORONTO, March 12.—Rev. T. W. Jeffery has withdrawn the suit for $1000 which was pending against Mr. C. R. S. Dinnick, as representing the trustees. The latter will pay over the amount without litigation, and both sides will adjust their claims amicably.

The death is announced at the residence of her son, Richard L. Denison, in the 71st year of her age, of the widow of Col. Richard L. Denison, and aunt of Lieut.-Col. George T. Denison, Police Magistrate, and Lieut.-Col. Fred. C. Denison, M. P.

The Police Magistrate yesterday sent Mary Sullivan to the Mercer for six months for theft of various articles from the Eye and Ear Infirmary. James Alexander Irwin was committed for 15 months for bigamy. He married a woman at Cressmore, in the county of Simcoe last December, his former wife, whom he married in 1885 at Berkeley-street Methodist Church, being still alive. For borrowing a coat, ostensibly to get married in, but really to pawn for drink, Albert Lee will spend 60 days in jail.

At the morgue yesterday afternoon Coroner Duncan held an inquest on the body of James Kirk who was killed at Greenwood's side line Saturday night. The jury found a verdict of accidental death caused by being struck by an engine, no blame being attached to the railway company.

At the General Sessions yesterday Henry W. Simmons was tried and acquitted on the charge of stealing $20 from the trunk of Jas. Powers at 13 Temperance-street. He has already pleaded guilty to other charges of a similar nature and there are some others that will not be pressed against him. One of the witnesses against him was a girl named Rose Manning, who said she knew the prisoner, as she was engaged to be married to him after three days' acquaintance and that just after they got the marriage license Simmons was arrested.

At the meeting of the Board of Works yesterday Ald. Galbraith and Woods brought up the question of the two men. Mathew Brian and James Kirk, who had been killed by the cars at the Greenwood crossing, within the past four days. Ald. Galbraith stated that a movement was on foot to have the Board of Works take action in the matter. He had brought before the Board the great necessity of seeing the public property protected at these railroad crossings. There had been deputations, correspondence and promises, but nothing had been done and lives continued to be sacrificed. He moved that a deputation go down to Local Superintendent Wragge and demand that something be done to mend this sad state of affairs. Ald. Wood for the extreme west coincided with Ald. Galbraith. It was determined that the whole board would seek out the superintendent in a body as soon as possible and get him to answer yes or no whether the G.T.R. will take any action or not.

SEVEN ATTEMPTS AT SUICIDE.

Death Was Not For That Disconsolate Colored Girl.

ATLANTA, March 11.—Sallie Solomon, a mulatto girl, made seven attempts at suicide to-day. She learned that a man with whom she had been living had died in Birmingham and she made an effort to raise money and go and bury him. She could not do this and became desperate. She made a break for a well, going head foremost into the opening, which was too small, and neighbors caught her.

Half an hour later she tied a rope around her neck, tied the other end over a beam, kicked a chair from under her and when found she was unconscious, but was resuscitated. She made three other attempts to drown herself in the well, failing each time. Once more she tried to hang herself, but a policeman saved her. Then a dozen neighbors were placed as a watch over her. While they were all in the room, she grabbed a lamp from the mantel piece, broke it over her own head and then jumped headlong into an open fireplace. She was pulled out before any serious damage was done and was locked up.

THE TRUNK IN HARD LUCK

A MISHAP TO THE MONTREAL EXPRESS NEAR LUCAN.

Two Passenger Cars Rolled Down an 18-foot Embankment—What a Broken Rail Did—No Lives Lost.

LUCAN, March 11.—The Grand Trunk, to say the least, is in hard luck. A week ago last Wednesday all Ontario was startled by the news of the terrible disaster at St. George. The excitement had not subsided when there was flashed over the wires the intelligence of the fatal collision at Paris. To-day rounds up the chapter of accidents with a mishap which occurred near here at 5 o'clock this morning.

The Montreal express that left Detroit last night made fast time without mishap until it had reached a point one and a half miles west of this village. Here a broken rail blocked the way. The locomotive passed over the obstacle safely, as did also the baggage car and smoker, but the two passenger cars left the track and rolled down the eighteen foot embankment. The Pullman coaches on the rear end of the train remained on the track. The passengers in the derailed cars were terribly frightened, and filled the air with their lamentations. To release them from their imprisonment was a work that occupied forty minutes, and when all were free the master roll showed these victims:

James Wray, Grand Trunk bridgeman at Point Edward, slight scalp wound, ankle badly cut and otherwise shaken up.

Edwin Houghton of Baird's Dramatic Company, foot crushed and slight bruises on body.

Mrs. James B. Rowland of Baird's Dramatic Company, head bruised and arm hurt.

Another lady who is a member of the dramatic company was slightly injured, but the rest of the passengers in the two cars were more frightened than hurt.

Barrister W. G. Murdoch of Toronto was a passenger on the unlucky train. He was in the rear sleeper when he was aroused by the lurching and bumping of the car. When he got out of the car the passengers in the two coaches that had left the track were crawling out. In the rear sleeper there were six passengers, nine in the first sleeper, eleven in the coach that rolled down the embankment and twenty in the coach that lodged on the side of the track and pulled the front end of the first sleeper off the track. Of the eleven passengers in the coach that rolled down the embankment, which was 18 feet high, eight were members of the Baird Dramatic Co., who were taken on board at Parkhill. Edwin Houghton, a member of the company, was thrown across the car as it rolled down the embankment, and had one of his feet badly crushed. The injured member was caught in such a position that the rescuers had to cut and saw through a mass of timber to release him from his painful position. Mrs. J. H. Rowland, also a member of the Baird Company, sustained severe bruises about the head and arms. Little Maudie Baird, daughter of R. L. Baird of Toronto, the proprietor of the show, was sitting at the side of Mrs. Rowland, but escaped injury.

After the passengers were all rescued the engineer proceeded to Stratford and returned with extra coaches in which the passengers were brought on to Toronto. The broken rail that caused the wreck was ground almost into atoms. Mr. Murdoch has a specimen of the rail, about the size of a quail's egg, which he is keeping as a souvenir of the occasion.

James E. Steen, the editor of The Winnipeg Commercial, was a passenger on the train. He says he wasn't scared at all, but came away with the impression that every one else was. "The first man I saw when I came out of the sleeper," said Mr. Steen, "was a big burly fellow who was smothered in a fur coat. He had the physique of a Hercules and the intellect of a goat. He was making more noise than all of the ladies on the train. The porter pulled him up on to the platform of the sleeper and asked him if he was hurt. 'Am I hurt?' he exclaimed, 'Great Heavens, man, I'm killed!' I looked expecting to see blood running, but he didn't have a scratch on him. Still he may die of fright. The wounded stood it finely.

"Houghton laughed over his crushed foot as though it were a distinction that could not be enjoyed by everyone. He will probably try to make the G.T.R. folks pay for his laugh. The wonder is, though, that all the passengers in the first coach were not killed."

MAUCH CHUNK, Pa., March 11.—The trial of Engineers Cook and Major and Flagman Hannigan, the Lehigh Valley employes charged with having caused the Mud Run disaster on Oct. 10 by which 60 lives were lost and many persons injured, was commenced here to-day. The first case called was that of Engineer Cook.

Fatality on the Reading.

READING, Pa., March 11.—The locomotive of a freight train on the Reading Railroad ran off the track at St. Nicholas yesterday. The engine and twelve cars were wrecked. Benjamin Walker, the fireman, was killed, and Conductor John Gilkner has died from his injuries. A brakeman had his shoulder broken.

CUTTING DOWN EXPENSES.

The Michigan Central Lops Off About 60 Employes.

ST. THOMAS, March 11.—An order has been issued to reduce expenses 10 per cent. in all departments of the Michigan Central Railway and is being enforced on this division. The services of 50 section men have been dispensed with and 20 or 40 men in the car shops have been laid off. A number of operators have been laid off, and in many cases the agents are obliged to perform the duties.

The Interstate Commerce Commission.

WASHINGTON, March 11.—The Interstate Commerce Commission has issued an order which says that all advances and reductions in joint rates, fares and charges shown upon joint tariffs established by common carriers shall be made public. Every advance or reduction shall be plainly printed in large type, two copies of which shall be posted in two public and conspicuous places in every depot, station or office of such carrier where passengers or freight are received for transportation, in such form that they can be conveniently inspected by the public. Such schedules shall be posted ten days prior to the taking effect of any advance and three days prior to the taking effect of any reduction in rates. The railways in the trunk line association have been notified to appear before the Interstate Commerce Commission at Washington on March 16 for the purpose of showing what their expert rates are, and how made and in what manner they are published.

Educational Matters.

Special Meeting of the School Board—No Salaries Raised Yet—A Deputation to Lindsay—Other Matters of Interest.

Previous to the meeting of the Board of Education Monday night the committee on appointments, consisting of the whole Board, met to consider the question of increasing the salaries of teachers and filling up a vacancy. Their report was presented later.

The Board meeting was presided over by Mr. Stevenson and there were present Messrs. O'Meara, Burnham, English, Weir, Hughes, Wrightson, Hamilton, McWilliams, Deane, Dumble and Hill.

Mr. John Carbery, secretary of the Separate School Board, notified the Board that Mr. John O'Meara had been reappointed High School trustee by them.

The town clerk sent in a formal notification of the appointment of Messrs. P. Hamilton and Jas. Kendry as trustees for the town.

The following fees were reported as received during February:—Collegiate Institute, $302.50; public schools, $7.85.

The following reports of school attendance in February were read:—

	No. on Roll	Av. Att.
Collegiate Institute	137	111
Central School	925	849
South Ward School	270	235
West Ward School	333	309

The following accounts were referred to the Finance Committee:—Gas Company, $8 75; Review, printing account, $15 97; Salisbury Bros., $13.40.

The Secretary of the Department notified the Board that the annual High School grant of $976.12 had been made.

FINANCE.

Dr. Burnham presented the report of the Finance Committee, recommending payment of Mr. W. H. Moore's account; also that Mr. Robertson's (Times) account be paid when certified to by the Chairman of the Board, as the work was said to have been ordered by him; the committee cannot recommend the payment of the account of the Messrs' estate, as it was not ordered by the proper committee.

The report was adopted.

SALARIES AND APPOINTMENTS.

The following report was read and adopted:—

The Committee on Appointments beg to report that they recommend that Miss Sim be appointed to the room recently taught by Miss Ernest, at a salary of $220 per annum; to be computed from the 19th day of March, 1889. That Miss Rutherford be appointed to the room now taught by Miss Sim, at a salary of $225 per annum, to be computed from 19th March, 1889.

The Committee report that Miss Sim receives the promotion on the ground of seniority in the service of the Board.

Your Committee further report that they are unable at present to deal with the question of salaries and ask leave to report at the next regular meeting of the Board.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

D. W. DUMBLE,
Chairman.

SCHOOL SUPPLIES.

Mr. McWilliams presented the report of the School Supervision Committee, recommending that school supplies be awarded to the following firms which had tendered, each receiving the contract for that portion for which they had tendered lowest:—Messrs. Lee & Thompson, Saftsbury & Bro., and J. E. Stratton.

There was some discussion as to the legality of making a contract with Mr. Stratton while he was a member of the Board, but Mr. Dumble said that Mr. Stratton in making the tender had virtually declared that he did not intend to remain a member of the Board, but as the meeting had been called on such short notice he probably had not time to send in his resignation. The report was adopted.

A DEPUTATION.

Mr. DUMBLE proposed that before the new north ward school be built the Board, or a portion of it should visit Lindsay Collegiate Institute and inspect the Samuel Dowd system of heat in use there, so that the best heating apparatus may be procured for new schools which may be erected here. He moved that a committee composed of Dr. Burnham, Messrs. English, Wrightson, Deane, Rutherford, Dumble and Stevenson, visit Lindsay on Tuesday of next week for this purpose.

The motion was adopted after a little discussion.

The Board then adjourned.

Wool and Other Duties.

The following appears in the daily Globe:

TO THE EDITOR:—Your correspondent, Mr. Hallam, in criticising Mr. Clarton's figures about the duty on 50,000 lbs. of wool, could not charge Mr. Clarton with overstating the amount lost by the farmers, as it was just ten times as much as Mr. Clarton stated. Now it does not matter what the price is in the Boston market for Canadian wool; if this wool was bought by the Peterborough merchant for that market as a safe figure—in view of the ten cents per lb. duty—the farmers from whom it was purchased were the parties out of whose pockets we might say the $5,000 came that was paid the Customs on the entry of his large shipment—wherever the duty was collected—and this was what Mr. Clarton was desirous of showing, and the benefit the farmers would derive from the sale of wool and almost everything else they have to market, if the trade was free between the two countries.

Mr. Hallam states that there is a great deal of nonsense talked about these matters, as his opinion, and proceeds to quote hay at $6 per ton 25 miles out of Detroit, while it is $20 per ton in Toronto. This, then, is rather fortunate, as this country has to import hay this year on account of an exceedingly short crop. Mr. Hallam then asks, What would farmers gain, under these circumstances, by Free Trade?

Now this ground has been gone over so often that I am quite sure Mr. Hallam must be familiar with the reasons set forth to show the advantages that Free Trade would secure, not only the farmers, but to the lumberman and the fishing and mining interests, therefore it is not necessary to throw a "flood of light" any more on this topic.

But we will just refer, en passant, to the fact that a township of Hope farmer and his sons, working their estate on the co-operative principle, drew in recently their last year's crop of barley, comprising 4,000 bushels, and upon this one transaction this one firm of farmers—all good Conservatives—would have realized $400 more if the trade had been free between the two countries than what they obtained, as the price of barley here is regulated by the markets in Oswego, Buffalo, Cleveland, etc., after deducting the duty, freight, commission, etc.

An item in the trade returns struck my attention, to wit, that in the face of a fifteen-cent duty per bushel on potatoes, about, I think, $130,000 worth had been exported to the United States the last year. Now, $130,000 would buy over 430,000 bushels of potatoes at say thirty cents per bushel, and a duty of fifteen cents on this quantity, paid to the American Customs, would be, say, $64,000 taken out of the farmers, and very likely a large part of this produce was sent to Detroit, which is a great distributing depot for potatoes.

Of the five millions or more paid into the United States Customs in order to get our produce into their markets, the lumbermen probably pay twenty per cent., and all this for the benefit of the manufacturers.

But it is not only on what we have to sell that the drawback applies, but on what we might produce and sell if the drawback was removed.

I am told that out on the Kingston & Pembroke railway, through the lumber regions, scores of tons of ore that have been mined are lying at an outlay for shipment, because of the 75 cents duty on the other side. What an industry would spring up in the mining of this ore if free ingress was secured to the natural market. With a demand and supply unlimited employment might be given to thousands of men, making a home market for a large amount of farm produce and merchandise, while the lines of transit would be teeming with freight. Yet some people will talk of the nonsense of Free Trade theories. Verily the nonsense appears to me to creep out on the other side.

ONTARIO LEGISLATURE.

Debate Resumed Yesterday the Teaching of French in Public Schools.

TORONTO, March 12.—In the Local House Mr. Awrey, in resuming the debate upon Mr. Ouimet's motion regarding the teaching of French in public schools, regretted that so dangerous an element as this should have been introduced into our politics. Mr. Meredith had asserted that he expected to derive no political capital from the position he had taken, but perhaps he had utilized this as a last chance to bring his party into place and power. In the past 16 years he had been sitting in the chamber, and if there be a wrong, if it was a wrong that the French and German schools should be treated with consideration, then Mr. Meredith had been culpably negligent of his duty in the past. Mr. Awrey proceeded to demonstrate how the French and English grammars in the public schools in question were being superseded by the English grammar. Continuing, Mr. Awrey said: "The member from South Durham made a charge the other day that the catechism was used as one of the text books in the school of L'Orignal. I had doubts them and I believe that honorable gentlemen on this side of the House had doubts as to whether the informations he had received was correct. I therefore took the trouble to find out if it was correct and I hold in my hands a telegram from the chairman of the school board of L'Orignal, which reads:

Catechism used twice a week, fifteen minutes each time, not as text book, simply religious instruction, under regulations. [Applause.]

Mr. E. F. Clarke followed Mr. Awrey. The direction, the control and the regulation to educational matters he believed to be the most important duty and the most sacred trust committed by the people to those who represented them. He would place himself on record against and protest against any change or innovation that might hamper the usefulness or mar the efficiency of these educational institutions. He had not the privilege of attending school on this side of the Atlantic, and was therefore perhaps not as thoroughly acquainted with the curriculum and methods of instruction as were those Canadian-born; but he trusted that this disability would not make him less cautious for the prosperity and efficiency of our public schools.

He regretted exceedingly that all the children of Ontario of all creeds and of all nationalities were not educated at the same schools. The system under which our children are being educated did not in his judgment combine the best possible means of encouraging that harmony so essential to the progress of our institutions and so necessary to the welfare of our country. Reference had been made to the school system of our neighbors to the south and their liberality in permitting the teaching of a foreign language in the schools. But the instruction generally imparted in those schools was under special circumstances and was imparted as a special subject. He believed that one of the prime factors in the prosperity of the institutions to the south of us was the determination of the people of the United States that the language of their schools should be the English language and that the children attending those schools should be taught and educated in the English language. Another reason was that they had refused to grant money to aid or endow sectarian schools.

Mr. Balfour, as a representative of a constituency partly English partly French, said he had heard no word of complaint. He therefore thought it ill-became gentlemen on the floor of the House to bring up a question of which they had no practical knowledge. He wanted to know how French children could be instructed without the medium of the French language. In Essex, children learn only the French language in their homes and their parents send them to school to learn English. But how could they learn English without a thorough knowledge of their own tongue? Such a thing would not be expected of an English child learning French.

The French children in the county of which he was speaking were all acquiring a knowledge of English. Mr. Balfour repeated that the only member on the Opposition side who had any experience of a French-Canadian constituency was absent from his place. He believed there was a good deal more of politics behind the attack than any desire to make this an English-speaking province. He hoped that the French-Canadians who were going southward to the United States would rather come to Ontario and we should be glad to welcome them.

Mr. H. E. Clarke said he learned for the first time that there are schools not only in Russell and Prescott, but also in Essex and Simcoe, and perhaps some other northern counties where French was and is now taught to the exclusion of English. The Hon. Mr. Ross had misrepresented the gentlemen of the Opposition when he charged them with making an attack upon the French-Canadian race. If there were any attack it was rather upon the hon. gentleman's administration.

Mr. Clarke asked: "Have we a number of our common schools run by the Separate School party? There was no getting over the fact that the Protestants support the public schools. But," asked he, "do we not permit the existence of the Catholic Separate Schools, which some will deny were detrimental to the public school system?" When further encouragements were made they should not be tolerated.

Mr. Murray next took part in the discussion and referred to a charge made from the pulpit that the Roman Catholic Church was assisting French Catholics in Quebec to purchase lands owned by Protestants, and also that the church aided French Catholics to settle and purchase lands in Renfrew. "I will give," said Mr. Murray, "$100 to the person who can prove that any Frenchman was assisted with money or means to buy a piece of property in the County of Renfrew."

Mr. Davis continued the debate, which was adjourned at 6 p.m.

In the evening the mover, Mr. Craig, continued the discussion. Mr. Ross followed and gave his views from a German standpoint. In this Province he believed that a larger German than French element existed. Though a German by birth he was a British subject and the Frenchman who came to Ontario would have to be a British subject also. "I am," he said, "surprised that the French are preferred before us. Are they better looking than we are? Are they much nicer than we are?" [Laughter.]

Mr. Pacaud following made his first speech this session.

The Commissioner of Public Works was next on his feet. He gave various reasons to show that this question had not been brought up on a previous occasion by gentlemen opposite on account of political reasons.

The discussion was continued by Mr. French and Mr. Smith (East York). The motion was at length passed and the House adjourned at 11 p.m.

A Clever Forger Nabbed.

MONTREAL, March 9.—Perhaps the sharpest and most successful forger who ever came to Canada was arrested this afternoon. He goes under some seventy aliases, one of them being James Taylor and another Samuel Oakley. His field of operation has included nearly every State in the Union. He managed to introduce himself into church societies, took charge of Sunday schools, joined actively in Young Men's Christian Associations and thus gained the confidence of the upper thousand in large cities. With this confidence to back him he forged cheques on new and wealthy friends, and after having them cashed, quietly took himself to other pastures. This has been going on the last five years, and though most strenuous efforts have been made by the police he always managed to elude them until he pocketed by the trade some $60,000. Last week a private detective here was notified of the man's probable arrival in Canada, and this morning he succeeded in finding him in one of the best hotels in the city, where he posed for the last fifteen days as a nabob whose only occupation seemed to be to make himself agreeable to everyone around him and to try to introduce himself into good families here.

A Serious Accident.

ST. THOMAS, March 10.—While Mrs. John Campbell was attempting to replace a leg under the stove it tumbled over, pinning her to the floor and rendering her unconscious. When she recovered her senses the stove was still across her body, which had been painfully burned by the hot metal. She remained pinned to the floor for ten or eleven hours, or until nearly 7 o'clock next morning, when a neighbor, who had been alarmed by her cries, burst in the door and rescued her. A doctor was summoned and will endeavor to save the patient, although she is terribly injured.

Piles! Piles! Itching Piles.

SYMPTOMS—Moisture, intense itching and stinging, most at night, worse by scratching. If allowed to continue tumors form, which often bleed and ulcerate, becoming very sore. SWAYNE'S OINTMENT stops the itching and bleeding, heals ulceration, and in most cases removes the tumors. At druggists, or by mail, for 50 cents. Dr. Swayne & Son, Phila'delphia. Partly Gave Up.

"In the year 1885 I coughed for six months, and having unsuccessfully tried many remedies, I partly gave up, thinking I had consumption. At last I tried Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam, less than one bottle of which cured me, leaving me as well as ever I was." Henry W. Carse, Wabash, Ont. 2w10d.

The Loss of the Hair

Is a great misfortune and the sight of a bald head should be a warning to you to take the best possible care of your hair. A little of Dr. Dorenwend's "Hair Magic" used occasionally will prevent all chances of its falling out or turning gray, and will remove all traces of dandruff. Every druggist has it in stock. Ask for it. dw

Health Failing Fast.

"I was swollen from head to foot from dropsy of six months' standing, and my health was failing fast, but after taking one bottle of Burdock Blood Bitters I am quite well, and think there is no medicine equal to B. B. B., and to it I remain a true friend." Joseph Heric, Linwood, Ont. 2w10d

Nothing Like It.

"I was troubled with liver complaint for a good many years, but was cured by one bottle of Burdock Blood Bitters. I have never found any medicine to help me like B. B. B., in fact one bottle made a complete cure." W. J. Best, Parkhill, Ont. 2w10d

Common Croup

is often fatal when not remedied in time. Leslie B. Nicholson, 19 Wellesley avenue, Toronto, says:—"As a quick cure for croup, colds, sore throat, chilblains, etc., I can recommend Hagyard's Yellow Oil." It is a sure cure. Directions accompany each bottle. 2w10d are seen on the heads of all who use

GREAT GERMAN

HAIR MAGIC.

The equal of this great preparation is yet to be found. It is an unfailing Restorer for grey hair—it stops all falling out of the hair—it removes all dandruff and keeps the scalp clean. On bald heads (if there are but the faintest traces of roots) the Magic will produce a fine growth. Will you try it? Or will you let your hair go, and become prematurely old? What do you say? All druggists every where have it for sale. Ask for it. Do not let the druggist tell you he has something just as good—many have dead stock of other hair tonics on hand and try to above them off in this way.

See that each bottle bears seal and signature:

The work done here will be as much as that performed at all stations between Midland and Peterborough put together. The Midland trains will have the right of way as usual."

A Compliment to the Press.

Before beginning his address at the services in the George street church last night, Rev. Mr. Crossley stated that he was greatly pleased with the way in which the Peterborough papers had reported the meetings. He said it had never been done as well in any other place in which they had labored as evangelists, and he took the opportunity to express his most cordial thanks to the newspapers. He urged the people to buy copies of the newspapers to send to their friends as it might be the means of awakening some soul to a realization of its sin. Mr. Crossley related an instance of one conversion through a newspaper report.

For the Lumber Camps.

The scene around the old Stewart House this forenoon reminded citizens of "old times" in Peterborough, when the town was alive at certain seasons of the year with shantymen and their teams, bound for the lumber camps in the north. A crowd of two or three hundred men swarmed about the old Stewart House this forenoon, and about 40 or 50 left on sleighs for the Scott timber limits, over which litigation has just been concluded. Messrs. McWilliams and Hazlitt have been hiring up all the men they could engage for chopping in the woods, and as the limits border on the river the timber can be put in the water as fast as cut. In this way a large quantity can be cut during the balance of the season.

Off for British Columbia.

Peterborough is about to lose one of its best citizens and most skilled mechanics, Mr. Wm. Hickey, of the Wm. Hamilton Manufacturing Company's works. Mr. Hickey leaves in a week or so for British Columbia, where he will enter into the manufacture of machinery with Mr. Ernest McFarlane, of Dundas. The latter was proprietor of a machine shop in Dundas, and will remove the plant to Victoria, where he and Mr. Hickey will run a partnership business. Mr. Hickey is probably the most valued mechanic in the employment of the Wm. Hamilton Manufacturing Company, while as a citizen he is greatly esteemed. His friends will wish him every success in his new venture.

There's Many a Slip.

The opera house audience last night was minus one young couple who had made arrangements to attend the performance of "Held by the Enemy." Saturday night a young man engaged his best girl for the occasion, but on Sunday night the young lady in question was converted along with a number of others at the evangelistic meeting in the George street church. The next day she sent her beau a note breaking off her engagement to go to the show. The young man, it is said, was so disgusted with what appeared to him, her fickle conduct that he went down street and instead of going to the opera house he sought to forget his sorrow in a 5-cent Habana.

Almost a Fire.

Ashburnham narrowly escaped another visitation by fire last night. Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Rooney were spending the evening with friends, and Mr. Rooney left for home about an hour ahead of his wife to start the fires, afterwards coming over town for a few minutes on business. On returning home Mr. and Mrs. Rooney found their sitting room ablaze. The flames were speedily extinguished, when it was found the table was destroyed and a large hole had been burned in the wainscotting, besides a considerable damage caused by smoke. Had they not arrived just in time the whole house would have burned. The lamp was left sitting on the table, but though blackened by smoke it fortunately did not explode. Mr. Rooney thinks he must have thrown a match amongst some papers on the table when he lit the lamp; that is the only way in which he can account for the fire.

Held by The Enemy.

This play was produced at the opera house last night before a fair audience. It gave entire satisfaction, though perhaps some of the scenes were trying upon weak nerves. The play is a strong, military one, the incidents surrounded with all the glare and clamor of deadly engagement, and the climaxes are thrilling enough. The last act, however, deals with engagements of a different sort, but of even greater intensity than the more sanguinary affairs that preceded. Two pairs of lovers have to make up their minds whether they shall be happy or not, and their sentimental side of the performance occupies the whole act. The thing was over done somewhat, rendering wearisome and palling what was intended to be a bright and touching termination to a rather stormy passage in the lives of the heroes and heroines. Very little of the company's scenery could be utilized, so that the performance lost some of its strength. The bombardment and the imitation clattering of a horse's hoofs on a hard road were novel effects. On the whole the performance was a good one, the best that has been given in Peterborough for some time. The leading male characters were all well taken, the "Col. Prescott" of John E. Kellerd perhaps the most successfully of any. The ladies in the play had of necessity a secondary part, but they were all good actresses.

Schiverea in Picton.

Evangelist Schiverea is now holding forth in Picton. The Times of that town gives an extended report of his meetings, which are attended by thousands and are evidently being productive of great good. He is announced as F. Schiverea, O O.F.C.—"Out and out for Christ." A writer in the Times says:—"After all the good things we have heard about Mr. Schiverea, I think most of us were preparing for a disappointment. We were prepared for the exercise of Christian charity in so far as he did not come up to our ideal, and we thought possibly, by "forgetting the things which are behind," viz., the services of the beloved evangelists, Crossley and Hunter we might be able to love this Christian brother with such a foreign name, but we were not at all prepared for the unconditional surrender that took place at the very first service. After his devotion to God, Mr. Schiverea's chief characteristic is an utter disregard for a good opinion of man, either saint or sinner, hence his wondrous faithfulness. Though not a professed vocalist he has a good and powerful voice and he makes every song a sermon, and every praise service a means of grace When singing or preaching his face is a study expressing every emotion as forcibly as his words. At times he is severe, in look and tone, especially when denouncing the inconsistencies of professing Christians; but when speaking of the love and suffering of Christ we have observed a look of tenderness that seems more than human. We have learned that in the summer months this earnest man of God has a "Bible-Wagon" from which he distributes Bibles and Christian literature, and proclaims the gospel on the streets of Brooklyn, Jersey city, and other cities of the United States."

SHAVED TO THE BONE! A mere skeleton left of profit on teas at M. R. Kidd's.

A Bundle of Blunders.

Long before the time the George street church was filled last night. The vast audience was well repaid by listening to the most effective and appropriate sermon of the series. Mr. Hunter read the 121st Psalm, making, as usual, running comments thereon. He spoke of the foolishness of people going back in their minds and bringing up old sins which Christ has covered up and remembers no longer against them. He advised all those who were members of the church and living in sin to come out and publicly confess their sinfulness. The speaker urged the sinners to think of God as their abiding place and shelter.

Mr. Crossley took as his text the 10th verse of the ninth Psalm of David, "They that know Thy name shall put their trust in Thee." The speaker said he wanted to mention some of the blunders of to-day.

Persons had a wrong idea of faith, and had how to get it. There was nothing mysterious about faith as many believed. It was a natural gift, and not a special one; as eyesight was to the body, so was faith to the soul. Before putting our trust in a human being we did two things. First we made enquiry concerning him, and, secondly, we obtained a personal interview. These were the two things that the sinner should do before putting his trust in Christ. Prayer was obtaining a personal interview with Christ. The preacher urged on all seekers not to try to work up faith or dispel doubt, but to just think of God as forming a partnership with them.

As to the sin of unbelief, what was that sin? It was, the speaker said, a sin of heart. "He that believeth hath the witness in Himself, but he that believeth not hath made God a liar, because he believeth not the record that God hath made of His son." By unbelief we virtually, though not admittedly, made God a liar.

As to the power of God's grace, Christ says:—"My grace is sufficient for thee." What the Lord could do for St. Paul, He could do for all.

Fear of bringing disgrace on the cause of Christ. The speaker expressed great sympathy for this class of blunderers. He instanced his brother, who was an eminently moral man and supporter of the church of God, and who was drowned at forty three, not having given his heart to God, simply because he was afraid in doing so he might bring disgrace on the cause of Christ. "I have great sympathy," said the preacher, "for him who despises the hypocrite." Such an individual was the very one who will never disgrace the cause of Christ.

As to God himself:—Many think of God as an abstraction and not as a person. "He is just as much a person as the speaker." One individual did not see another but the house in which he dwelt. In death we saw as much of a corpse as we did when it was alive. The personality of man was no more seen than that of God.

Some had a harsh view of Him. Many thought of God as a severe taskmaster instead of as a loving Saviour. Many very wrongly pictured to themselves God as a harsh judge wanting to punish and Christ as pleading for the averting of His wrath.

Some thinks of Him as do the Heathens. Many had two or three kinds of gods, people sometimes thought of Father Son and Holy Ghost as three different persons. They thought that the Father loved us because Jesus came, when it should be that Jesus came because the Father loved us. In the parable of the fig tree, the evangelist said he had heard a preacher who left the impression with his hearers that God was the destroyer and only spared through the advocacy of Christ. This was, the speaker asserted, very wrong. The Father loved us as Christ himself. There was no feeling in the heart of the Father different from the feelings of Christ. We read of Him as "God is love" and "God manifest in the flesh." A young lady was instanced who said that she loved Christ but was afraid of God. This was very wrong; Christ said to Philip "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father."

NOTES.

Mr. Hunter cordially thanked the papers of the town for the excellent reports of the services they give. Mr. Crossley instanced his brother, who was converted by reading a reported sermon of his preached in Ottawa.

About 100 penitents came forward last night, mostly young people, who are giving their hearts to Christ on all sides.

This afternoon from three to four a meeting will be held in the Ashburnham church. To-night a song sermon will be preached.

On the platform last night besides the resident ministers were Rev. Messrs. Greatrix, of South Cavan, and F. McAmmond, B.A., of Fenelon Falls. Nearly all the Methodist ministers of the district are expected to-night.

News Nuggets.

A Detective's Dilemma.

Cornelius Price, the Tacoma detective, whose work among the opium smugglers of Puget sound is well known, can stand on Market street in the rain longer, and tell longer, more probable and more interesting stories than any man in San Francisco.

"Did you ever hear that I had served my time in the chain gang?" he inquired of Detective Handley one day last week. "No? Well, I'll give it to you so that you will get it straight. It was when these men were running in so much of their opium all around the sound that I finally located some of the workers at a little landing about twenty miles from Tacoma, where there are about a dozen houses. My wife was there at the time visiting friends, but I did not have time to apprise her of my coming. I made myself up as the seediest kind of a tramp, and footed it into this little place just at dusk, and nearly the first person I met was my wife. I forgot about my disguise and the effect it might have upon her; so I braced up, and, taking her by the arm, said, 'Hello, my dear!'

"When she gave a jump and screamed I thought I had simply startled her by speaking suddenly when she wasn't expecting it, so I started to take her arm again, and bless me if she didn't go up the street screaming at every step. About that time the constable grabbed me for insulting ladies on the street, but when my wife declined to appear and prosecute they put an additional charge of vagrancy against me and locked me up in a little 'calaboose.' Next day I was found guilty and sentenced to eight days in the chain gang with no alternative, and I didn't dare let the officials know who I was, because I had reason to believe they were concerned in the smuggling operations. I sweated it out breaking rock on the road. But I got even. The justice of the peace and constable are pegging shoes in the territorial prison now for smuggling."—San Francisco Examiner.

"A Man" in Capsule.

The problem of being able to "see a man" during the play without being obliged to walk on the toes of half a dozen gentlemen, and, perchance, on the dresses of several ladies, has been solved. Those to whom the drink in the entr'act is an essential part of their enjoyment of a performance can now, without leaving their seats, indulge in their libations. A clever Boston chemist has struck on the idea of having whisky handy and other strong liquors put up in gelatine capsules like those used in administering nauseous medicines, only considerably larger. The capsules are colored so as to resemble large hot house grapes. They are easily broken in the mouth and the contents swallowed without attracting attention. The capsules are sold in boxes containing a dozen each. The box is of convenient size for the pocket, and the quantity of liquor contained in the capsules sufficient to make the ordinary man feel comfortably happy by the time the curtain falls on the last act.

The idea is not altogether an original one. About two years ago similar capsules were sold in all the leading drug stores in this city, but instead of being gelatine the capsule was of very thin rubber. It was soon found that the rubber conveyed the reverse of a pleasant taste to the liquors, and they rapidly went out of fashion. The new gelatine capsule imparts no flavor whatever to the liquor, and it promises soon to become a boon to the gentleman seated in the middle of a row of orchestra chairs, and to earn for its inventor the gratitude of the ladies, whose plaints over their ruined dresses and crushed hats lately filled so many columns in the papers.—New York Graphic.

An Old Young Man.

One of the pleasantest old young men of Washington is Harvey M. Watterson, the father of Henry Watterson. Imagine to yourself a tall and slightly built man, with a large head of gray hair, a white beard falling over his chest, and a pair of the brightest and kindest blue eyes you will find anywhere. Imagine this man to be 75 years old, but at the same time to move about with as firm a step as though he was but 35. Listen to his voice, and it comes forth in strong chest tones. Talk to him and he will tell you that he feels younger as the years grow older, and that he hopes to last for many years yet.

Said Mr. Watterson once in response to a question:

"The first sign of a man's failing faculties is seen in his voice. I can go on the street and speak in such tones as can be heard 300 yards away. I spend my winters in Washington and my summers at Louisville, and while there I look over the exchanges in the newspaper office and scan about fifty papers a day. I am glad that I am alive, and I feel that my good health at this age is due to temperance and in not allowing myself to be worried about anything. I am very careful of my eating, and I have not had three unhappy hours from worry in my whole life. When I have stubbed my toe I have not cursed the universe because of my carelessness, but thanked the Lord that I did not break my neck."—Chicago Herald.

And He Still Has Hope.

"I have been shipwrecked, been baked in a railroad accident and fired out of a foundry window by a boiler explosion. I was shot in the neck at Gettysburg, suffered starvation in Libby prison, fell overboard from a transport off Charleston, and left four of my fingers in the mouth of a shark. I had my right arm broken in two places in a New York riot, and stood on a barrel with a halter round my neck in a southern town at the outbreak of the great rebellion from sunrise to sunset. I was buried under the ruins of a building in San Francisco during an earthquake and dug out after fifty hours of imprisonment, I have been shot at three times, twice by lunatics and once by a highwayman. I was buried two days by a gas explosion in a mine, and narrowly escaped lynching last year in Arizona, through mistaken identity. And though I am over 50, and have nearly lost the use of my right leg, have just had, as I understand, all my property, on which there was no insurance, destroyed by fire in a western town; and the doctor in New York to whom I went last week for an examination assures me that I will soon be ridden from rheumatism; nevertheless," he added cheerfully, "while I undoubtedly have met some obstacles in the past, I still refuse to believe that luck is against me."—Daylight Land.

LONDON, March 11.—Mr. Macdonald, the manager of The Times, has been made the scapegoat of that newspaper's fiasco. His resignation was accepted Saturday night.

Sir Julian's Appointment.

LONDON, March 11.—The Queen has approved the appointment of Sir Julian Pauncefote as British Minister to the United States.

The Cashmere Conspiracy.

CALCUTTA, March 11.—An official inquiry has been ordered into the charges that the Maharajah of Cashmere was implicated in a conspiracy to poison the British Resident and in other treasonable practices. The Maharajah is an imbecile and is wholly in the power of his ministers.

Millionaire Williamson's Wealth.

PHILADELPHIA, March 11.—The will of I. V. Williamson, the dead millionaire, was admitted to probate to-day. The estate amounts to between $8,000,000 and $9,000,000, exclusive of $2,250,000 for the mechanical school. The entire estate is taxable for collateral inheritance and will yield the state between $400,000 and $500,000. The cost of settling up the property will not fall short of $750,000.

The Weavers' Strike.

FALL RIVER, Mass., March 11.—Three thousand weavers assembled in mass meeting in the park this morning. Reports to the executive committee of the union showed that the weavers in every print cloth mill in the city had quit work and that the strike was general. The agent of the Pocasset mill here offered to compromise with the strikers

INTERIOR DECORATION
A Few Practical Illustrations from the Room Paper Department of the Peterborough Bookstore
OUR New Designs have all been selected with direct regard to their harmonious combination. DADO, WALL SPACE, FRIEZE, BORDERS and CEILINGS have been carefully chosen with regard to their relation to each other, and therefore by the use of our different Combinations Artistic and Harmonious results are obtained. Hitherto the purchaser has been forced to search through the stock of other dealers in order to find the patterns of Wall Paper, Frieze and Dado that would combine even fairly well, and it has required great skill, judgment and patience to accomplish this satisfactory. However, by the use of our Paperhangings it is possible for anyone to have rooms decorated with perfect harmony, a great improvement over the old system, under which a successful interior was possible only through a skillful decorator, or by reason of a happy accident in the selection of the necessary papers. To our customers at a distance we will be pleased to forward samples and estimates of cost.
THE VESTIBULE.
The first place of your house is the Vestibule, and decorated with our new Saracenic Patterns, the prevailing effect of which is a pale sea green and a shimmering white in Arabic Design above the low Mosaic dado of blue green, traced with white and accented with cream color and chocolate on a background of sea-green Mosaic. Surmounting this is the wide frieze of intricate interlacing tracery, singularly brilliant and effective. The ceiling is covered with closely worked arabesque in the same colors but in a different pattern. It is impossible to convey any idea of the flashing brilliance of this effect. The architectural treatment of the vestibule is very simple. Since it is only a room for transient occupancy, it follows that the ornament must be bold and striking, not delicate and intricate, for there is no time for the eye to grasp these qualities.
THE STAIRWAY.
In the decoration of a stairway three things are almost indispensable. Solidity and massiveness of form and construction, breadth and effectiveness of ornament and design and the utmost richness of color. This last consideration seems almost the most imperative of all; perhaps, because hitherto the stairways have been so bold and barren. Fortunately the period of entrance tunnels and step-ladders is gone forever, and people realize now that not only does the stairway offer the best chances for effective treatment, but that it really demands almost the richest decoration in the house. It almost always happens that a hall will be more or less dark, and the deep Indian yellow and venetian red used in our designs do the most that is possible towards lightening the room and improving its appearance. A fountain of dark green verde antique, dull green rage and blue-green draperies give the required contrast and complete the color effect.
THE DRAWING ROOM.
At the time of the aesthetic revival some years ago, the revolution was universal and complete, and, as is always the case during time of revolution, much that was inherently good suffered disgrace with that which merited its destruction. When the world awoke to a clear sense of its artistic depravity, it resolved to turn over a new leaf, leaving nothing to remind it of its former shame. So in an instant all former modes of decoration vanished, and in their place came the rigid forms, the sombre hues, and the importunate rectitude of the new regime. The actual truth and right existing in the new covenant was very great, and to it we owe our present high artistic position. Among other errors it was supposed that there was something iniquitous in white and gold; but white and gold was and still is the very noblest and most beautiful combination of color that can be made, and almost the only one which is perfectly in harmony with the character of a drawing room. The effect of this superb paper is charming—the rich design of creamy white being relieved on a ground of coppery gold. The large, broad masses of the design and the strong flowing lines combine to produce an effect that is beyond improvement.
A MORNING ROOM.
A Smoking Room, "A Den" could be applied with equal propriety. We have a design, slightly Japanese, but not slavishly so, for nothing can be more inartistic than the dull copyism which has lately been in vogue, whereby a nineteenth century room has been transformed into some exotic apartment, distant, perhaps, three thousand miles and fifteen hundred years.
Ingrains, the general color of which is warm, with a light chocolate brown, broken by small touches of many harmonious colors. The High Dado is in rather dark chocolate, covered with carelessly arranged circles of a lighter shade, and bearing different designs. The wall is very simple. Metallic flowers conventionalized on a light terra cotta ground. The ceiling is in strong contrast, a lustrous blue green, set off here and there by crimson leaves. The design is exceedingly rich and elaborate.
THE DINING ROOM.
The "Velours" and Micas with which the Dining Room is decorated are particularly rich and elaborate, giving to this most important room the dignity and repose its character demands. The designs are in varying shades of brown and gold, with coppery and irridescent gleams. The chief section of the wall is the very broad frieze. The ground is light, warm browns, with wavering parallel lines. The whole effect is most ingenious and artistic in design, and shows to excellent advantage the rich effect obtained by our combinations of varying tones of gold and plain back-ground of simple color
THE BED CHAMBER.
The delicacy and softness of color, and tone which the character of this room requires are qualities specially noticeable in the combination of our designs. Nothing rigid or formal is admissable in a chamber, neither are brilliant colors or marked designs to be desired. Everything should be mellow, informal, perhaps luxurious, certainly not florid or gorgeous; light soft colors in quiet combinations. Hangings with large indistinct figures, of furniture with delicate curves, soft fur rugs, and plenty of cushions. These are the things most to be sought for. A chamber should be restful in every way. The velours which cover the walls are admirably suited to their purpose. The general effect is of a luminous silvery hue. The combinations of colors is most satisfactory, rich but subdued, elaborate yet broad in effect. It would be hard to find an arrangement of papers more surely successful, than the New Designs just opened out at the Peterborough Bookstore.

is always a subject for sighs with a housekeeper and she often wishes that the law settled the question of "What shall we have for dinner,' and prescribed certain dishes for certain days. Such a law would certainly save a great deal of worry and questioning to many tired women. TURNBULL'S

The Flood of the Season's French and English Printed Calicoes is rolling in—white capped and aglow phosphorescent, color play. How the Priscellas of the past would joy to see them? Pretty as you have seen them, they were never so handsome before. Persian designs, leaves, buds, flowers, polka, dots, plain stripes, scrabbles and scrawls, angles and tangles. More than 300 different styles, small figures, large figures, and mourning designs, better printing was never done 'exquisite.' If you don't want to buy, don't pass the window or come in. Prices range from 6 to 15 cents.

The trouble with low grade Marseilles Bed Spreads has been loose threads at the back—lace, all right, but you didn't like the fiddle-string arrangement at the back, needn't. Here are $2.50 Marseilles Bed Spreads, full size and handsome patterns, with backs firm and well finished. Look at this honey-comb quilt for either size or weight.

Flannelettes—what are they? are they all-wool? No they are mostly cotton, finished to imitate a Flannel, and especially adapted for childrens' dresses and ladies' wrappers. They consist of Cream Grounds, with pink, blue and cardinal Stripes, blue and white, pink and cream, pink and blue, and pink, cream and grey, some 18 patterns in all—the best quality being only 12½ cents a yard.

Opened out this week, a line of Linen Tablings, the maker of which is noted the world over. They are specially suited for every day wear—the warp is well twisted and they wash and iron well.

Before you hear from us again, I will have visited the wholesale markets where I will be on the look-out for Bargains for my Customers.

Thirty Years Paying Rent in Peterborough.

I frequently hear statements akin to above, followed by remarks of deep regret for having missed many golden opportunities of buying whole lots at a price they would now have to pay for one foot of the same land. Buying property in Peterborough is the safest kind of a safe and profitable investment. I have at present cheap homes, medium class homes and a few exceedingly fine Residences and grounds some of which were built for home comforts, regardless of cost. Uncontrollable circumstances have now caused those to be offered for immediate sale much under value. I commence at $475, for good house and large lot. I can suit any reasonable buyer. I have also good value in Market Gardens and Farms.

HOURS OF SPEECHMAKING

THE DEBATE ON THE BUDGET CONTINUED IN THE HOUSE.

Mr. Cook's Bill to Amend the Civil Service Act—The Advance Guard of the Boodle Brigade in the Lobby.

OTTAWA, March 13.—In the House yesterday Mr. Cook introduced a bill to amend he Civil Service Act. Mr. Cook said his bill was for the purpose of giving Canadians the preference in civil service appointments and that foreigners, "even though they came from the British Islands," shall take a back seat. "This bill," said Mr. Cook, will prevent anyone from getting into the civil service who has not lived in Canada at least five years."

Sir John Thompson sent up a bill amending the Supreme and Exchequer Courts Act, providing that where a judge from a court below who had been appointed to a place on the bench of the Supreme Court and who had heard any action in the court below that was on appeal in the Supreme Court, then four judges would constitute a quorum for hearing the case. There was also a provision for appeals on assessment from British Columbia.

The debate on the Budget was opened by Dr. John Ferguson of Welland. He said that he knew the Americans and their institutions well and while he had the greatest admiration for their progressiveness yet he would not admit that they were the only nation on earth which had been visited with prosperity. Canada had advanced marvellously during the past two decades and she was advancing still. If the Canadians would join hand in hand and be true to themselves within the life of the average middle-aged men we would see this country expanded into one of the finest lands on earth. "It might not be as populous, but it certainly would be as rich and as prosperous as any of them."

Mr. Colter of Haldimand, made his first speech in Parliament in answer to Dr. Ferguson. Mr. Colter's address was delivered with effect. He was accorded the earnest ear of his party and a great many of the Government benches. Mr. Colter followed the arguments of Sir Richard Cartwright and other Liberal leaders in favor of the freest trade with the United States.

Mr. Landry of New Brunswick spoke at length, dwelling on the advancement of Canada.

Mr. Perry of Prince Edward Island said that just as soon as the sun would rise and set to-morrow there would be a change of Government within a very short time. "It cannot come any too soon, either," he remarked.

Mr. Daly of Manitoba talked Canada forever for over half an hour.

Mr. Campbell of Kent made a lively attack on the alleged extravagance of the Government, and he said the proposal to add $71,000 of taxes annually to the burdens of the people by increasing the salaries of the judges was the most diabolical measure that the Minister of Justice ever submitted to this Parliament.

Mr. Wood of Westmoreland moved the adjournment of the debate.

The House adjourned at midnight.

THE BOODLE BRIGADE.

Arrival of the Advance Guard of Reform at the Capital.

OTTAWA, March 13.—The advance guard of Jack Keenan's brigade of boodlers, who are coming over to buy up the Canadian Parliament against Dr. Weldon's surrender of Crooks Bill, arrived in Ottawa to-night from the west. He at once proceeded to the Parliament Buildings and readily gained admission to the Speaker's gallery. He is a handsome-looking man of about 32, and shortly after his arrival in the gallery was joined by an elderly, gray-haired gentleman. I recognized in the younger man a person who was not unknown in the Toronto bucket shops a few years ago, but for the present I will not name him.

I learned on worthy authority that these two workers will quietly and calmly survey the situation, and if they think there is any possibility of defeating Dr. Weldon's bill by the use of money they will inform Keenan, who is now in New York. It is not likely that they would put up money except there was a dead certainty of defeating the bill, as far as its retroactive clauses are concerned at least.

I afterward learned that the two men, the younger and the older, arrived by different routes, one of them coming from New York via Ogdensburg and the other from Chicago via Detroit and Toronto. They will probably be returned to learn that one of Commissioner Sherwood's men is already "shadowing" them, but such is a fact.

THE ART EXHIBITION.

Opening of the Royal Canadian Academy's Annual Show.

OTTAWA, March 12.—Lord and Lady Stanley of Preston and a number of prominent Canadians were present at the opening of the annual exhibition of the Royal Canadian Academy of Arts at the national gallery here this evening. Among those present were Sir Charles and Lady Tupper, Lady Macdonald, Sir James Grant and Hon. G. W. Allan.

Mr. L. R. O'Brien of Toronto, the president of the Academy, made an address of welcome to Their Excellencies, in reply to which Lord Stanley said he hoped that those who were connected with the management of the Academy would endeavor to encourage its members to attain to that due study and recognition of artistic principles that lead to artistic fame. He could not sit down without saying that he hoped the walls of this academy would soon be filled with the best works of Canadian artists marked by a distinct Canadian type. In this country they had landscapes which would tempt the pencil of any artist. Surely with such materials before them he had no doubt they would in time be able to furnish their academy with a collection that would be worthy of the proud place which they all hoped to see their Dominion attain among the nations of the world.

A vote of thanks to the Government for the use of the national gallery for the exhibition of the academy was moved by Senator Allan. Sir Charles Tupper, who seconded the motion, said he thought the Government was doing no more than its duty in giving its countenance and aid to this academy. The time had come when the condition of a country was measured by its art, literature and science. When a country had reached the development that Canada had the time had come when there must be progress in art, literature and science. There was no more appropriate occasion than this, he said in conclusion, to repeat the last words which the Princess Louise had said to him on leaving England. She had asked him to say to all Canadians that she still continued to have a deep interest in Canada and Canadians, and to remember her in the kindest and warmest terms to her friends in Canada. (Applause.)

The collection of oil and water colors which the Governor-General and Lady Stanley inspected afterward included pictures by these artists of Montreal: W. Raphael, R. Harris, W. Brymner, O. R. Jacobi, A. T. Taylor.

Among the Toronto exhibitors are: L. R. O'Brien in oil, water colors, etchings, statuary, etc.; J. T. Relph, J. E. Lemon, J. C. Forbes, W. A. Sherwood, G. A. Reid, Hamilton McCarthy, (in statuary), Strickland and Symons, M. Matthews, Seymour Penson and others.

Sixteen torpedo boats for the German navy are now in course of construction.

President Harrison has outlined a civil service reform policy for his administration.

Down Goes Coal.

NEW YORK, March 12.—Representatives of the great coal producing companies met here to-day and reduced the price of stove coal 30 cents per ton and other grades proportionately. The new prices are: Stove $3.75, egg $3.60, stove $4.15, chestnut $4. The new schedule is from 10 to 15 cents lower than the spring prices of 1888.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

OH! OLGA, BE MY BALM!

A WOODSTOCK DOCTOR WHO SAID HE WAS LIKE A SPONGE.

Miss Niemier of Neustadt Squeezes Him $2000 Worth—A Spicy Branch of Promise Trial at Walkerton.

WALKERTON, March 12.—The spring session of the High Court of Justice for the County of Bruce opened here to-day before Mr. Justice Street. Mr. King of Berlin has charge of the Crown business, on which however he won't get fat, as there are only four cases, but one of which is of any consequence. There are 12 civil cases, several of which were disposed of to-day and none of which are out of the ordinary run excepting a breach of promise suit between a young lady named Miss Olga Niemier, daughter of Dr. Niemier of Neustadt, and Dr. Charles Karn of Woodstock.

Miss Niemier is rather a good looking young girl of 18 and has hitherto been a student at the Walkerton High School. Dr. Karn admitted his intention of marrying her, but he changed his mind when another girl got after him. He married the other girl and then pleaded that Miss Niemier did not grow big enough to suit his esthetic taste.

As a means of enabling the jury to fix the damages, Dr. Karn's love letters to the young lady were read in Court to the great amusement of the crowd. They are daisies. Here are a few extracts:

MY DEAR OLGA: I received your sweet sweet little letter on Thursday evening and was more than usually struck with its goodness and purity. My sweet, kind, generous Olga, I can't help thinking that, like a sponge, I am good at absorbing but very poor at giving anything out, but when you see me again you must squeeze me and, like the sponge with its moisture, so I with the sweetness you have given me, squeeze me and you will get it all back.

I got just a lovely Christmas card, my dear Olga. You must have extra good taste to pick out such a beautiful card. The color means love, the wishes were love, the roses mean love, the forget-me-nots mean true love, the lily-of-the-valley indicates a return of friendship. My darling Olga, I will always keep the card and remember it as a love offering.

My own darling Olga, I love you more and more every time I hear from you. There is no room in my heart for any other lady and never will be.

When I decided to go to Neustadt I little expected to be all broken up in small pieces, but in that respect was agreeably surprised. I have wandered in society a good deal and was never before able to draw any distinction between my lady friends, but at last I have found the lady of my dreams. As some author puts it, "there is balm in Gilead," there is a physician there. Oh! Olga, be my balm. You will never have cause to regret it. Here is five lines of poetry:

How dreary and lone
The world would appear,
If woman were none;
It would be like a fair
With neither tea nor business there.

You are the very light of my life and no matter where I go your sweet and loving nature seems to follow me like the spirit of a dream, loving, loving, loving.

Beecher says that when there is love in the heart there are rainbows in the eyes which cover every black cloud with gorgeous hues. Common sunlight is love and its familiar voice wearies not ever.

I met a golden haired boy and a golden haired maid on the train, and they were as spoony as spoony could be. I like a little of that kind of thing myself, but I like it strictly private.

Where thy shadow falls,
Beauty sits and music calls,
Where thy form and favor come,
All good creatures have their home.

Like the lily-of-the-valley if you live at all it must be in an atmosphere congenial to your nature on which you can shed the sweetness of your nature on all.

Yes send a kiss by letter,
Like other fruit, to me,
It sweeter tastes and better
Fresh gathered from the tree.

I appreciate the kiss the more, for I know if it were possible you would help me to gather the fruit. Dearest Olga, I have been trying for about five minutes to express a thought how much and how dearly I love you, but words seem to be meaningless symbols in expressing such depths of thought and feeling.

Dear Olga, although I am not pretty I try to be good, and earnestly each day ask God to make me better. Dear Olga, my heart is yours with the same burning, ardent love with which I have always cherished for you since our acquaintance. We had a patient in the Hospital to-day from Carlsruhe complaining of constriction of the oesophagus.

Sam Jones, the evangelist, is getting along well. It is reported that over 200 were converted at the last night meeting.

Olga, when the storms are long,
Will you sing a cheerful song;
When the rude winds rock the tree,
Will you cheer cling to me?

Never before have I been able to so thoroughly appreciate the worthlessness of words in expressing the deep regret one has at parting with the one he loves above all others. Although the parting was a simple kiss and a good-bye, still my heart is left with you. It is yours, my dear, and yours alone forever.

When you get back to Walkerton don't study too hard. The kiss you sent me was very nice, although it was indirect, but when I think of the direct one I got while in Neustadt I can't help saying:

You sent a kiss by letter,
Like other fruit, to me;
It sweeter tastes and better
Fresh gathered from the tree.

Notwithstanding the eloquence of Mr. Blackstock on behalf of Dr. Karn, the jury gave a verdict of $1500 for the young lady.

SCOTT ACT REPEAL.

The County of Oxford Petition Contains 4000 Names—Woodstock Jottings.

WOODSTOCK, March 12.—The Woodstock Town Council is at present in a sadly demoralized condition as one of the disastrous results of the St. George accident. At the regular meeting last night there were seven vacant chairs. It is impossible to get a quorum together, but necessary business is transacted and will be ratified in the future. The session last night was the shortest and dullest on record, the surviving members apparently not yet having recovered from the shock.

The nomination to fill the vacant seats is announced for next Monday. It is not likely an election will be demanded.

The petition for the repeal of the Scott Act in the County of Oxford was deposited in the registry office to-day. It is claimed by the repealers to contain about 4000 signatures, while only 3000 are necessary. A committee from each township is to examine the petition on behalf of the anti-repealers, and there is some talk of publishing the whole list.

A $100,000 BLAZE.

James Harris & Co.'s Rolling Mills at Portland, N.B., Burned.

ST. JOHN, N.B., March 12.—James Harris & Co.'s rolling mill at Portland was burnt to the ground this evening throwing 100 men out of employment. The loss is over $100,000, insurance $30,000.

Disastrous Fire at Syracuse.

SYRACUSE, March 12.—Fire and water ruined the wholesale grocery house of Gates Thalheimer in Water-street this morning. Loss, $60,000; insurance, $54,000. The building, owned by John Crouse, was damaged to the extent of $10,000; insurance, $12,000.

Big Wheat Deals in Chicago.

CHICAGO, March 12.—The aggregate of transactions in wheat here to-day was very heavy, sales of May run away up into the tens of millions of bushels. The total stock of contract wheat in store here is 3,531,172 bushels, and any one of half-a-dozen houses traded in as much or more wheat than that to-day.

A Carolina Editor Murdered.

CHARLESTON, S.C., March 12.—Captain W. W. Dawson of The News and Courier was shot and killed this evening by Dr. F. B. McDow.

The trouble arose over an alleged undue intimacy of the doctor with a girl in the employ of Dawson. There is talk of lynching.

The Weavers' Strike.

FALL RIVER, Mass., March 12.—The strike situation is not greatly changed, but appears to favor the weavers. Only 1000 out of 4000 looms are running. Both sides are firm.

THE MONEY OF THE LEAGUE.

A FRESH REPORTER FROM CORK GETS INTO TROUBLE.

His Arrest Ordered by Justice Hannen of the Parnell Commission—The First of a Series of Libel Suits.

LONDON, March 12.—The Parnell Commission resumed its sitting to-day. An accountant testified to having examined the books of the Hibernian Bank, but was unable to trace the persons to whom the money or cheeks were paid, or whence the checks came. Between November, 1879, and September, 1882, the League received £261,369, and paid out £261,276. The bank refused to allow witness to examine to lodgment slips. The League paid to the Ladies' League £12,208, and to the Relief Fund £2025, and disbursed £10,000 in the defence of prisoners.

Witness further testified that he had examined the League's books. The total receipts in 1883 amounted to £11,089, of which America sent £1000 and Australia and New Zealand £8000. In 1884 the receipts were £11,508, in 1885 £18,000, and in 1886 £17,615. The National League's total receipts amounted to £100,613.

Sir Henry James, counsel for The Times, applied for an order for the examination of Mr. Parnell's private account with the National Bank.

Mr. Parnell gave assent to such an examination.

Mr. Coffee, a reporter from Cork, testified that he had made a statement to a policeman who promised him that he should be paid beyond his greatest expectations. Witness declared that that statement was absolutely false. This evidence created a sensation. Coffee said he purposely made the statement he gave to the policeman sensational, because he knew it would take. He received £115 from The Times.

Justice Hannen repeatedly rebuked the witness for contempt and finally ordered his arrest.

He Proved Them Forgeries.

BRUSSELS, March 12.—In a trial of a will suit here to-day the English handwriting expert Netherclift caused a sensation by stating he had proved to Mr. Parnell the Pigott letters were forgeries.

One of Many.

LONDON, March 12.—Henry Campbell, M.P., the private secretary of Mr. Parnell, has brought suit for libel against The London Times. The trial will probably take place in May. The suit is founded partly on the opening speech by Attorney-General Webster in the case of O'Donnell v. Walter and partly on a leading editorial in The Times of July 7 last. This suit is the first of a series to be brought against The Times.

Adopted the Plan.

LONDON, March 12.—Rt. Hon. Charles Villiers, the oldest member of the House of Commons, has, in spite of his 87 years and his politics, adopted the Plan of Campaign. He lives in a house at Chelsea, owned by Earl Cadogan, and as the old mansion stands in the way of certain street improvements, His Lordship wants to pull it down. A notice of eviction has been served upon Villiers, and he declines to recognize it in any way. The old chap has taken to his bed, and says he will remain there until his noble landlord shall consent to take a more reasonable view of his right.

A Gladstonian Elected.

LONDON, March 12.—The election in the Barnsley division of Yorkshire, to fill the vacancy in the House of Commons caused by the retirement of Mr. Kenny (Liberal), resulted in the return of Lord Compton (Gladstonian), who received 6332 votes, against 3781 for his opponent, Mr. Wentworth (Conservative). At the last election Kenny received 5425 and Wentworth 2917.

The National Defences.

LONDON, March 12.—In the House of Commons last evening Hon. Edward Stanhope, Secretary for War, said, in explanation of the army estimates, that owing to the increased protection which had been afforded to the colonies the Government had provided for an increase of the colonial contributions to the national defences.

Stanley Marching On.

BERLIN, March 12.—Private letters from Zanzibar state that Stanley, according to native reports, is marching rapidly towards the east coast of Africa.

Carnot Thanked by the Duc d'Aumale.

PARIS, March 11.—The Duc d'Aumale had an interview to-day with President Carnot. He warmly thanked the President for rescinding the decree of exile against him.

ONTARIO LEGISLATURE.

Bills Passed in Committee—A Division on the Dentistry Act.

TORONTO, March 13.—These bills passed their third reading in the Local Legislature yesterday: To incorporate the Toronto Belt Line Railway Company; respecting the Yorkville Loop Line Railway Company; respecting St. James' Cathedral, Toronto; to revive and amend the act incorporating the Sarnia and Lambton Southern Railway Company; respecting the Toronto, Hamilton and Buffalo Railway Company.

The following bills were passed in committee: Respecting appeals or prosecutions to enforce penalties and offences under Provincial Acts; to amend the Pharmacy Act; respecting damage to lands by flooding in the new districts; respecting oaths under the Manhood Suffrage Act.

At the evening session the House passed in committee Mr. Drury's bill respecting steam threshing machines.

The Minister of Education moved the second reading of the bill validating the agreement between the University of Toronto and municipal corporation of Toronto, and it was accordingly done.

The Attorney-General moved the second reading of the bill respecting the administration of justice in certain cases. The measure was at length passed as was also that respecting the conveyance of lands granted under the Free Grants and Homestead Act.

The House went into committee on Mr. Hardy's bill to give representation in the Legislative Assembly to the District of Nipissing. This measure also went through.

The Attorney-General moved the House into committee on the bill respecting registry offices. Mr. Meredith objected.

The House divided and the Attorney-General's motion to go into committee on the bill was carried by a vote of 51 to 31. The measure was passed in committee.

A RAILWAY BONUS GRANTED.

Another $20,000 for the Kingston and Smith's Falls Road.

KINGSTON, March 12.—The bylaw granting $20,000 to the Kingston, Smith's Falls and Ottawa Railway Company was passed in the townships of Leeds and Lansdowne rear by a majority of 256.

Rev. F. Prime, incumbent of All Saints' Church, conducted a service this morning of communion and intercession on behalf of the accused Bishop of Lincoln.

Mrs. James Smith of the village of Sunbury was fined $50 to-day for violation of the Scott Act.

Sudden Death at Hamilton.

HAMILTON, March 12.—Jonathan Davis, secretary of the board of directors of the Great Central Fair, and license inspector for South Wentworth, died very suddenly between 10 and 11 o'clock this morning at his residence, from heart disease.

New discoveries of oil have been made in the vicinity of Pittsburg.

The Daily Examiner is delivered to any part of the Town for 10c. a week. 35c. a month. $3.00 for Six Months.

The Daily Examiner.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 13, 1889.

Springville.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

PERSONAL.—Mr. Robert Parkes of Peterborough has recently moved to our village. He speaks of Peterborough as a place where it requires a man to be able to cheat his neighbor to be able to live in it properly. So he has decided to remain in Springville where all is honest and industry.

Fall wheat is being stripped of its coat and if the present thawing and freezing continues the outlook is poor especially for wheat that is sown on low, wet land.

PERSONAL.—Mr. David McRoberts, of Cavan, has removed into the neighbourhood, having sold out in the former township to Mr. Dunbar, of Hope. No doubt Mr. McRobert's sojourn in Monaghan will be pleasant, as the people are entirely civilized Presbyterians, and of a peace-loving disposition.

LARGE YIELD.—Mr. A. Goodfellow informs your correspondent that he has cleaned his spring wheat and finds that he has thirty-five bushels per acre. There is no doubt that this is the best wheat growing section of this country, as farmers around here have very large yields.

ANOTHER IMPORTATION.—Our enterprising horseman, Mr. James Baptie, has imported a fine trotting stallion. The purchase was made in New York. Your correspondent was invited to inspect it at Mr. Baptie's stable. The horse goes under the name of "Boxer." "Boxer" is a standard bred road stallion. He has a record of 2.23½ under a disadvantageous trial at Watertown, New York in 1888, which is no measure of his speed, as he has shown his ability to trot in 2.25. He was sired by that grand sire of speedy track horses, Jefferson Prince, sire of little Nell 2.19½, Winona 2.21¼, and seven others in the 2.30 list. General Benton is his full brother, which (Senator) Leland Stanford, of California, purchased for the enormous sum of $20,000, when he was driven a trial mile in 2.20 by Bud Dobel. General Benton is the sire of the dam of the two-year old filly that eclipsed the world by trotting a mile in 2.18. His family show the ability to breed on as "Boxer" produced Emma W., which, in her first year on the track, trotted to a record of 2.29¼, and Clara G. showed a trial speed of 2.20, and was sold to a party in Philadelphia at a very high price. "Boxer" is a large handsome horse, black in color; stand 16 hands high and has very superior action, and is one of the best proportioned horses that can be found. He comes by it honestly as he has seven crosses of Hambletonian blood in his pedigree besides four crosses from Abdalla and three from imported Messenger. This importation of Mr. Baptie will supply the long-felt want of a well bred road horse, of which there are very few in eastern Ontario. After an inspection of some of Mr. Baptie's other well bred stock and the system of feeding that he pursues your correspondent took leave being well paid for the pleasant visit.

Centreville.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

On Tuesday evening, March 5th, the fortnightly entertainment of the Centreville Literary Society took place in the Town Hall. The attendance was unusually large—the largest yet—and the programme was of corresponding excellence. The programme opened with an instrumental selection by Mr. J. Lightfoot, followed by a song by Mr. James Steers, of Fraserville, a reading by Mr. Ball, a recitation by Miss Beccie Fair, a vocal duet by the Misses Fair, two comic songs by Mr. Fred Doyell, character song by Miss Edie Doyell, vocal duet by Mr. Robert and Misses Hutchinson, a dialogue in dialect (colored) by half a dozen young gentlemen, which afforded much amusement, and took well. But the most taking and entertaining part of the programme was the debate on the subject, "Resolved, that married life is preferable to single life." Mr. Thomas Donaldson acted as chairman and judge. The leader of the affirmative was Mr. Robert Brown, and the negative was represented by Mr. D. Doyell. The result was that single life gained the day by two points. It is not known what effect this decision will have, but at any rate, in spite of it, a number of weddings are said to be in prospect, not counting four which took place yesterday.

The next debate of the society is the result of a challenge by Beaufort to debate the subject, "Resolved, that Nature tends more to the formation of character than circumstance." In addition, a most entertaining programme will be presented. The occasion will be a benefit to the Agricultural Society, which has kindly allowed the use of the hall during the winter. Dr. Ough, of Millbrook, will occupy the chair. Remember the date, Tuesday evening, March 10th.

Ennismore.

From Our Own Correspondent.

WEATHER NOTES.—Of all the winter months February is always considered the severest, this year it fully came up to the mark. It came in cold and stormy continued so with very few exceptions, although the snow fall was not extra heavy. We had some rattling gales, drifting the roads badly, the worst being on the night of the 21st, also a regular sou' western set in a little after sundown, tearing up and blowing the snow in all directions, whirling away fences causing houses to tremble to their very foundations, besides some narrow escapes from fire although several more but of a considerable less velocity. In summing up the cold we will first give below zero at sunrise:—On the 1st at 5°, the 3rd at 0°, the 6th at 0°, the 7th at 8°, the 13th at 17°, the 16th at 7°, the 16th at 6°, the 20 at 2°, the 21st at 2°, the 23rd at 12°, the 24th at 4° below, the 25th at 14°; and at sundown had the following:—the 3rd at 4° below, the 6th at 12°, the 22nd at 0°, the 23rd at 0°, the 24th at 4°; according to my reckoning 17° has been the coldest during February, but taking the 6th at morning, noon and night, it exceeds the 13th by several degrees; it moderated during the day and at sundown stood at zero. The morning of the 25th was the hottest, being 36° at sunrise, during the temperature of the month at 11°. It fell on one day, the 16th, but only to the depth of 15/100 of an inch; snow fell on seven days, to the depth of 18 inches; auroral lights only once, on the night of the 26th. The following are the different points from which the wind was blowing at sunrise during the month, respectively, namely:—north 12 days, north 1 day, southeast 3 days, south 4 days, southwest 3 days, west 1 day, and west 2 days.

For sale by the Peterborough Bookstore, (late A. Davis & Co.)

Don't Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

TORONTO TOPICS.

An Alleged Bucket Shop Raided and Eight Inmates Arrested.

TORONTO, March 13.—Acting on the authority of Police Magistrate Denison, Staff Inspector Archibald and a posse of detectives and policemen yesterday morning visited the office of Joseph Priestman, the King-street broker, and arrested all the occupants. The names as registered at police headquarters are these:

Joseph Priestman, broker; Francis J. Spears, telegraph operator; Charles Priestman, clerk; J. C. Miller alias Middlemiss, commission merchant; Thomas Galbraith, reporter; George Barrel Foster, clerk; Walter Armour, William MacIvens, timber and coal agent.

The Police Magistrate fixed bail at two sureties of $100 each, which was promptly forthcoming. In addition to making the arrests, the Inspector seized the entire office outfit, consisting of telegraphic apparatus, telephone, forms for making and annulling contracts, etc. Inspector Archibold says the case is a good one and will come up under the Abbott Act. Mr. Galbraith, commercial editor of The Globe, who went there for quotations for his regular market report, is not a bit tickled over the joke of being arrested. Mr. E. S. Cox, who was just going upstairs when the detectives with their prisoners were coming down, thought he had a lucky escape, and the general public will watch the proceedings with particular interest to see if the case will end in as complete a fiasco as the previous experience of Inspector Archibald with the bucket shop business.

Arbitrations seem to be the order of the day. The municipal authorities have half a dozen in hand and now the Ontario Government's Department of Education takes a hand in one. This is one between the department and the various large publishing houses with a view to fixing upon a definite price for school books so that for some years to come this important branch of the department will be managed satisfactorily, alike to the Government and the publishers. Every night the arbitrators meet at the Educational Department and will continue sitting nightly as far as possible, till their labors are finished.

The north platform at the Union Station was thronged last night as the C.P.R. east-bound trains for Manitoba and the Northwest pulled out sharp at 11 o'clock. The monster excursion was composed of nine freight and two passenger trains, containing 120 cars, 14 sleepers and 512 passengers, principally from the western part of Ontario and west of Toronto. It is expected that a still larger number will leave next Tuesday night. The passengers are all residents of Ontario and bound mostly for distant points.

A morning paper says that inner political circles were agitated yesterday by the rumor that Hon. A. M. Ross was about to resign the Provincial Treasurership. It was stated that on account of impaired hearing and a weariness of public life Mr. Ross would retire from the cabinet. He was to re-enter private life, and as soon as the Huron registrarship was vacant he would be promoted with the office.

Saywood Roman, a colored man residing at 104 Centre-street, is under arrest at Headquarters, charged with attempting to kill another colored man named Henry Harris by shooting him on Monday night. The row occurred on Centre-street and was caused by both attempting to court the same girl.

An inquest will be held to-day touching the death of Miss Eliza Fresser of Manning avenue, who was killed Monday night at the Keele-street crossing at West Toronto Junction.

Before the Police Magistrate yesterday John Kelly, Thomas Sheehan and Timothy Sheehan were charged with assaulting and robbing Alcano H. Nixon in the saloon corner of King and Princess-streets. Kelly was dismissed and called as a witness; Thomas Sheehan, an old offender, was sent to Penitentiary for three years, and Timothy was acquitted.

Corn Sowing

is a process conducted by the agency of tight boots all the year round. Corn reaping is best conducted through the agency of Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor, the only safe and sure-pop corn cure. Putnam's Extractor is now widely imitated. Beware of all poisonous and sore producing substitutes. 6dw11

Piles! Piles! Itching Piles.

SYMPTOMS—Moisture, intense itching and stinging, most at night, worse by scratching. If allowed to continue tumors form, which often bleed and ulcerate, becoming very sore. SWAYNE'S OINTMENT stops the itching and bleeding, heals ulceration, and in most cases removes the tumors. At druggists, or by mail, for 50 cents. Dr. Swayne & Son, Philadelphia. Partly Gave Up.

"In the year 1885 I coughed for six months, and having unsuccessfully tried many remedies, I partly gave up, thinking I had consumption. At last I tried Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam, less than one bottle of which cured me, leaving me as well as ever I was." Henry W. Carse, Wabash, Ont. 2w10d.

The Loss of the Hair

Is a great misfortune and the sight of a bald head should be a warning to you to take the best possible care of your hair. A little of Dr. Dorenwend's "Hair Magic" used occasionally will prevent all chances of its falling out or turning gray, and will remove all traces of dandruff. Every druggist has it in stock. Ask for it. dw

Health Failing Fast.

"I was swooten from head to foot from dropsy of six months' standing, and my health was failing fast, but after taking one bottle of Burdock Blood Bitters I am quite well, and think there is no medicine equal to B. B. B., and to it I remain a true friend." Joseph Heric, Linwood, Ont. 2w10d

Nothing Like It.

"I was troubled with liver complaint for a good many years, but was cured by one bottle of Burdock Blood Bitters. I have never found any medicine to help me like B. B. B., in fact one bottle made a complete cure." W. J. Best, Parkhill, Ont. 2w10d

A High Valuation.

"If there was only one bottle of Hagyard's Yellow Oil in Manitoba, I would give one hundred dollars for it," writes Phillip H Brant, of Monteith, Manitoba, after having used it for a severe wound and for frozen fingers, with, as he says, "astonishing good results." 2w10d

Ivy.

Thou art a friend for evil days, and show
Thyself most constantly when the summer crowd
That revels in the sun, dismayed and cowed,
Has shrunk away till softer breezes blow.
Exultingly thou shakest off the snow,
Emerging boldly from the cold white shroud,
With beauty unimpaired, a conqueror proud.
A daring climber thou, and yet the low
Unsightly things of earth thou seekest out
To wave thy graceful tendrils round about
Brave, faithful ivy! I would learn from thee
Amid life's ills invincible to be;
And in this tangled coil where ill I see,
Be mine to veil it with sweet charity.

DISEASED BLOOD

Scrofulous, Inherited and Contagious Humors Cured by Cuticura.

Through the medium of one of your books received through Mr. Frank T. Wray, druggist, Apollo, Pa., I became acquainted with your CUTICURA REMEDIES, and take pleasure in stating to testify to you that their use has permanently cured me of one of the worst cases of blood disease on record, and that after having been pronounced incurable by some of the best physicians in our county. I take great pleasure in forwarding you this testimonial, unsolicited as it is by you, in order that others suffering from similar maladies may be encouraged to give your CUTICURA REMEDIES a trial. F. S. WHITLINGER, Leechburg, Pa. References: FRANK T. WRAY, Druggist, Apollo, Pa.

SCROFULOUS ULCERS.

JAMES K. Richardson, Custom House, New Orleans, on oath says:—"In 1879 Scrofulous Ulcers broke out on my body until I was a mass of rotten ism. Everything known to the medical faculty was tried in vain. I became a mere wreck. At times could not lift my hands to my head, could not turn in bed; was in constant pain, and looked upon life as a curse. Re called or care in ten years. In 1888 I heard of the CUTICURA REMEDIES, used them and was perfectly cured."

Sworn to before U. S. Com. J. D. CRAWFORD.

ONE OF THE WORST CASES.

We have been selling your CUTICURA REMEDIES for years, and have the first complaint yet to receive from a purchaser. One of the worst cases of Scrofula I ever saw was cured by the use of five bottles of CUTICURA RESOLVENT, CUTICURA, and CUTICURA SOAP. The Soap takes the "cake" here as a medicinal soap.

Substantiating His Credit.

"I tell you what it is," said Tom Harding to his friend Binks, "it has come to this—I must have a new suit of clothes. See how seedy I am getting! Now, my boy, I have it upon a plan that I think cannot fail to answer."

"What is it?" said Binks, looking somewhat askance at Tom.

"Well, it is simply this. You've got a twenty-dollar note in your pocket, I know. Now, just lend it to me for ten minutes. I intend to go to Raymond's store, where I used to have credit, but confound it, I look such a wreck now I don't like to ask it. A few minutes after I enter the shop you stroll in and say, 'Hullo, Tom, old chap! can you let me have twenty dollars for a day or two?' I'll say, 'Certainly,' and hand you over the note you lend me. That little transaction will at once substantiate my credit, and I shall be able to arrange things satisfactorily with the tailor."

Binks was a cautious man, but he could see no harm or risk in thus helping his impecunious friend along.

Accordingly Tom went into a clothing store and was busily engaged selecting a suit when Binks sauntered in.

"Hullo, Tom!" said Binks in a loud tone, "you're just the man I've been looking for. Can you lend me twenty dollars for a week or so?"

Tom turned from the cloth and remarked: "Awfully sorry, old boy, but 'pon my word I have not more than a couple of dollars or so about me."

Binks' face grew considerably longer. He winked, and nudged Tom, whispering, "Confound it, man, hand over the note."

But Tom was obdurate.

At last Binks grew tired of the game and stood outside to wait for Tom. Tom, however, went out at a side door. There will be war when these two meet again.

A Profitable Suggestion.

In a town in Lower Canada, the locale of which for obvious reasons cannot be given, there lived and moved a very thriving business firm, whom we shall designate as Morrison and Parbine, the former Scotch and Presbyterian, the latter French and Catholic. As the profits of the firm should not be diminished by a too rigid observance of the holidays of the Church or the holidays of the separated brethren, it was understood between them that they were to be open for business six days in the week. Thus it happened on holydays Monsieur Parbine devoutly attended the parish church, while his partner looked after the "tiller." Then on Dominion and Thanksgiving days the son of the heather paraded kirk, and listened with rapt attention to the discourse of seventeenthly of the minister while Monsieur Parbine carefully gathered in the shekels. It came about on one of these holydays, just previous to Mr. McPherson's going to church, he was speaking to his partner at the door of their store, when a fifty descendant of the tribe of Benjamin, who was passing, took in the situation at a glance, and said, "Gentlemen, take me into the firm, and you can keep open every day in the year."—Harper's Magazine.

INTERIOR DECORATION

A Few Practical Illustrations from the Room Paper Department of the Peterborough Bookstore

OUR New Designs have all been selected with direct regard to their harmonious combination. DADO, WALL SPACE, FRIEZE, BORDERS and CEILINGS have been carefully chosen with regard to their relation to each other, and therefore by the use of our different Combinations Artistic and Harmonious results are obtained. Hitherto the purchaser has been forced to search through the stock of other dealers in order to find the patterns of Wall Paper, Frieze and Dado that would combine even fairly well, and it has required great skill, judgment and patience to accomplish this satisfactory. However, by the use of our Paperhangings it is possible for anyone to have rooms decorated with perfect harmony, a great improvement over the old system, under which a successful interior was possible only through a skillful decorator, or by reason of a happy accident in the selection of the necessary papers. To our customers at a distance we will be pleased to forward samples and estimates of cost.

THE VESTIBULE.

The first place of your house is the Vestibule, and decorated with our new Saracenic Patterns, the prevailing effect of which is a pale sea green and a shimmering white in Arabic Design above the low Mosaic dado of blue green, traced with white and accented with cream color and chocolate on a background of sea-green Mosaic. Surmounting this is the wide frieze of intricate interlacing tracery, singularly brilliant and effective. The ceiling is covered with closely worked arabesque in the same colors but in a different pattern. It is impossible to convey any idea of the flashing brilliance of this effect. The architectural treatment of the vestibule is very simple. Since it is only a room for transient occupancy, it follows that the ornament must be bold and striking, not delicate and intricate, for there is no time for the eye to grasp these qualities.

THE STAIRWAY.

In the decoration of a stairway three things are almost indispensable. Solidity and massiveness of form and construction, breadth and effectiveness of ornament and design and the utmost richness of color. This last consideration seems almost the most imperative of all; perhaps, because hitherto the stairways have been so bold and barren. Fortunately the period of entrance tunnels and step-ladders is gone forever, and people realise now that not only does the stairway offer the best chances for effective treatment, but that it really demands almost the richest decoration in the house. It almost always happens that a hall will be more or less dark, and the deep Indian yellow and venetian red used in our designs do the most that is possible towards lightening the room and improving its appearance. A fountain of dark green verde antique, dull green rugs and blue-green draperies give the required contrast and complete the color effect.

THE DRAWING ROOM.

At the time of the æsthetic revival some years ago, the revolution was universal and complete, and, as is always the case during time of revolution, much that was inherently good suffered disgrace with that which merited its destruction. When the world awoke to a clear sense of its artistic depravity, it resolved to turn over a new leaf, leaving nothing to remind it of its former shame. So in an instant all former modes of decoration vanished, and in their place came the rigid forms, the sombre hues, and the importunate gravitude of the new regime. The actual truth and right existing in the new covenant was very great, and to it we owe our present high artistic position. Among other errors it was supposed that there was something iniquitous in white and gold; but white and gold was and still is the very noblest and most beautiful combination of color that can be made, and almost the only one which is perfectly in harmony with the character of a drawing room. The effect of this superb paper is charming—the rich design of creamy white being relieved on a ground of coppery gold. The large, broad masses of the design and the strong flowing lines combine to produce an effect that is beyond improvement.

A MORNING ROOM.

A Smoking Room, "A Den" could be applied with equal propriety. We have a design, slightly Japanese, but not slavishly so, for nothing can be more inartistic than the dull copyism which has lately been in vogue, whereby a nineteenth century room has been transformed into some exotic apartment, distant, perhaps, three thousand miles and fifteen hundred years.

Ingrains, the general color of which is warm, with a light chocolate brown, broken by small touches of many harmonious colors. The High Dado is in rather dark chocolate, covered with carelessly arranged circles of a lighter shade, and bearing different designs. The wall is very simple. Metallic flowers conventionalised on a light terra cotta ground. The ceiling is in strong contrast, a lustrous blue green, set off here and there by crimson leaves. The design is exceedingly rich and elaborate.

THE DINING ROOM.

The "Velours" and Micas with which the Dining Room is decorated are particularly rich and elaborate, giving to this most important room the dignity and repose its character demands. The designs are in varying shades of brown and gold, with coppery and irridiscent gleams. The chief section of the wall is the very broad frieze. The ground is light, warm brown, with wavering parallel lines. The whole effect is most ingenious and artistic in design, and above to excellent advantage the rich effect obtained by our combinations of varying tones of gold and plain back-ground of simple color

THE BED CHAMBER.

The delicacy and softness of color, and tone which the character of this room requires are qualities specially noticeable in the combination of our designs. Nothing rigid or formal is admissable in a chamber, neither are brilliant colors or marked designs to be desired. Everything should be mellow, informal, perhaps luxurious, certainly not florid or gorgeous; light soft colors in quiet combinations. Hangings with large indistinct figures, of furniture with delicate curves, soft fur rugs, and plenty of cushions. These are the things most to be sought for. A chamber should be restful in every way. The velours which cover the walls are admirably suited to their purpose. The general effect is of a luminous silvery hue. The combinations of colors is most satisfactory, rich but subdued, elaborate yet broad in effect. It would be hard to find an arrangement of papers more surely successful, than the New Designs just opened out at the Peterborough Bookstore.

GREAT GERMAN

HAIR MAGIC.

The equal of this great preparation is yet to be found. It is an unfailing Restorer for grey hair—it stops all falling out of the hair—it removes all dandruff and keeps the scalp clean. On bald heads (if there are but the faintest traces of roots) the Magic will produce a fine growth. Will you try it? Or will you let your hair go, and become prematurely old? What do you say? All druggists everywhere have it for sale. Ask for it. Do n t let the druggist tell you he has something just as good—many have dead stock of other hair tonics on hand and try to shove them off in this way.

Supporters and Opponents.

A mass meeting of the supporters of the Scott Act will be held in the Opera House on Saturday afternoon and evening next. Those opposed to the Act are requested to attend and take part in the meeting. They will be treated in a courteous manner and will be replied to by Rev. M. L. Pearson and Rev. Mr. Barns. A half an hour will be allowed to each speaker. Chair to be taken at 2.30 and 8 o'clock.

Why People Wonder

How it is W. J. Morrow sells his teas and all other lines so cheap.—well, he buys in large quantities owing to his extensive trade terms over his goods quickly, as he is not so anxious for large profits as other houses are, and does the largest trade of any grocery house in town. Something new—our 5 lb. Japan for $1.00. See our advertisement in another column.

30 CHESTS of our double extra fine new Japan tea arrived to-day, 5 lbs for $1 at M. R. Kidd's.

Peterborough's Peculiarity.

A peculiarity of Peterborough's history is that the town never had any infancy. The tantalising period of growth through the successive stages of township parcel, Blank's corners and village corporation were evaded through the foresight of the early settlers, who, when the first townships were surveyed, reserved a town plot which was laid out as it is to-day. Peterborough's first and, as yet, last incorporation was as a town in 1850.

"Faith vs. Formalism."

The above is the subject on which Rev. J. D. Cayley of Toronto will speak in St. John's church this evening. The lecturer proposes to briefly consider a few religious usages and customs as practised by different men to-day with a view to distinguishing between what is simply human contrasting mode of death, and what on the other hand is living and divine. Those who cannot be present at the 8 o'clock service are invited to come at 8.30 when the address will begin.

March 16th.

Arrangements for the Lecture and Grand Concert in the Opera House, on Monday evening, March 18th, were completed last evening. In addition to the lecture by the great Canadian Orator, Mr. J. J. Curran, Q. C., M. P., Montreal, a concert programme will be presented that is rarely equalled in Peterborough. Among those who will take part will be Miss Waltz, of Brooklyn, N.Y., the celebrated soprano, who has created such a furore wherever she has appeared. The well known local favorites, Messrs. Pearse, Elliott, T. Dunn and C. S. Shaw will also take part. See programmes for full particulars. 1d

Spring Poetry to the Front.

In the spring the wild-eyed housewife, armed with pail and scrubbing brush, Swoopeth down upon house cleaning with a wild resistless rush. There's no nook nor cranney in the house she loves so well, Where a speck or spot of dirt is allowed a space to dwell. From the cellar's lowest region to the piled up lumber room, Are the swish of tucked-up skirts and the flourish of the broom. In the garret's dusty district she unearths decrepit chairs, and to mend and furbish them she diligently prepares. After hours of vain attempts spent in repairing them She bundles off the invalids to Daniel Belleghem. Here with neatness and despatch—with care and promptitude, The things are put in order, cleaned and varnished, polished, glued. For Belleghem's a dandy of the skillful tribe of Dan, And the job he cannot do, you be sure no other can. Throughout the Midland district all hath sounded his renown, And as king of furniture he wears the well earned crown. In humble cot or mansion, go then where'er you may, Your wearied limbs at night upon his beds you lay. Of furniture of every kind, for palace or for tent, You'll find at Hunter street a stock magnificent. As good as gold as cheap as dirt to every piece applies, And then you'll buy an outfit, that is if you are wise, For the best place for furniture is at Belleghem's, the shop farthest west on Hunter street.

Michael Strogoff at the Opera House.

Theatre goers were expecting a treat in "Michael Strogoff," and as presented at the opera house last night by Chas. L. Andrew's company they were not disappointed. Like "Held by the Enemy," which occupied the boards the night before, "Michael Strogoff" was of a strong military character, dealing with the Tartar rebellion in Siberia and its suppression by the Russians. Irkutsk is in imminent peril, and Michael Strogoff, an Imperial messenger, is detailed to carry a despatch from Moscow through the Tartar ranks to the aid of the besieged town. On the safe and prompt delivery of the message depends the life of the Grand Duke and all his people. The thrilling experiences and narrow escapes of Strogoff on this hazardous journey form the basis of the play. There are many stirring scenes and strong situations, the blinding of Strogoff after his capture by the Tartars and his denial of his mother being quite blood-curdling in their effect. The juggler of the Emir of Bokahara amused the audience by exhibitions of his art, which were perhaps the best ever seen in Peterborough. The company used some of their own scenery. The play was well put on and apparently gave every satisfaction. Mr. Fredericks as "Michael Strogoff" carried out the important leading role in a highly successful manner, while O. B. Collins as "Ivan O'Gareff" made a fierce-looking and implacable foe. His voice, though, was scarcely up to requirements. The two war correspondents, Hibernian and Teutonic, furnished the "funny business" in a pleasing way. Alice Marette made a charming Nalda; she has a wonderful voice for such a small body. As Marfa Strogoff, mother of Michael, Ethel Douglass displayed excellent dramatic ability, but her voice had a harsh, flinty tone that was unpleasant. Francis Sumner filled the character of Sangarre excellently. The other roles were of minor importance and were taken indifferently.

News Nuggets.

—J. S. Murphy and his "Kerry Gow" company are on their way to Peterborough.

—The adjourned sale of county land for taxes takes place at the Court House to-morrow.

—The Canton meeting at 7.30 to-night, and every Wednesday evening till after the 26th of April.

—The Land League met last night and completed arrangements for the concert next Monday evening. Particulars will be announced later.

—Turner, the tent and awning man, to-day shipped some awnings to Barrie and Orillia, and he has still a number of orders to fill. He does a big district trade in his line of business.

—The third shipment of canoes to England this season from the Ontario Canoe factory was made yesterday by Col. Rogers, when seven crates (six canoes in each), were dispatched to Liverpool.

FIVE CARDINAL "DON'TS."

Rev. Mr. Hunter Tells What You Musn't Do.

Song Sermon by Rev. Mr. Crossley—George Street Church Crowded to the Doors—Hundreds Turned Away—Many Souls Convicted.

Many ministers assisted in the meeting last night. On the platform were observed Rev. Messrs. McAmmond, Fenelon Falls; Brodie, Little Britain; Parker, Kinmount; Bates, Millbrook, and McCamus, Fraserville, besides the resident clergymen; also, in the audience, were noticed Rev. Mr. Greatrix, of South Cavan, and Rev. F. Johnston, of Lakefield. Standing room was scarcely obtainable and many were unable to gain admittance to the church. On the whole the last meeting has probably been the best.

Rev. Mr. Parker opened with prayer. Rev. Mr. Shorey gave the announcements, and intimated that the collections were not always as large as might be expected.

Mr. Hunter then rose and made some very effective remarks before reading the evening lesson. He urged upon his audience five things:—(1) Keep out of debt. (2) Do not dance. The speaker said his home was consecrated to God, it was God's house and he would just as leave dance in church as there. Progressive Euchre he called progressing towards hell. (3) Avoid dirt. (4) Avoid drink. "I'd like to see what some of you have got in your cellars. Your boys, he said, know just what you have there. Some think in order to satisfy the demand of custom, you must have wine on your tables. In this way you are damning your children forever. I wouldn't buy groceries at a place where liquor is sold. Sometimes the grocer will ask your son to have a drink when he goes for groceries. (5) Do not let the devil into your hearts. Keep the ear gate and the eye gate closed.

Mr. Hunter then read some verses from the 5th of Luke, making very brief comments thereon. When he came to the words "Launch out into the deep," the speaker took occasion to reprimand those Christians who for 20 years had prayed the same prayer, and related the same experience. He urged them to launch out into the deep and get a new experience. At the words "and the net began to break," Mr. Hunter remarked that when a boy he was a good fisher, and had learned from this how to become a fisher of men. As there were different ways of catching different fish, so there were different ways of "catching" men. Some people think that everybody should be "caught" in their way. Never mind how souls are brought to Christ as long as they get there. He closed his remarks by expressing his regrets that the Catholic priests and English Church ministers did not attend the meetings. Some people think that there are corners in heaven awaiting them.

Mr. Crossley then sang his latest composition in print, entitled "Pape, What Would you Take for Me?"

A number of requests for prayer were read.

"NOT SAVED!"

Mr. Crossley opened his remarks by stating that his text for the evening had led to his conviction of sin and ultimately brought him to Christ. It was found in the book of Jeremiah. "Not saved." What is it to be in this state? It is to be in sin, under sin's guilt, in sin's power, and in danger of the irreparable consequence of sin. You are in a state of rebellion to God if "Not saved." You are virtually signing your name to a document bearing the inscription "Not saved." Mr. Crossley here sang "Oh 'tis Wonderful." The speaker then referred to the carelessness and indifference evinced by sinners. "So careless and still not saved." "Not saved," and so many anxious about you. Husbands, you know your wives have been praying for you, and shedding many a bitter tear; sons and daughters, you know your mothers are very anxious, and yet "not saved." Pastors have been praying for you and you know the interest they take in you. No one here can say, "No man careth for my soul." The preacher then exhorted Christians to take a greater interest in the welfare of precious and immortal souls. Some of you Christians are folding your arms, and sleeping, and talking of the blessedness of being homeward bound, and yet your children are chasing the butterflies of fashion so near the precipice of eternal ruin. You that are unsaved know that so many are anxious about you; why not be anxious about yourselves? Mr. Crossley then sang "Jesus waits to Pardon You." Not saved, and you believe in the necessity of salvation. If an atheist or an infidel, you might be consistent; but you are most inconsistent when you acknowledge your need of salvation. Some people say they doubt the reality of these things. "Do you ever think you may be wrong?" You do not in reality doubt, but doubt that you doubt. You are going by a graveyard and trying to keep up your spirits by whistling. Your doubts of your doubts are a great deal greater than your doubts. If candid with yourself you will acknowledge this and be saved before a week. "But nearly all of you believe in the necessity of salvation and yet are not saved." This is a very inconsistent course. You are living as if you were an infidel and practical atheist. Not saved and so many opportunities offered? God keeps an exact account of every mercy bestowed on you; every prayer offered for you; every striving of His spirit and every invitation extended. Some time you will become incorrigible and then God will give you a special opportunity and at last cut you down. The speaker related a touching incident illustrative of this. These two words, "not saved," he said, are deeply impressed on my mind. I knew I was in a lost condition, but I said, thank God the summer is not ended, and at seventeen I came and found the Lord. With the old people the spring is past and the summer almost ended but not gone. Make up your minds that your few remaining years will not be lost. Mr. Crossley closed his discourse by singing "The Door of God's Mercy is open."

NOTES.

A large number stood up before the first meeting was closed. Such a large number stayed for the second meeting that it was found impossible to speak to all the inquirers, and consequently all were asked to retire save those who were unsaved and those who were working.

On Thursday night 200 people, including the Mayor, come from Belleville by a special train. They will arrive at 7.30 and return at 11 p.m.

All boys under twelve were requested to remain at home that evening.

To night Mr. Crossley preaches on "Blasphemy of the Holy Ghost," or "The unpardonable sin."

Ashburnham Brevities.

The school was dismissed yesterday at three o'clock, that the children and teachers might attend the evangelistic meeting in the Mark Street Methodist Church.

At the service in St. Luke's Church Tuesday night, the Rev. G. Warren preached the first of a series of sermons on the Revelations. His address was listened to with rapt attention.

The regular monthly meeting of St. Luke's temperance society was held Tuesday night after service. Two very able papers were read, one by Mr. J. Burnham on "Drink and Law," and the other by Mr. E. A. Peck on "The Stars we See." The attendance was good and the papers were both very much appreciated.

Miss Eva Tivey presided at the organ at the service in St. Luke's Church Tuesday night.

The Rev. F. McAmmond, B.A., of Fenelon Falls, was in the village to-day calling on his old friends.

Oysters.

E. Welsh's oyster parlors are now open for the season. Fresh oysters received daily. Call and have a plate. d

The Man from Galway.

He is Assaulted by Two Other Galway Men, Who are Fined $5 and Costs Each Thereafter.

An assault case was disposed of at the police court this morning, in which the plaintiff was Wm. Reynard, of Galway township, and the defendants Arthur Dewdney and son, of the same neighbourhood. The plaintiff alleged that on Wednesday of last week, March 6th, the Dewdneys came into his house, without knocking at the door, and at once began picking a quarrel with him. It seems that Reynard had been working for Dewdney, but had quit his employment, and in consequence there was bad blood between them. Dewdney, jr., wanted him to go outside and fight, Reynard said, and when the latter refused, Dewdney, sr., struck him with his cane, the son at the same time getting in a blow with his fist. Then Reynard's wife interfered, and she was knocked down by the old man, who attempted to strike her again. Dedwney, pater, next launched a heavy boot at Reynard's head, but the latter dodge it, and, instead, received the blow on the shoulders. Then the old man threw it at Mrs. Reynard. During the melee, according to the plaintiff, young Dewdney struck him several times with his fist. Reynard claimed that he had left Dewdney's employment because the latter was dissatisfied with him and refused to settle with him unless his son was there too. Plaintiff's evidence was corroborated by his wife, who said Dewdney did not strike her, but "clawed" her when she went to her husband's assistance with a big boot in her hand.

Arthur Dewdney, sr., claimed that Reynard got in a temper and quit his employment, at the same time calling him hard names. Dewdney said he wanted his son present at settling up because the latter managed business matters. He and his son went to Reynard's that morning to settle up, and entered without rapping because that was a custom in the backwoods. His son was vexed at what Reynard had said, but he (the father) cautioned him to be careful and not lay himself open to the law; if he wanted to have anything to do with him to call him outside his house and not attack him inside. Reynard ordered them out of the house first thing, and when they would not go Reynard seized a stick of wood to strike, but the old man went up close to him to prevent him. He did not have his cane in his hand, he said, and looking around saw the wife coming at him with some weapon in her hand. He pushed her staggering back, but she returned and again he sent her sprawling with a shove. Meantime the son had struck Reynard over the eye and knocked him down, and both the Dewdneys then left, the old man making a parting shot at the prostrate Reynard with the boot that the woman had at first. This was the evidence, pro and con, and the defendants were each fined $5 and costs. Mr. G. M. Roger conducted the prosecution.

Those Army Charges.

Refuted by "One Who Knows"—Another Side of The Story.

AN EXAMINER reporter this forenoon had a short talk with a gentleman who, though not an officer, has always taken a prominent part in the local corps and is quite conversant with the Army's operations in general. He was spoken to with reference to the alleged maladministration of the Army's affairs.

He said there was no truth in the report that all the Army property belonged to General Booth. The Salvation Army in Canada owns all Canadian property; it was held in trust for the general go d. As to the statement th the Army did not properly provide for its officers, he said there was a Home for sick or disabled officers in Toronto, where they were given the best of treatment.

"But they say that if an officer at an outpost gets sick and runs out of funds the Army authorities refuse to help him, and leave him to starve or be cared for by charity."

"That's all wrong. You see it's this way. An officer knows when he joins the Army and is sent to a station that he is not promised anything. The whole Army organization depends upon the voluntary gifts of the people, and officers are fully aware of that fact. They are plainly told that all they do is for the glory of God, without pay from any source except that contributed by the people. It wouldn't do to encourage laziness by sending them money from headquarters."

"Yes, but when they get sick are they left alone in their difficulty? The parties who are agitating this thing state that to be the case and cite numbers of cases where officers have to be cure for by public charity when they become too sick to work."

"Now, I know that's not so. Only yesterday I saw a letter from a young man, a captain, who wrote asking for aid to help maintain his old father and mother, and it was decided to send him money. That doesn't look much like the 'desertion and death' they speak of, does it, when they even help the officers' family?"

Peterborough's Deputation.

The Globe says:—A deputation from Peterborough, composed of the following, waited on the Attorney-General after the House rose at 6 o'clock:—T. Cahill, R. S. Davidson, W. Langford, A. Rutherford, E. H. D. Hall, and J. D. Baptie. They asked the Government to so amend the Act consolidating the debt of the town in 1861 that the Council would be placed in a position to borrow $30,000 for school purposes. The Attorney-General regretted that the Government could not comply with the request made, the only way to give Peterborough the privilege asked for being through a private bill.

CLEVELAND'S
SUPERIOR
BAKING POWDER

THE PUREST AND BEST

Is made only of strictly pure grape cream of tartar, strictly pure bicarbonate of soda, and a small portion of flour as a preservative, nothing else whatever, and is warranted entirely free from alum, ammonia, phosphates, lime, or all the adulterants frequently found in baking powders. The character of materials used, their purity, and the nicety of their combination, render Cleveland's superior baking powder the most healthful and most economical in use, and it always affords wholesome, nutritious, and delicious food.

It is recommended for purity, healthfulness and efficiency by Government and State chemists, chemists of Boards of Health, and professors in institutions of learning throughout the country.

Sold only in cans, full weight.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

This Powder never varies. A marvel of purity, strength and wholesomeness. More economical than the ordinary kind and cannot be sold in competition with the multitude of low test, short weight, alum or phosphate powders. Sold only in Cans. ROYAL BAKING POWDER, No 106 Wall street, N. Y. 1y26w

ORANGE GRAND LODGE.

Opening of an Important Session in the Ambitious City.

HAMILTON, March 12.—The thirtieth annual meeting of the Provincial Grand Orange Lodge of Ontario West convened this afternoon in the court house, and it promises to be one of the most important sessions of the body that has been held in Canada for many years. About 300 members are present, and the session will last until Thursday, during which time the Jesuits Estate bill will be fully considered and definite action taken by this important and representative body.

W. W. Fitzgerald, barrister, London, Right Worthy Grand Master, presides at the meeting and he is ably assisted by R. W. Grand Secretary Robert Birmingham of Toronto. This afternoon the grand officers' addresses were delivered and other routine business carried out. To-morrow the Jesuit bill will likely come up for discussion.

QUEBEC LEGISLATURE.

A Motion of Want of Confidence Defeated by a Vote of 34 to 24.

QUEBEC, March 12.—In the Legislative Assembly this afternoon a motion of non-confidence was made by Mr. Leblanc, the member for Laval, blaming the Government for allowing C. Beausoleil, the Premier's partner, to retain $31,000 on a collection of $519,000 made in two months on the commercial corporations tax, which was claimed to be for his disbursements, while there is a paid officer, M. H. Lamb, as collector of revenue.

Messrs. Lussier, Lafontaine and Laroux, Government supporters, voted with the Opposition and Messrs. Bourbonnais and Pelletier, also Government supporters, who were said to be in the building, abstained from voting.

The vote stood 24 to 34.

Royal Black Knights.

HAMILTON, March 12.—The Grand Black Chapter of the Royal Black Knights resumed its session this morning. The report of the grand treasurer was a gratifying one, and showed that the order was in good condition financially. The following officers were elected: John Graham, Toronto, grand master; Wm. Magness, St. Catharines, deputy grand master; John. L Wilson, Wilsoncroft, associate deputy grand master; Rev. Rural Dean Cooper, Invermay, grand chaplain; S. R. Hammond, Hamilton, grand registrar; E. Metcalf, Toronto, grand treasurer; W. M. Lockhart, Everett, deputy grand registrar; Geo. Nicholson, Hamilton, deputy grand treasurer; W. L. Bell and W. J. Dunlop, Toronto, grand lecturers; Jno. McCaffrey, Toronto, and J. Dunlop, St. Catharines, grand standard bearers; R. Alles, Hamilton, and J. McAllen, Toronto, grand censors; E. Moody, Clinton, grand pursuivant; grand committee, Jno. Low, E. T. Richards, B. H. Scott, T. Gillray, M. Baldwin, Capt. Wetmore and Jno. Bird. The officers were installed this evening.

MARCH WINDS. The March winds prevailing to our climate, [illegible] to even the most robust constitutions on account of the [illegible] Catarrhal Troubles and Bronchial Affections. There is probably no season of the year when Cold in the head and Catarrh [illegible] alone, and it is at this time that NASAL BALM—nature's great remedy for these troubles—proves its magic powers by almost [illegible] curing Cold in the Head, speedily relieving and ultimately curing the most virulent forms of Catarrh. On the principal that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure, every home in the land should be provided with NASAL BALM at this trying season, and its use should be freely resorted to on the very first symptoms of Cold in the Head or Catarrh. It is the only genuine remedy and certain cure for these troubles, and its claims are backed by thousands of the strongest testimonials, a few of which we append below:

COLD IN HEAD
MARCH WINDS CATARRH

WM. SAWYER, Toronto, says:—I had a bad attack of Catarrh last winter and like many other foolish people, thought it would wear away. But it did not; instead it was wearing me away, and at last I made up my mind to try something. I got a prescription made up, a powder and snuffed it up and up until I grew weary but got no benefit. I then looked over the papers and saw your advertisement in the Mail. It seemed to have candle nce in it right away and got a bottle of NASAL BALM and I can honestly say it was the best investment I ever made, and I strongly recommend it to all sufferers from catarrh and cold in the head. It helped me from the first and has thoroughly cured me. Every sufferer from catarrh should use NASAL BALM, and leave snuffs, powders and douches alone.

MRS. M. RAY, Cassa, N. S., states: I have used NASAL BALM on several occasions with the children for cold in the head, and always find it effects a rapid cure.

MISS CLARA MACHIDER, Little Metis, Ont., says:—I have used two bottles of your NASAL BALM for catarrh with the most beneficial results. To anyone suffering with this most disagreeable disease I can heartily recommend it as a radical cure. I cheerfully give you permission to use this if you desire it.

MR. THOMAS ROCHE, Rochefort, Ont., says:—I have suffered severely from catarrh, and never got any relief until I used NASAL BALM. I never thought I could find so sure a cure. It is a pity all afflicted with catarrh do not know of and use this wonderful medicine.

W. A. MALLORY, Mallorytown, Ont., says:—My daughter suffered for years from a most distressing and annoying catarrh. Her case was under the treatment of eminent physicians in the United States and Canada. Two months' use of NASAL BALM has had more beneficial effects than all former treatment combined.

EX-MAYOR ROBERT BOWIE, Brockville, Ont., says:—I used NASAL BALM for a bad case of catarrh, and it cured me after having ineffectually tried many other remedies. It never fails to give immediate relief for cold in the head.

C. MCDONALD, Serpent River, Algoma, says:—I have used NASAL BALM for a bad case of catarrh, and it has done me more good than all the remedies I ever tried before. It is worth its weight in gold.

MR. G. T. GORRELL, mail clerk on C. P. R., says:—NASAL BALM is a boon to all suffering from cold in the head. It gives relief rapidly and never fails to effect a speedy cure.

MR. J. D. KENNEDY, G. T. R. agent at Brockville, says:—A short treatment with NASAL BALM radically removed all symptoms of my catarrh. The preparation is pleasant and easy to use, and gives immediate and permanent relief.

SAMUEL BOLTON, Caldwell Mills, Ont., writes:—It gives me great pleasure to testify to the great merit of NASAL BALM. I tried other remedies but got no relief. The disease had brought on partial deafness. Yet two applications of NASAL BALM gave me great relief and before the bottle was finished I was completely cured.

P. R. MACNAMARA, Merchant tailor, Brockville, Ont., says:—As an instant relief for Cold in the Head and Catarrh, NASAL BALM is unequalled. The effect is noticed as it is used.

MR. JOHN BROWN, Keenaway, Algoma, Detroit, writes:—I have used your NASAL BALM and have no hesitation in saying that it is the best remedy on earth for catarrh. I have only used one bottle, and it has fully cured my catarrh. I have no hesitation in giving my name as an endorsation of NASAL BALM, as the greatest remedy yet discovered for catarrh and cold in the head.

LEWIS ROSEBUCK, Wyevale, Ont., says:—I recommend NASAL BALM highly to all who suffer from catarrh.

MR. S. E. CHASE, Port Arthur, Ont., says:—I have been using your NASAL BALM for catarrh, and find myself cured with only one bottle. To call it the best preparation made for catarrh is scarcely strong enough.

T. H. MUNROE, Parry Sound, says:—NASAL BALM has no equal as a remedy for cold in the head. It is both speedy and effective in its results.

W. H. GABEL, Brevic, Ont., says:—I feel it my duty to write to you and report the result of my using NASAL BALM. I have been a severe sufferer from that loathesome disease, catarrh, and tried several remedies, but got no relief till I purchased a bottle of NASAL BALM. I used it according to directions and it has completely cured me. I take great pleasure in recommending it to all suffering from catarrh.

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS similar only in name and appearance. Ask for NASAL BALM and take no substitute recommended as "just as good." If you cannot get NASAL BALM from your dealer it will be sent post-paid on receipt of price—50 cents and $1—by addressing FULFORD & CO., Brockville, Ont. Send for our pamphlet "Gems of Wisdom."

TURNBULL'S

The Flood of the Season's French and English Printed Calicoes is rolling in—white capped and aglow phosphorescent, color play. How the Priscellas of the past would joy to see them? Pretty as you have seen them, they were never so handsome before. Persian designs, leaves, buds, flowers, polka, dots, plain stripes, scrabbles and scrawls, angles and tangles. More than 300 different styles, small figures, large figures, and mourning designs, better printing was never done 'exquisite.' If you don't want to buy, don't pass the window or come in. Prices range from 6 to 15 cents.

The trouble with low grade Marseilles Bed Spreads has been loose threads at the back—lace, all right, but you didn't like the fiddle-string arrangement at the back, needn't. Here are $2.50 Marseilles Bed Spreads, full size and handsome patterns, with backs firm and well finished. Look at this honey-comb quilt for $1, which needs no apology for either size or weight.

Flannelettes—what are they? are they all-wool? No they are mostly cotton, finished to imitate a Flannel, and especially adapted for childrens' dresses and ladies' wrappers. They consist of Cream Grounds, with pink, blue and cardinal Stripes, blue and white, pink and cream, pink and blue, and pink, cream and grey, some 18 patterns in all—the best quality being only 12½ cents a yard.

Opened out this week, a line of Linen Tablings, the maker of which is noted the world over. They are specially suited for every day wear—the warp is well twisted and they wash and iron well.

Thirty Years Paying Rent in Peterborough.

I frequently hear statements akin to above, followed by remarks of deep regret for having missed many golden opportunities of buying whole lots at a price they would now have to pay for one foot of the same land. Buying property in Peterborough is the safest kind of a safe and profitable investment. I have at present cheap homes, medium class homes and a few exceedingly fine Residences and grounds some of which were built for home comforts, regardless of cost. Uncontrollable circumstances have now caused these to be offered for immediate sale much under value. I commence at $475, for good house and large lot. I can suit any reasonable buyer. I have also good value in Market Gardens and Farms.

NEWS OF THE DOMINION

MEETING OF THE ORANGE GRAND LODGE IN HAMILTON.

Resolutions Passed Denouncing the Grant to the Jesuits—The Bucket Shop Cases at Toronto.

HAMILTON, March 13.—The Grand Lodge of Ontario [illegible] resumed at 9.15 o'clock this morning. Grand Master R. W. Bro. W. [illegible] held in the chair. An address of welcome was read from the Hamilton District and Wentworth County Orangemen. An address from the Ladies Protestant Association was also read. It asked that the association be given the privilege of organizing ladies' lodges under the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge of Ontario West. A committee consisting of Messrs. Thomas Keyes, Grand Secretary of the Grand Lodge of British America; Ald. John McMillan, D.M. of Toronto, and W. H. Scott, W.M. of Toronto, was appointed to consider the address from the ladies.

The report of the Credential Committee was presented and adopted. The auditors presented their report, congratulating the Grand Lodge upon the progress make during the year, and certifying to the correctness of the Treasurer's report. The Committee on Correspondence, to which was referred the Grand Master's and the Grand Secretary's reports, presented their report, which was taken up clause by clause and a number of clauses were adopted. The reports of the Committees on Petitions and Appeals, Suspensions and Expulsions and on Finance were presented and adopted.

This evening a sermon was preached by Bro. Perry, the Grand Chaplain, and the Grand Lodge met after the service.

The old officers were re-elected.

A series of strong resolutions was unanimously passed condemning the grant to the Jesuits and calling upon the representatives of Ontario in the Dominion Parliament to exercise all means in their power for its disallowance and to support any measure introduced to that end, irrespective of party affiliations.

TORONTO TOPICS.

Rev. "Hove-on" Wilson Vindicated—The Bucket Shop Case.

TORONTO, March 14. The case of Rev W. F. Wilson, who was convicted by Police Magistrate Denison last summer of disorderly conduct, is ended after much airing in the courts. Yesterday Mr. Wilson's appeal from the conviction came before Judges McDougall and Morgan. City Solicitor Biggar referred to the disagreement of the jury last session, and as Jarvis, the policeman who arrested Mr Wilson, had been dismissed from the force, and as no one doubted the excellence of Mr. Wilson's character he thought the quickest way to settle the matter was the best. Their Honors accordingly quashed the conviction, but without costs.

An unusually large number of failures in Ontario and Quebec was reported yesterday.

There was a crowd at the Police Court yesterday to hear the charge under the Abbott Act against Joseph Priestman, Charles Priestman, J. C. Millichamp, Francis J. Spear, Walter Armour, Thomas Galbraith, George R. Foster and William McBroom. Joseph Priestman was arraigned on two charges; first, of keeping a common gaming house for the purpose of making bets at 71 Yonge-street, and, secondly, with having made a fraudulent transaction to deliver 100 bushels of wheat, which there was no intention of delivering. He pleaded not guilty, and both charges were enlarged until next Monday. The other defendants were then arraigned on the charge that on March 12, with intent to make profit they did enter into a non-bona fide transaction, to wit, the delivery of 1000 bushels of wheat, and also with being frequenters of a common gaming house. McBroom explained that he had never been in Priestman's office before. He went there to collect a note for the Equitable Insurance Company arrived there just as the raid was being made. Inspector Archabold was willing to let the case against Mr. McBroom drop, as he had no evidence that he was a frequenter of the place. McBroom was accordingly discharged. The defendants were then bailed, the hearing to take place on Monday.

MANITOBA MATTERS.

Hatfield Likely to Swing for the Murder of His Wife.

WINNIPEG, March 13.—In all probability Hatfield, now on trial for wife murder at Holland last Christmas, will swing. The evidence is pretty strong against him, one of the witnesses being his own boy. Hatfield and his wife quarrelled over his sister-in-law, with whom he was intimate, and he admitted to neighbors having killed his wife.

A case of attempted incendiarism in Roberts' tobacco store will be investigated to-morrow. The companies have cancelled several policies in the neighborhood.

The bodies of a large number of valuable dogs missing during the winter have been found, they having been snared and killed for their skins.

Two trappers named Finlayson starved to death near Deer Lake, north of Prince Albert, having lost their way.

The wife of James Moore, who while supposed to be in Orillia was really living with a man in St. Paul, refused to return home with her husband, but allowed him to take back her child.

Chester Glass of Winnipeg has been admitted to the Minnesota Bar.

The first lodge Daughters of Rebekah was instituted here last night.

Ambitious City Rotes.

HAMILTON, March 14.—The woman Annie Russell, who took poison through grief on discovering that the man to whom she had been married had another wife living, is still in the City Hospital. She is a great sufferer, and Dr. Beemer says her condition is serious. It is an extremely bad case, and her recovery now is very doubtful.

A deputation of five members of the Peterboro Council visited this city yesterday and were shown through the market buildings, weigh house and market stalls by Mayor Doran. The Peterboro Council is thinking of building a new market hall, and the deputation came here to get points.

Detective Campbell and yesterday arrested David Graham on a charge of obtaining goods under false pretenses. Graham is suspected of other offences. He has been in the hands of the police before.

Yesterday morning about 3 o'clock Mrs. Scott, wife of Samuel Scott, corner of Victoria-avenue and Robert-street, had occasion to go for a doctor. She left the door open and during her absence a sneak thief entered and carried away $2.50 in cash from the till.

Riel's Citizenship.

WASHINGTON, March 13.—The President's message on the Riel case states that Riel's friends were informed by the United States Government that his alleged United States citizenship did not give him immunity from Canadian laws for offences committed within British territory.

Falling off in U. S. Exports.

WASHINGTON, March 13.—The Bureau of Statistics reports the total value of the exports of domestic breadstuffs from the United States during February was $9,283,765 against $10,160,889 in February, 1888; for the eight months ended with February $92,166,445, against $93,714,324 during the same period in the previous year.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

DEATH OF THE BIRD BILL.

MR. BROWN'S MEASURE SLAUGHTERED IN COMMITTEE.

The Member for Lambton Accuses the Manufacturers' Life Insurance Company of Making False Returns.

OTTAWA, March 14.—The main feature of yesterday's session of the House was the slaughter in committee of the whole of Mr. Brown's bird bill. The House made very short work of it by going into committee and sitting for about ten minutes. There was little or no discussion. Col. Tisdale moved that the committee rise, and this was carried by a vote of 67 to 60. It is not probable that Mr. Brown will attempt to "re-committee" the bill again this session. This is the course he pursued the last time the committee arose without reporting the bill.

In the House yesterday Mr. Lister moved for copies of correspondence between the Manufacturers' Insurance Company and the Superintendent of Insurance respecting the list of stockholders of said company in accordance with the statute in that behalf. Mr. Lister said he knew very little about the Manufacturers' Life, but he believed that the statutory returns made to the Superintendent of Insurance were not correct in many particulars.

Sir John Macdonald, President of the company, told the House that the gentlemen who composed the Board of Directors of the Manufacturers' Life were among the most wealthy and substantial in the country. When he made this statement he did not include himself. "My standing," said Sir John, "is political and not financial." He had nothing to shield in the company's affairs, and he promised that the papers would be brought down at once. "I am anxious," continued the Premier, "that if there is anything wrong that the fullest investigation should be made." The motion then passed.

The House had an extended sitting in committee on Mr. Kirkpatrick's reciprocal wrecking bill, and the bill now stands for a third reading. The bill since its introduction has been before a special committee and has been very much remodelled. The Committee of the Whole, after a long discussion, decided to adopt the amendment of the special committee and the bill will be [illegible] to enable the members to understand it thoroughly.

Mr. Barron got his answer yesterday about Horse Island in Georgian Bay. Sir John Macdonald said that the island which contains 15,000 acres had been sold to a Mr. Cousens for $2000. The island contained a great deal of timber. It was sold under the provisions of the Manitoulin treaty of 1861. It is said that the purchaser had a great profit on his investment.

The House adjourned at midnight.

MINISTERS' EXPENSES.

A Lively Time in the Public Account Committee—Militia Clothing.

OTTAWA, March 13.—There was a field day in the Public Accounts Committee this morning. Seven members of the Cabinet were present to defend the various items which appear in the Auditor-General's report for their personal expenses when traveling. The Minister of Militia's expenses was the subject of a lively criticism from the Liberal members of the committee. His trip to British Columbia last summer cost $900. Auditor-General McDougall told the committee that he never asked a minister for vouchers or the details of their expenses when on Government business. He took it for granted that they only drew their actual expenditure.

Mr. Mulock called up the matter of supplying clothing to the militia of the Dominion. A great bundle of contracts and vouchers from the Department were placed on the table. Mr. Mulock questioned Col. Walker Powell Adjutant-General, at length on the quality of clothing supplied the volunteers. Col. Powell said that while the clothing furnished by the Canadian manufacturers was not nearly a good as the English article, yet it was yearly becoming better. The Colonel said the principal trouble was in the dye. It appears that a great many complaints have been made against the quality of the clothing supplied and the Queen's Own of Toronto have ordered new uniforms from England. Mr. Mulock and his friends are evidently attempting to show that the supply of militia clothing in Canada is held by a monopoly and that in consequence the volunteers of the different regiments are the sufferers. The Minister of Militia maintains that the volunteers now are as well uniformed as to durability as when the goods came from England. More evidence is to be taken to-morrow.

The special committee to whom was referred Herman Cook's bill to compel railway companies to land their passengers in all cases on a platform and to call down the athletic baggage smasher this morning decided not to report the bill. The Minister of Justice not his seal of disapproval to the measure.

The bill of Mr. Burdett relating to the supply of skim milk to cheese and butter factories was also before the committee but no decision was arrived at.

Mr. Smith, M.P., president of the Canadian Clydesdale Association left for Toronto to-night to attend the annual fair of the association in the Queen City.

The Senate continued the debate to-day on Hon. John Macdonald's motion on extended trade with the West Indies and South America.

To-day the Speaker of the Senate entertained at luncheon the president and members of the Royal Canadian Academy of Art, at present in Ottawa, and the president and secretary and the officers of the Art Association of Ottawa.

MONTREAL MATTERS.

Another Circular From Mr. Wiman in the Telegraph Business.

MONTREAL, March 13.—The trial of John Benson for the murder of his wife, Bridget Doyle, was commenced in the Court of Queen's Bench to-day.

Frank Varey, an accountant in the employ of the liquidators of the Exchange Bank, is missing and so are the proceeds of an $800 check which he was sent to the Quebec Bank to deposit.

Erastus Wiman has issued another circular to the shareholders of the Montreal Telegraph Company, in which with a whine on one hand and a threat on the other he offers to pay a 6 per cent. dividend to settle all difficulties.

Southwold's Scourge.

ST. THOMAS, March 13.—Smallpox in Southwold continues its ravages. Notwithstanding the precautions of the Local Board of Health the latest reports state that there have been 31 cases to date and eleven deaths. The St. Thomas Board of Health has also made vigorous efforts to stamp out the disease and Assistant Superintendent Larmour of the G. T. R. has instructed conductors to guard against the spread of this disease by persons getting aboard the trains from infected districts.

The Bay of Quinte Bridge Contracts.

BELLEVILLE, March 13.—The contracts for the bay bridge have been awarded as follows: Brown Manufacturing Co., Belleville, superstructure, $36,825; McNeely & Walters, Lindsay, substructure, $48,224.95; total $85,049.95. The bridge will be 1971 feet long exclusive of the approaches, or about half a mile in all. The contracts, adding necessary expenses, will fall about $4500 below the estimate.

A Boston Failure.

BOSTON, March 13.—Noyes & Fish, boot and shoe jobbers, have assigned with liabilities of $110,000.

A Spanish Steamer Wrecked.

MADRID, March 13.—The Government has received despatches announcing the loss of the steamer Reina, which had a Spanish military expedition on board. The vessel was wrecked off the Philippine Islands. Forty-two persons were drowned and 127 were saved.

A Colonist's Furniture of Opium.

PORT HURON, Mich., March 13.—An auction sale of 42 boxes and 70 cans of mixed opium took place at the Custom House in this city yesterday. Lee Pond, a Chinaman from New York, was the successful bidder, paying $3.00 each for boxes, $3.90 for 20 cans and $3.75 for 40 cans.

AN OVATION TO PARNELL.

THE IRISH LEADER GREETED BY AN IMMENSE THRONG.

John Morley's Characteristic Speech—Mr. Parnell's Arraignment of the Government.

LONDON, March 13.—St. James' Hall was crowded this evening with people anxious to hear Mr. Parnell's speech. Mr. Morley presided. The committee in charge were yesterday compelled to suspend the issue of tickets for the meeting.

The hall was handsomely decorated with flags and mottoes. Among the inscriptions were: "Freedom for England and Ireland." "No Coercion, No Forgery, No Slander." "Humanity, Union, Justice, Peace, Liberty."

On shamrock-entwined flagstaffs was a statue representing Britannia with her left arm encircling Erin's waist and an angel overhead bearing the motto, "Peace and Good-Will towards All Men."

Among the prominent men present were Messrs. A. J. Mundella, Shaw-Lefevre, H. H. Fowler, James Stansfeld, H. H. Asquith, W. R. Rowland, Arnold Morley and many Parnellite members of Parliament.

In opening the meeting Chairman John Morley said he could not refuse when asked to preside, because the meeting was of such a remarkable character. He felt that if his presence would be of the slightest use he was bound to attend. [Cheers.] He said he never saw so great a meeting as this nor one on behalf of a nobler cause. "I bear a message," said Mr. Morley, "from the great chief, who despite his years would have attended this meeting had he not been entreated to spare himself. [Cheers.] He would not spare himself of his own free will because he sees the time rapidly, almost momentarily, approaching when we shall cautiously and deliberately, step by step but surely, unfalteringly and unflinchingly get to the bottom of these Irish proceedings. [Cheers.] The resolutions which our committee have framed express the deliberate judgment, deep feeling and stern, resolute, deliberate purpose of a great party which has not yet taken up a cause without carrying it through. [Cheers.] It may be that the Tories will carry Home Rule. [Laughter.] I do not want to understand Mr. Parnell's presence to-night as binding him and his friends and countrymen to our party. It is a case of alliance rather than of fusion. Mr. Parnell's first duty is to Ireland. He has no right to think of our parties except in relation to Ireland. [Cheers.] But I look forward to the day when, still remaining first an Irish leader and statesman, Mr. Parnell will be able to partake and draw a united Ireland to partake in the great fabric of the free government of the Empire of which we are striving to make Ireland an integral, incorporated, united, reconciled and equal member." [Cheers.]

Mr. Morley reminded his hearers that the whole matter rested with the nation and that a triumph depended upon each one's making himself a centre for right ideas. "If we do this," he declared, "the time is not distant when we shall see the false image with a front of Tory brass and feet of Discontent clay trampled in the dust under the feet of the honest citizens of England, Scotland and Ireland." [Loud cheers.]

Mr. Parnell was unable to speak for several minutes owing to volleys of cheers, the singing of "He's a Jolly Good Fellow," etc. When quiet was restored he said:

I cannot attempt to describe my gratification and delight at the reception given me. Such evenings will do more for the union than twenty centuries of the firm government—[laughter]—of Salisbury and Balfour. I am sure my countrymen throughout the world will be equally honored with me by your reception of their cause. I prefer to draw lessons from passing events. This great meeting is assembled to protest against the petty and malignant meanness of Mr. Balfour's government in Ireland. The chairman expressed hope that I would be a privy councillor. On that point I must be pardoned for saying nothing, but it is legitimate to enquire whether there is not something rotten in a system of government which compels the ostracism from the affairs of your empire of 86 of the 103 Irish members. That is one of the first results of seven centuries of firm government, much firmer than we are ever likely to see again—[cheers]—a government under which it was only necessary to get up forged letters against a man and not to prove them to enable the Lord-Lieutenant to have him beheaded. Fortunately they cannot do such things now-a-days.

What then has been one of the results of that system? That we Irish members from the very necessity of our position are unable to take that share in the duties of government which is one of the natural and justifiable hopes of all men entering Parliament. If we violated the pledges upon which alone we obtained the trust of our constituencies, namely, that we should refuse to accept place or office for ourselves or others from any English Government as long as the just rights of Ireland were not conceded, were we so base and mean we should fail to find a single constituency to re-elect us. Well then, is it not a matter for inquiry why Mr. Balfour cannot govern Ireland two years without imprisoning 24 Irish members of Parliament as common felons for offences unknown to our law in England, mainly for speaking and writing in the newspapers? [Cries of "Shame."]

We now come to another question. I will not enter into the details of the charges and allegations made by The Times, but speaking generally I want to know why, if the charges and allegations had any foundation, the Government of the country did not take them up themselves and investigate them in their source by the machinery at their command and if they wanted special machinery why did not they construct it with the power at their command? They had all the machinery in Ireland they required for the detection of crime, especially constructed for them by Parliament. If they wanted extra power they could have obtained it.

When were these charges first started? When was the command first given to the forger and perjurer to obtain or invent evidence which would result in putting us on trial on criminal charges, the punishment for which was penal servitude for life? It was at the very moment when Lord Carnarvon was inviting us to confer with him on the future government of Ireland so as to a new constitution—for these were his words in opening the conversation—which was to be given to Ireland, establishing her Parliament. That was one of the reasons why this business of unearthing crime was left to amateurs—[laughter]—and a pretty mess they made of it.

Fatal Colliery Explosion.

LONDON, March 13.—A terrible explosion occurred in the Brynnally colliery at Wrexham to-day, resulting in a great loss of life. Eleven dead bodies have been taken from the pit and three miners have been rescued.

A Row in a Life Insurance Co.

NEW YORK, March 13.—The annual meeting of the policy holders of the Mutual Benefit Life Association of America was held here to-day and Policy holder Anthony Comstock and a score of other policy holders raised the biggest kind of a row. They assert that the management of the company is corrupt and that its funds have been misappropriated.

Farmers Compare Notes.

Familiar Discussion of Live Topics at Lakefield.—Much Practical Information Exchanged.

LAKEFIELD, March 13th, 1889.

There was rather a small attendance at the public meeting held in the P.A.A. Hall to-day, at the meeting held under the auspices of the West Riding Farmer's Institute. Mr. Dawson Kennedy, president occupied the chair.

In the absence of expected speakers, the chairman gave a brief resume of the proceedings at the meeting of the Central Farmers Institute. He said that Prof. Shaw spoke on the subject of "Making Farmers Institute more Effective." He advised closer union and co operation among local Institutes. He also advised the holding of monster picnics under the auspices of local Institutes, and the minister of Agricultural had arranged to supply these picnics with speakers. Accordingly arrangement were well under way for holding a monster picnic at Rice Lake in June Mr. Calcutt had agreed to furnish transportation facilities and do the advertising and, no doubt with proper management, the picnic would be a great success. Prof. Shaw's proposal for the appointment of a salaried Director of Institutes was laid over till next year. The paper on Statute Labor proposed the division of roads into sections under a proper superintendent, but no decision was arrived at. The discussion of agricultural education pointed to the desirability of agricultural education in the public schools, but there was no definite decision on the subject. One speaker advised that all rural teachers should serve a term at the Agricultural College before getting a certificate. A proposal was made to have legislation requiring the compulsory use of wide tire wagons. The question of County Council Reform was also discussed, the sentiment of the meeting being strongly in favor of reduction in the number of representatives, but not to abolish those bodies. A resolution was adopted to the effect that while general political questions were to be excluded from Farmers' Institutes, the discussion of fiscal and economical subjects affecting the interests of the farmers were proper subjects. A motion was unanimously adopted, favoring the withdrawal of the government grant from the Provincial Exhibition. It was decided that the subjects for discussion at the next meeting should be confined to legislative matters affecting farmers, leaving the discussion of practical subjects to the local institutes. Rev. W. F. Clarke advised that every farmer should keep some bees. A large amount of honey was wasted from having no bees to gather it.

Mr. MCKIBBON said he had kept bees in a cellar with good success.

SPECIAL FERTILIZERS.

Rev. Mr. BENNETT read a paper on gypsum as a fertiliser. He had lived in a gypsum country, Nova Scotia. Sulphate of lime, common lime, was used as manure for centuries. A most important form of lime was the phospate, which was demanded in large quantities for the bones and milk of animals. This demand robbed the soil of an ingredient which must be artificially supplied. This was supplied by ground bones and the use of phosphatic rocks. Gypsum was sulphate of lime, and its value depended upon the form of its application. Gypsum did not largely enter into the composition of the plant, but is gathered up the ammonia in manure and from air and held it for the plant, while lime set it free Gypsum applied to clover absorbed ammonia from the air and held it in solution for the plant. Gypsum pissed in a corn-hill would attract moisture. The good effects of superphosphates largely depended upon the gypsum developed in the generation of that compound. Gypsum was a valuable fertilizer for turnips which required a large amount of sulphuric acid. Rev. Mr. Bennett's paper was a well considered one, and greatly interested the practical farmers present.

Mr. KENNEDY said that on clover his experience had been that he got an extra ton of hay for every barrel of gypsum applied.

After a general conversational discussion the meeting adjourned.

THE AFTERNOON SESSION.

There was a considerably larger attendance at the afternoon meeting. In the absence of the chairman, Mr. Henry Garbutt, Vice-President, occupied the chair.

Mr. J. COYLE BROWN gave an address on the subject of the Best Kind of Education for the Farmers' Sons and Daughters. Referring to the Educational report, he defined the different subjects now taught. These comprised the three r's, writing and general geography. Little importance was given to grammar as usually taught, but composition was emphasized, as well as drawing. The outlines of the subjects of agriculture should be taught, and he was glad that the Ontario Government were preparing a text book on the subject. Botany, zoology and entomology were important. Owing to the great depredation of insects, the study of the habits, growth and means of destruction of insect pests was important. A knowledge of geology was not of more than remote importance. If all the subjects on the public school curriculum were taught, as well as others that should be there were taught, there was not enough of time for the purpose. If children were taken from the school at thirteen they would not know enough, and if they were kept longer at school they would, under the present class of teaching, be unfitted for farm life. To remedy this, Mr. Brown proposed that, from April 1st to October 1st, rural schools for the larger pupils should open at 8 o'clock and close at 11 o'clock, and that the afternoons be devoted to the smaller children, while the boys could spend the afternoons in farm labour. Under this system a boy could continue in school till seventeen and have both hands and head educated, and not have received an entirely intellectual education that unfitted him for farm life. The subject of agriculture would be introduced into high schools, the training schools for teachers.

General comment in accordance with Mr. Brown's proposal was made, and the following resolution was adopted with only two dissentient voices:—

Moved by Mr. J. A. Davidson, seconded by Mr. H. C. Garbutt,—That this meeting, having heard Mr. Brown's proposal of the division of the school day into two parts—the morning for the older pupils and the afternoon to the smaller pupils—is of the opinion that the proposal, if it can be practically applied, would tend to give farmers' sons and daughters an education both of head and hand, and, at the same time, preserve a love for farm life.

Rev. Mr. BENNETT repeated his paper on Gypsum as a Fertiliser, the larger attendance making it interesting to those not present in the morning.

Mr. J. A. DAVIDSON read a paper on the cost of farm implements, stating that too much money was spent in purchasing new implements while those they had were still in good order. In doing this farmers often get into debt and debt leads to trouble.

The CHAIRMAN stated that more loss was caused by the careless use of farm machinery than limiting the time of their usefulness.

Mr. T. W. MANN emphasized the importance of protecting machinery from the effects of the weather.

Mr. G. J. GALVIN read a paper on "Fruit Culture." Over cropping had *im*poverished the soil and made other departments necessary. He gave his experience The farm he occupied had trees growing and bearing which were planted 53 years ago, and more of the original orchard would have remained if they had been given good care. The kind of apples he recommended were the Colvert, the Duchess of Oldenburg, St. Laurence and Ben Davis. Of all these apples the Colvert was the best. The samples he produced were grown on trees that had been in bearing 53 years.

Mr. BROWN referred specially to the importance of storing apples well. They should be kept in a cellar at a temperature of about 40 degrees.

The general opinion was that about 30 or 35 feet as the proper distance to plant apple trees.

Mr. ISAAC GARBUTT stated that his experience of the Northern Spy was that it did not begin to bear till it was 20 years old, and then only bore two or three years, whereas, a Famuese or Snow Apple tree alongside, planted forty years, bore a large crop.

Mr. BAPTIE believed a good orchard paid; Northern Spies would bear early if they were grafted from bearing trees. Apple trees did best from grafting on to native stock.

Mr. GALVIN said there was an immense amount of money wasted in planting trees, through sheer neglect of care and culture.

Mr. BROWN said the frequent mistake made was planting trees before underdraining the soil.

Mr. J. A. DAVIDSON said he had had good success in planting orchard trees on underdrained soil.

Mr. SAMUEL MCKIBBON bore witness to the importance of cultivating and loosening the soil around trees.

Votes of thanks were tendered to those giving addresses and to the representatives of the press for their attendance. The convention adjourned to meet in Peterborough on March 25th.

THE CANADIAN PACIFIC.

Surveys Made for a Line From Niagara Falls to Buffalo.

BUFFALO, March 13.—Aftermany months' consideration of the matter, it is now quite probable that the Canadian Pacific will extend its tracks from Niagara Falls, Ont., and come into Buffalo by way of Tonawanda, using either the Lackawanna or the Lehigh Valley tracks to get down town. For some weeks surveys have been in progress. The surveys are from the overhead crossing of the Lackawanna and the New York Central beyond North Buffalo Junction, to below Niagara Falls. Instead of following the New York Central tracks to Tonawanda, the new line will run around the bend in the river, and a station will be placed near the Bedell ferry. This change will greatly accommodate the immense lumber interests which already have extended nearly three miles south of Tonawanda Creek, and which, it is believed, are destined to connect Buffalo with Tonawanda. Below Tonawanda the Canadian Pacific will run parallel with the New York Central and between it and the river. The crossing to Canada below Niagara Falls has not been decided upon, and this part of the plan is believed to be a blind, as it is thought the real intention of the projectors is to bridge the river much farther up the stream. A company will be incorporated with a capital stock of about $300,000, and the line will then either be sold or permanently leased to the Canadian Pacific.

TERRIFIC BOILER EXPLOSION.

Many Persons Scalded and Seriously Injured—A Child Killed.

READING, Pa., March 13.—A nest of three boilers at the St. Nicholas Colliery near Mahoney City exploded at 11 o'clock this morning with terrific effect. One of the boilers was blown 500 yards, another was hurled through a blacksmith shop and the other was torn into fragments. The boiler house and blacksmith shop were wrecked. Mrs. Louisa Hoffman with her child in her arms was passing at the time. A fragment of iron broke her hip and killed the child. James Delaney, a driver passing with his team, had his skull fractured. Michael Warren, a lad of 13 on the same wagon, had his thigh broken and leg crushed. Edward Seltner, a painter at work on the breaker, had his skull crushed. Patrick Warner and Edward Watts were terribly injured by flying pieces of iron. Others were scalded and injured.

The Case for The Times Closed.

LONDON, March 13.—At the sitting of the Parnell Commission to-day, Mr. Soames, solicitor for The Times, testified that he had found that the police of Cork believed Coffee, the Cork reporter, who testified yesterday that a statement he had made to a policeman was absolutely false. Coffee signed the statement in witness' office, and said he would testify that it was true. Coffee had not received the full sum to which he was entitled. Witnesses for The Times received from 10s to £3 3s daily.

On cross-examination by Mr. Biggar, Mr. Soames testified that he sent Kirby to America to see Sheridan, who asked £20,000 to come to London and testify for The Times. Witness on receipt of this information immediately recalled Kirby.

Levy, formerly a member of the Fenian Supreme Council, testified as to his experience as a member of that body. On cross-examination he admitted he had been imprisoned for a year for embezzling his employer's money. [Laughter.]

Attorney-General Webster then announced that the case for The Times was finished.

At the request of Sir Charles Russell, Justice Hannen ordered the release from prison of William O'Brien and Timothy Harrington, whom it is necessary for Sir Charles to consult, on condition that they abstained from agitation during their liberty.

Prior to the adjournment Sir Charles Russell asked the court whether it was prepared to express judgment regarding the question of an interim report on the forged letters.

Presiding Justice Hannen said: "We are not prepared to give an answer limiting our freedom of action. The extraordinary circumstances attending the withdrawal of the letters speak for themselves. No report can enhance or diminish their effect. But we have not yet come to a decision as regards the making of a report."

The commission then adjourned until April 2.

CHAPTER I.

BEVERLIN ARRIVES.

A rather peculiar legend having crept into circulation of late, concerning my friend Beverlin, it appears not unwise that the substantial facts in the case (if facts they may be called) should be herewith submitted; inasmuch as his own autobiographical account of the actual occurrence will probably never be given to the world.

Beverlin, poor fellow, is indeed one of the most remarkable specimens of manhood extant, and it is really no wonder that he is gaped and stared at wherever he goes to such an unpleasant extent. Certainly not an especially remarkable man by nature, either in size or features; for the latter, with the exception of his bold imaginative eyes, when gauged by the standards of national beauty, are rather commonplace than otherwise; but for those distinctive marks, which might seem attributable at first to a "lapsus naturæ," and which serve to brand him indelibly upon the average memory. The top of his admirably shaped head is surmounted by a full, bushy mat of snow white hair—such as that which accompanies extreme old age. Now this abnormal growth—abnormal for his thirty years—might possibly be overlooked, since it is frequently concealed within the crown of his hat, were it not that it falls over, in genuine wig like fashion, an undergrowth of dark chestnut locks fringing the circumference of his head—thus completing, by contrast, a singularity of aspect entirely unique. Not only that, but one side of his jetty mustache offers the same stricken white appearance, and serves to arouse incessant inquiry in the minds of beholders as to how it happened, and what could have caused such a disastrous effect. His face, which is large and full and of a ruddy tint, is further accentuated by the play of a facial muscle that seems strangely crippled and out of gear. Beverlin himself is apparently unconscious of the notice he commands—a most happy circumstance, for were he indeed aware that the intrusion of his piebald head and weeping profile into theatre parquets or hotel dining rooms was invariably the signal for universal comment, his days would be miserable. A lack of personal sensitiveness fortunately screens him, without designating him at once as a man with a history.

Very well; now for the history:

Some years ago Beverlin had been suffering terribly with sciatica; had exhausted his vocabulary of expletives in the expression of his agony, and had invented several very fine new ones. He had been house bound for months, unable to read, and a victim to the most depressing conditions. The weather for the most part had been bleak and cold as well as scant of sunshine, and the summer had seemed very slow in coming. By and by, however, the days began to grow milder, and he became seized with an invincible longing for a change. He hated the very paper which adorned his walls—the curtains and heavy furniture of his room weighed him down with a sense of intimacy and oppression. He wanted to break away from his shackles—to be free—to go away and forget the miserable, grinding months of his immediate past; he became inwardly assured that a little sea air, together with good substantial cookery, and the entire absence of the machinery of bachelor existence, if possible, were the only tonics necessary to restore him to robust health and eradicate existing evils. Accordingly he penned a rheumatic little note to Walter Carroll (an old college chum now developed into a thriving doctor in a neighboring village), saying that he had decided to avail himself of an invitation of long standing, which he hoped still held good; and if quite convenient would become the partner of Carroll's unbleached habiliments during the ensuing month, provided he and his supplementary walking stick, abetted by carriages and railway trains, could manage to make out the journey.

Carroll, like a true chum (and with professional clairvoyance), wrote back a delighted rejoiner, but wished to set before Beverlin the exact conditions of his manner of life, "not by way of apology, you understand," he wrote, "but merely as a preventive of possible disappointment to you whose manner of life has been so vastly different. We live very plainly, my sister and I, in an entirely isolated situation, seeing really but little of society save such as my practice entails. I rather prefer this, as my recreation is given up to study; and Amelia, you know, is yet in mourning for that worthless lover whom I cannot regret."

"That will just exactly suit me in every respect," said Beverlin, pausing in the midst of the letter. "This Amelia will be off weeping somewhere, or bothered with domestic cares, and Carroll and I can smoke and indulge our dual solitude to any extent; suits me to a dot."

"I must, however," continued the writer, "apprise you of some of the traditions afloat, concerning our home, before permitting you to come 'mose' and 'bunk' under a roof which was formerly supposed to be haunted by spooks and hobgoblins of the most salient type. Nothing, you must know, would induce a negro to enter this house after night, or indeed cross the threshold in the daytime. It was asserted to me, at the time of the purchase, that strange unearthly noises had been heard here at midnight; that the dying groans of a woman had floated out upon the ears of passers by; that white, mysterious figures, visible in blue nebulous lights had skipped and danced with noiseless feet over the rotten, barren floors during long nights, to vanish with the approach of dawn. This unprepossessing, avoided, mysterious house stood upon a knoll, flanked on one side by four of the tallest, grimmest pine trees I ever beheld. It struck me as being just the spot for a student of nature and science to dwell in, if properly repaired, and I determined to buy it. The fence had fallen down, the yard was full of tall, noisome weeds where snakes and lizards crawled in unmolested seclusion. The windows were battered, the weather boarding hanging loose from the nails in places, the doors gone or swinging from rusty hinges, the sun and rain penetrating the roof, the sides and ceilings of the rooms presenting a patchwork of plastering and uncovered lath. In the evening hundreds of swallows and bats would fly out of the chimneys and circle back again into the dark, cheerless interior. It was as abode of gloom and desolation beyond conception, and it may have been a bravado of fate as much as the other advantages (not the least of which, Amelia assures me, is the immunity from mosquitoes), that induced our locating, after Cherbourgh renovation, in this forsaken, dismantled dwelling. Whether this process has been entirely successful in uprooting the spooks from their ancient lair is yet uncertain: but it is quite positive that we have never been annoyed by anything except an occasional too predatory rat, or the altogether too frequent and palpable presence of the patorius fostidus. Having thus, dear old friend, confessed all of the disadvantages of my residence (which I could not in mercy have withheld from a sick man), I can only add that the warmest welcome in the world awaits you if you decide to come, and whatever medical skill I am possessed of shall be placed at your service. This, with the sea air and Amelia's management, will put you upon your pins in short order. Yours,

CARROLL."

"Amelia's management!" sneered Beverlin. "I wish Amelia was in Herzegovina! However"——

It was the time of year when the twilights are rather short; and when Beverlin emerged from the train which had accomplished his destination for him, as he looked about him expectantly it seemed very dark beyond the faint area which a grimy station lamp illuminated. He scanned the neighboring darkness helplessly. There seemed nobody present anywhere. Carroll had not come to meet him—a strange proceeding—and the ways of the town were new to him. The sound of a distant and very discordant band of music broke upon his ear.

"Ha!" he said impatiently, "a circus in the provincial arena! That explains all. But surely Carroll, that serious fellow, has not forsaken me for such a pretext. Perhaps Amelia," (always mentioned sneeringly) "wished to drown her grief in the contemplation of the dizzy trapeze."

Happily at this point an old gray headed negro touched him opportunely on the sleeve and inquired if he might have the "honah, sah," of driving him to the hotel? Beverlin felt immensely relieved at this and accepted at once, as his sachel was heavy with medicine bottles, and he was conscious of extreme fatigue.

"To the Asticott house, sah?" queried this hoary headed coachman, touching his hat, a damaged beaver not unacquainted with ham fat gloss.

"No," said Beverlin, debating within himself. "Do you happen to knew where Dr. Walter Carroll lives, eh?"

"Oh, yes, sah—heck, heck—yes, sah, I does!" replied the dusky one, breaking into a grin and finally chuckling all over. "Mighty fine doctah, him is, puffic gen'lman. Oh, yes, I knows whah Doc Carroll lives—heck, heck—pow'ful lonely road dat out yondah! Yeh see, yeh dribes out past de ingine house, out ovah Squiah Johnsing's hill"——

"Well, never mind the road," interrupted Beverlin, clambering into a lofty vehicle resembling Noah's ark on wheels. "Drive me there—and don't be long about it, for I am very weak and tired," and, quite exhausted, he sank back upon the gummy oilcloth cushions with a sense of relief.

Corn Sewing

is a process conducted by the agency of tight boots all the year round. Corn reaping is best conducted through the agency of Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor, the only safe and sure-pop corn cure. Putnam's Extractor is now widely imitated. Beware of all poisonous and sore producing substitutes. 6dw11

The Loss of the Hair

Is a great misfortune and the sight of a bald head should be a warning to you to take the best possible care of your hair. A little of Dr. Dorenwend's "Hair Magic" used occasionally will prevent all chances of its falling out or turning gray, and will remove all traces of dandruff. Every druggist has it in stock. Ask for it. dw

A Dreadful Doom.

To be unable to satisfy hunger without being distressed by heartburn, indigestion, sick stomach, dizziness or faintness, seems a dreadful doom. All who suffer thus will find prompt relief and permanent cure in Burdock Blood Bitters. B. B. B. positively cures dyspepsia in any form. 2w10d

Common Croup

is often fatal when not remedied in time. Leslie B. Nicholson, 19 Wellesley avenue, Toronto, says:—"As a quick cure for croup, colds, sore throat, chilblains, etc., I can recommend Hagyard's Yellow Oil." It is a sure cure. Directions accompany each bottle. 2w10d

Piles! Piles! Itching Piles.

SYMPTOMS—Moisture, intense itching and stinging, most at night, worse by scratching. If allowed to continue tumors form, which often bleed and ulcerate, becoming very sore. SWAYNE'S OINTMENT stops the itching and bleeding, heals ulceration, and in most cases removes the tumors. At druggists, or by mail, for 50 cents. Dr. Swayne & Son, Philadelphia. DR. DORENWEND'S

GREAT GERMAN HAIR MAGIC.

The equal of this great preparation is yet to be found. It is an unfailing Restorer for grey hair—it stops all falling out of the hair—it removes all dandruff and keeps the scalp clean. On bald heads (if there are but the faintest traces of roots) the Magic will produce a fine growth. Will you try it? It will you let your hair go, and become prematurely old? What do you say? All druggists everywhere have it for sale. Ask for it. Do not let the druggist tell you he has something just as good—many have dead stock of other hair tonics on hand and try to shove them off in this way.

Off For the North West.

Tuesday a party of eight persons with two cars of effects left Peterborough for Toronto to join the colonist special which left for the North West that night. The party were mainly from the vicinity of Bobcaygeon.

Seasonable.

A glance in J. J. Sheehy's window will convince any lady that for a good selection of corsets, his store is the proper place. Inspection invited. See advertisement in another column.

30 CHESTS of our double extra fine new Japan tea arrived to-day, 5 lbs for $1 at M. R. Kidd's.

They Look Before They Leap.

A wholesale liquor agent who has been canvassing the town for orders the last few days reports that he can sell nothing at all, as the hotelmen and dealers are all waiting the result of the repeal vote on the 4th of April.

How Strange It is

To see people starting at the head of George street, passing all the grocery houses on the street, thereby giving them the go-by, and coming to a halt at the Opera House Block, to secure some of W. J. Morrow's celebrated teas. One half the population of Peterborough are using our now celebrated 25c. tea. For the next few years we will sell goods away below other houses, so you can always rely on buying goods cheaper from us than elsewhere. Watch for our Saturday bargains and be sure to call,

Curlians.

The Intelligencer says of the Peterborough-Belleville curling match Monday:—After the play last night the visitors were entertained in the club room, and a very pleasant gathering there was, at which speeches were made by President Biggar and by Dr. Boucher, of Peterborough, Second Vice President of the Ontario branch. As a result of the friendly sentiments expressed, it was resolved to have annual home and home matches between Peterborough and Belleville in the future.

The point game for the club medal will be concluded this afternoon and evening.

Masonic.

The Masons of Peterborough have received an invitation to attend an emergency meeting of Ontario and Hope Lodges, A.F. & A. M., to be held in the Masonic Hall, Port Hope, this evening, when a lecture will be delivered on "An hour with the craft one hundred years ago," with historical recollections and reminiscences up to the time of the formation of the Grand Lodge of Canada, by R.W. Bro. J. Robertson, Toronto, Deputy Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Canada. It is probable a number of the fraternity in Peterborough will go down to Port Hope for the purpose.

The Siren Waltz.

The following report of the appearance of Miss Waltz, who sings at the St. Patrick's concert here on Monday evening, March 18th, is from the Belleville Ontario:—"Miss Waltz was the star of the evening. She seemed in her best mood and appeared to enjoy the freedom which the building afforded her voice. Her runs and trills were perfect, while the enthusiasm of her voice and magnetism of her manner thrilled and held the audience suspended, as it were, until the last note died away, when the general outburst of whispered acclamation showed the breaking of the spell under which the audience had been held. It was the same with her every number."

A Board of Trade.

Tuesday night a petition signed by about forty of the representative business men of the town was sent down to Mayor Stevenson at Ottawa, with the request that he at once notify the town clerk to call a public meeting for the purpose of discussing the formation of a Board of Trade. The petition was circulated by Mr. J. Hampden Burnham, who has taken a deep interest in the project. The movement has the support of all the business men of the town. Peterborough had a Board of Trade once before, which only survived a short time and became defunct several years ago, but the promoters of the new organization think there is plenty of room in here for another one.

A Coming Event.

Do not fail to be present at the Opera House, on Monday evening, March 18th, as J. J. Curran, Q.C., M.P., Canada's brilliant Irish orator, will lecture on Ireland and her cause. A musical programme will also be furnished; the services of Miss Alice Waltz, America's gifted soprano, formerly of Beecher's Church Choir, Brooklyn, N. Y., having been engaged. Also the best local talent, represented by Mrs. W. J. Morrow, Mrs. Thos. Dunn, Miss McIlmoyle, Messrs. Thos. Dunn, A. Elliott, C. S. Shaw and G. Pearse.

GOT TO MOVE ALONG; therefore the price is no object. Good groceries within the reach of all at M. R. Kidd's.

The Dominion Government Censured.

At a regular meeting of the Knights of Labor last night the following resolution was unanimously adopted:—

Resolved, that we condemn the action of the Dominion Government in assisting emigrants to this country, when there is not employment enough to keep the laborers and mechanics from emigrating to the United States; when, if the money was used in settling naturalized Canadians in the North-West, it would suit the majority of the people of Canada, as there is a large number of them would like to be settled on farms.

Copies of the resolution will be sent to Mr. James Stevenson, M.P., and the Knights of Labor representatives at Ottawa.

Card to the Rescue.

The Los Angeles Herald says of a young man who was not long ago a resident of Peterborough:—"A probably fatal accident was prevented yesterday by the presence of mind and prompt action of a young man named Carl Smart. About 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon as one of the cable cars was going up Temple street, a horse attached to a buggy containing two ladies, became frightened and started to run. When about five car lengths from the cable train the horse became unmanageable, and the lady who was driving lost control of the animal, which turned short across the track, throwing one of the ladies out, and she, becoming entangled in the reins, was dragged some distance. When the car was only about 50 feet distant, young Smart, who was riding on the front seat, jumped off and ran ahead and succeeded in stopping the horse, which was standing just over the lady, who would probably have been trampled to death had not assistance come just when it did. The lady was not seriously hurt, and was able to go home without assistance. The other lady remained in the buggy, and was not injured."

Two Talented Sisters.

The Manitoba Free Press thus refers to Mrs. J. H. Billington (nee Miss Hattie Johnston), a former Peterborough lady now resident in Winnipeg:—"Winnipeg has received a new addition to the musical talent of the city in the person of Mrs. Billington, a well-known organist and pianiste, of Peterborough, Ont, who has arrived in our midst. During the past six or seven years this lady has assisted in the music of the leading churches of Peterborough, and for a year and a half previous to leaving for Winnipeg was in charge of the choir of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church in that city." That her talent is appreciated, the following, taken from a notice of an "At Home" in the same paper, will prove:—"One of the principal features of the entertainment was the finished manner in which Mrs. Billington presided at the piano. The solos and marches by this lady captivated the audience, and her accompaniments were well given." Of Mrs. McJanet (nee Miss Eliza Johnston) also formerly of Peterborough, the Ottawa Free Press says:—"Mrs. T. McJanet, who took part in the literary programme at the Oddfellow's "At Home" last evening, scored a great success. It was her first appearance before an Ottawa audience, and those who heard her were well pleased.

The Deputation's Doings.

Results of their Visits to Toronto and Hamilton—A Market Building for Peterborough.

The deputation which visited Toronto and Hamilton have "concluded their labors" and some of them have returned to town Messrs. Cahill, Langford and Baptie continued on to London for a short pleasure trip.

Mr. E. H. D. Hall returned from Toronto Tuesday night, and Messrs. Davidson and Rutherford from Hamilton last night. The result of their interview with the Attorney General on Tuesday were made known yesterday. Their request could not be granted, and a bill to empower the corporation to borrow the $30,000 on debentures will have to be introduced at the next session of the Legislature. The deputation had a word with the Minister of Education, who, seeing that the authorities were taking steps to bring the Collegiate Institute up to the required standard, readily promised that the Institute grant would be continued.

At Hamilton the deputation was taken in charge by Mayor Doran, who, with the other civic officials, showed them every courtesy and attention. The new market building was inspected. It is a long building, somewhat after the style of the Charlotte street skating rink, 60x300 feet, extending from one street to the other. On either side of the main passage are stalls for butchers, green grocers and provisions, which bring in a rental of $4,500 a year. It is calculated that in five years the revenue will pay off the cost of the building. There is no "butter market," nor accommodation provided for farmers' wives with butter and eggs, other than the wide verandahs that run down each side of the building. In winter, of course, these places are untenable. The market committee also rent a number of small tables to women for the purpose of exhibiting their wares.

The deputation are of the opinion that the old market building here could be fitted up and enlarged to meet requirements. By adding fifty-foot wings on the north and south sides and fitting up the interior for the purpose, they think ample accommodation could be secured for a market. This would, of course, interfere with the hay scales, but there is no reason why the hay market could not be removed somewhere else. On all well regulated markets the hay department is separated from the market proper. The committee will report thereon at the next council meeting.

The deputation also inspected Hamilton's fire system, a splendid one, which created surprise in the visitors that the city is only classed "B." A test was held and the chemical engine turned out in five seconds and the other department in eight seconds. Mayor Doran, Chief McKinnon and others showed the visitors about and made things pleasant for them.

News Nuggets.

—Chancery court begins to-morrow

—The Literary and Musical Society meets to-night.

—The band is practising diligently upon a large quantity of fine new music received this winter.

—Nightwatchman Gordon while on his patrol last night found three suits of boy's clothes and five overcoats hanging in rear of Wyatt & Turner's clothing store, where they had been left by the clerks.

Personal.

Mr. A. E. Ames of Lindsay is in town to-day.

Orillia Times:—Mr. F. S. Cochrane, late of Peterborough, and erstwhile of Waubaushene, is now operator at the Diamond, replacing Mr. Brodie, who has left for the northern village above mentioned. Mr. Cochrane will move his family to Orillia shortly.

THE UNPARDONABLE SIN

Concisely Dealt With by Rev. Mr. Crossley.

Rev. Mr. Hunter Hangs Out the Lamp of Warning—There is Pardon for Blasphemers if They will Only Seek it.

Rev. Mr. Hunter's application of the parable of the foolish virgins last night was a most forcible one. Reading as a lesson the 25th chapter of Matthew, containing the parable, he likened the condition of the foolish virgins to that of many professing Christians to-day. They have the lamps of professed Christianity, but they lack the oil of grace. Again, like the five foolish virgins, there were many Christians in the church who were asleep, and so they would remain until the bridegroom cometh unless they rouse themselves. They are practically frozen up. Mr. Hunter urged them to sail out into the gulfstream of God's mercy and get thawed out. The "midnight cry" reminded him that deaths nearly always occurred during the night, and in the night of the soul God was apt to come and demand an account of it. Keep your house in order that you may always be prepared for His coming. There were three things every man should do, Mr. Hunter said—first, see that his soul was saved, then get his life insured and lastly make his will; for they could not tell at what hour the bridegroom might come. But the foolish virgins were not prepared, and the door was shut against them. To him, Mr. Hunter said, that was the most terrible passage in the Bible. The door is shut by God, and what swarthy arm of hell can open it? The lamps of the wise virgins resembled Christian life, which should shine as a light before the world. Like the light which was held up that the drowning man might see to grasp some object of safety, so the Christian's light should be as a beacon to souls in danger of being lost. Carrying out the metaphor, Mr. Hunter said that ministers of the gospel and Christian mothers were grand lamplighters who kept the fires burning. There was a harmony amongst lamps that there was not in all Christian communities. The lamps by their united forces threw out a brilliant light, but frequently the Christian light was dimmed from lack of harmony. Then there were different colored lamps. The red lamp he would swing out before every saloon as a danger signal warning men to steer clear of the rocks. He closed his address by appealing to the people to be prepared for Christ's coming—"Watch ye, for ye know not the day nor the hour when the Son of man cometh."

THE UNPARDONABLE SIN.

"Whosoever shall blaspheme against the Holy Spirit hath never forgiveness, but is guilty of an eternal sin."—Mark iii, 29 (Revised Version.)

It was very important, Mr. Crossley said, that this sin be understood, because by misconception of its meaning many a one has been driven to lunacy and suicide out of despair. They thought they had committed the unpardonable sin when really they were not guilty of it. There was much misapprehension about it, and Bob Ingersol goes so far as to say no one really knows what it is. But it was plainly defined in God's holy word, for when the Jews said to Jesus: "He hath an unclean spirit," they committed blasphemy. They accused Jesus of doing His wonderful works through Beelzebub. They did not perceive that it was through the Holy Spirit He worked the miracles, because their spiritual perception was dead. That was just what blasphemy meant—it is a state of the spiritual perception being dead, which renders possible a person expressing that sin by word or action. The sin was called an unpardonable one, not because the persons guilty of it could not be saved if they came to God, but because, being past spiritual perception, they will not ask for pardon.

There were two classes of persons, Mr. Crossley said, that he wished to speak to. The first were those who fear they have committed this unpardonable sin. Now, their very fear was a proof that they were not guilty of it, because if they fear and have a desire to come to the Lord, it shows that is not dead and so they cannot have committed the sin they fear. Some Christians, however, whose livers are not working properly, are in dread on this same point, because they think they must have gone wrong somewhere if they don't feel well. They should distinguish between physical derangement and that disturbance of the mind caused by fear of the consequences of sin. The backslider and ingdel, too, were tempted to fear that they had been guilty of blasphemy, but they had only to seek the Lord and pardon would be freely given them. Talmage calls Bob Ingersoll "the boss blasphemer of America," but even he could be saved and made a first class evangelist of it he would come to Jesus. Others who were in fear that they had committed this sin were those who had very little feeling on the matter of their soul's salvation. They argue within themselves that their lack of feeling is a sure evidence of spiritual imperception, and that therefore they have been guilty of the unpardonable sin. These should endeavor to rouse up and throw themselves on Jesus' mercy.

The second class of persons were those who have no particular anxiety about the sin, but fear they have committed it all the same. In their case it was simply a lack of spiritual perception. They sit in their seats unmoved while others about them were crying out for mercy. They were fast merging into this feeling of deadness of perception, and unless roused they would continue in this spiritual stupor until awakened by the thunders of the resurrection day. And every day they continued in this state lessened their chances of being roused, as they become more and more confirmed in their deadness of feeling. Mr. Crossley likened their condition to that of a man in the last stages of freezing, when the overpowering sleep that precedes death steals over him. Mr. Crossley earnestly pleaded with these unfeeling ones to rouse themselves. If you have no feelings to work upon, he said, act upon yourselves, upon your good sense; but don't put it off any longer. Who would dare say, "I will risk it" in the face of their loving Father

NOTES.

Mr. Crossley's song, "The Handwriting on the Wall," appears to be very popular among those who attend the services. For the second time, by special request, he sang it again last night, and announced that he would sing it once a week after this.

Miss Nellie Wrighton assisted in a duet with Mr. Crossley last night.

It is the intention of the evangelists to hold special afternoon services for children.

To-night a number of Bellaville people will give their experiences. It is expected there will be an unusually large attendance this evening, and all children under twelve are requested to remain at home and let older persons have their places.

The following requests for prayer were read:—A mother who has served the Lord for nearly 50 years on behalf of her eldest son, now confined in an inebriate asylum; for a cousin, also a young friend, both of whom were in the audience; for a brother and brother-in-law; for a young brother yet unsaved, also for the writer; for a young man who, if converted, would have a great influence in bringing others to Christ; for a cousin; for a father who never attends church; a mother for a son whose mind is failing; for a drunkard, that he may be converted. Rev. Mr. Parker offered up a fervent prayer in behalf of these requests.

As usual, a large number of people stood up in response to the powerful appeal of Rev. Mr. Hunter for those who had been roused to a realization of their position to make themselves known.

St. John's Church.

Special Wednesday Evening Services.

There was again a large congregation in St. John's church at the second of the series of Wednesday evening Lenten services. After Evening Prayer Rev. J. D. Cayley, of St. George's church, Toronto, gave, what he styled, an informal address on the subject of "Faith versus Formalism." The portion of Holy Scripture upon which he founded his remarks was the twenty-fourth verse of the fourth chapter of St. John's Gospel:—"God is a Spirit, and they that worship him must worship Him in spirit and in truth." It was inevitable, the speaker said, that, where there was worship there must be a form of some kind. Spirituality in worship was the first consideration, and though form was of secondary, it was not, on that account, of no importance whatever. The great difference between the Church of England and other religious denominations was the stress laid respectively on worship and preaching. For a perfect form of worship the speaker referred to the worship of the redeemed in Heaven as described in the Revelation of St. John the divine, and pointed out that that worship was characterised by five distinct features. It was responsive; congregational; musical; reverent and beautiful. The rule to test worship by was to note whether it brought into play all the elements of our nature, as the intellect, the conscience, the reason, the affections and sympathies. The form of worship of the Church of England had if faithfully performed, this tendency, and only when more of form was sought after than of faith and spirituality could it degenerate into formalism. All forms had a spiritual significance and were, if properly used, an expression of faith. The speaker went on to explain the spiritual significance of the different forms employed in the service of the Church of England, showing how they all served, by giving expression to faith, to strengthen faith and conduce to spirituality of worship and the building up of the Christian character. Emphasis was laid upon the definition of Christian priesthood, which consisted, not of the minister alone, but of the whole congregation, as well—"a royal priesthood," offering together spiritual sacrifices. The whole congregation were "kings and priests unto God," and thus was seen the distinction between the Church of English worship and that of other denominations, where the people were subordinated, in their part in public worship, to the priest or pastor, and were mere spectators of that which they should be sharers in, thus losing sight of the fact that the people, as well as ministers, were priests—of the royal priesthood—one in an official and the other in a private capacity. The spiritual revival of the Church of England of the past fifty years, so marked that it won the commendation of the president of the Wesleyan conference, had resulted in a return to forms of worship which were primitive and apostolic, instead of being mediæval and Roman. Spiritual life in the church preceded form, but life must have a means of expression through forms. The entire address was most interesting, spiritually edifying as well as instructive, and must have been heard to be appreciated—no mere synopsis could do it justice.

Ashburnham Brevities.

Mr. J. Ostrom is opening out in the grocery business in the stand formerly occupied as an office for the Otonabee Roller Mills.

Mr. Jas. Joy, who has been spending the winter with his parents, left this morning by the C. P. R. for Hamilton, Dakota. Jim left in a "very mournful" mood, and although Joy by name was anything but joy by nature. He left many sorrowful hearts behind him, but it is expected he'll return and make some of them glad before long, though his intentions are not to return for five years. On his way he will take in a number of the sights, having made preparations to do so before leaving. Jim is general favorite among the boys, (and needless to say among the girls too) and the best wishes are entertained for his future success.

Mrs. J. Calvert, wife of Mr. J. Calvert, whose remains were interred in Little Lake Cemetery to-day, was for many years a resident of the township of Douro. About four years ago the family moved to this village. Mrs. Calvert for a number of years back has been in very poor health. They moved to town with the hopes that better medical attendance and less anxiety would restore her but to no purpose. She has been gradually sinking. She has always been a devoted member of the Methodist church. Many are her sorrowing friends.

The residence of Mr. Theodore Joy was, Wednesday, the scene of an interesting event, being the marriage of his only daughter, Ida, to Mr. J. McMurchy, of Huttonville, and nephew of Professor McMurchy, of Toronto University. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. A. C. Wilson, of the Mark street Methodist church. Only a few relatives and intimate friends witnessed the happy event. The bride was neatly attired in a dress of cream cashmere and the bridesmaid, Miss Annie Peters, in a dress of brown. Mr. J. Joy, brother of the bride, supported the groom. After partaking of a sumptuous dinner provided by the bride's father, the happy couple left by the 5.40 p.m. C.P.R. for their new home in Huttonville, four miles north of Brampton.

Mr. McMurchy is an enterprising and energetic young man, and is proprietor of a large woollen and knitting factory in Huttonville. Mrs. McMurchy was one of Ashburnham's most popular young ladies, her gentle, unassuming and graceful manner endearing her to all with whom she came in contact. Her loss cannot be estimated. In no place will she be more missed than in the church of which she was a member. She was a member of the choir of the Mark Street Methodist Church, and teacher in the Sunday school, of which for some time she has been organist. She always engaged actively in every church work, and her loss in this department will be great. As a token of their esteem, her friends presented her with a large number of very costly presents. Space will not admit of their enumeration but a few of them are worthy of special mention. Her brother, Henry, of Hamilton, Dakota, sent her a massive silver tea service, and another brother, living in Winnipeg, a plush and bone ornament which is elegant; and the teachers and scholars of the Sunday school a plush handkerchief box and glove case. Their many friends wish them both very Mu(r)ch(y) Joy.

He, for the Karn ival.

Walkerton is excited over her Karn-ival, but it is nothing to the excitement and interest aroused in the Firemen's carnival on Friday evening. It is bound to wind up the skating season in grand style. The rink is being magnificently decorated to-day, and hundreds are busy preparing splendid fancy dress costumes. Fire Brigade band will be present. One of the best carnivals on Friday night ever held in the rink.

MR. CHAS. LEGROS now has a telephone in his tonsorial parlors for the convenience of ladies who require hairdressing done at their homes. His George street parlors are the handsomest and tastiest in town, and are fitted with hot and cold water baths. His stock of cigars, pipes and tobacco comprise the best and biggest variety. Smoke Gladstone, 5 for 25c. at Legros'. Cheap smokers should use Legros' Best, 2 for 5c.; very fine imported cigars, 3 and 4 for 25c. He is selling all best Havana cigarettes that cost 15c. per packet, at 10c. El Padre, 4 for 25c.; Creme de la Creme, 4 and 5 for 25c.

From the Bay City.

A number of Belleville people arrived in town on this morning's train for the purpose of attending this afternoon's and evening's meetings by Messrs. Crossley and Hunter. A large party will come on this evening's train, and as they will not arrive till after the meeting begins a number of front seats in the church are to be reserved for them.

THE CHARLESTON MURDER.

Popular Indignation Intense—The Assassin's Story.

CHARLESTON, S. C., March 13.—The murder of Captain Dawson was the most brutal and atrocious ever committed in Charleston. The popular indignation is intense, and the people would lynch the murderer if they could get him out of jail. Dr. McDow, Capt. Dawson's assassin, was called upon last night in jail and asked to explain the circumstances of the tragedy. He said: "Capt. Dawson entered my office, used abusive language and knocked me down with his cane. I got up, and he was about to strike me again when I shot him."

Dr. McDow then went on to say that Capt. Dawson was not killed instantly, that he remained alive for a half to three quarters of an hour, during which time McDow remained in the room with the man whose life was fast ebbing away, making up his mind what to do, but there is the strongest proof that McDow remained in the room at least an hour after the death of Capt. Dawson, planning how he might dispose of the body. The mould was observed to be freshly turned up and to a depth which was only limited by a quantity of bricks and other materials impassable to the spade or whatever instrument was used in the attempt to dig a grave. The closet door was found nailed last night, although it had evidently formerly been laid up against the opening into the closet.

It is therefore almost absolutely certain that the assassin endeavored during his long occupancy of the room with the murdered man to dig his grave and thus forever bury all proof of his crime with his victim. Dr. McDow, after finding his efforts futile, determined to set up the plea of self defence, and went out and delivered himself to the police.

THE GOLD FEVER.

Conflicting Reports From the Lower California Fields.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 13.—It is said the mining excitement in Lower California is a fraudulent scheme, deliberately planned by real estate men of Southern California, who are anxious to put new bottom in their boom. An Eastern gentleman, who has been several months in that country, says that no bona fide discovery of gold has been made, although much prospecting has been done and that this is the most brazen of all frauds Southern California has perpetrated. On the other hand, favorable reports continue to come from sources that could not be influenced by such a villainous scheme. Dr. Garcia DeLeon of San Diego, who explored Lower California for the Mexican Government two years ago, says the Peninsula is exceedingly rich not only in gold but also in other valuable minerals.

The Situation Threatening.

CHICAGO, March 13.—A special from Los Angeles to The Daily News says: Great excitement exists in the Lower California gold mining camps, and thousands of desperate gold hunters are breathing vengeance against the international company of English capitalists, whose agents lay claim to the mines and are trying to shut out Americans and others. It became known yesterday that the company had sent to San Francisco for 5000 Chinamen to work the mines, and last night the American and Mexican miners held a mass meeting and determined not to submit to the coming of coolies. They also framed a petition to the American Congress asking protection. The situation looks threatening, and a battle between the independent miners and the English company's men is looked for. Blood will certainly be shed if the company insist on bringing coolies to the camp.

The Situation in Panama.

PANAMA, March 13.—Following fast on the floods on the other side comes the stoppage of work on the canal. It is true that on some sections work has been partially resumed, but on the whole little work is in progress. This stoppage of active operations has been a severe blow to many, and while merchants are reshipping their merchandise and closing their stores in Colon, all mechanics and laborers who can leave are doing so. There is much destitution and suffering along the line of the canal and the sooner those unemployed succeed in leaving here the better it will be for them. The canal is certainly in a critical situation. An excellent idea of the change now taking place in canal management can be obtained from the fact that out of 600 men formerly employed by the Canal Company, not by contractors, only 140 are now on the books, and out of 28 doctors formerly on the Canal Company's roll, 16 have been discharged. As already announced, the Chilian Government is paying the passage of all Chilians who are desirous of returning home.

INTERIOR DECORATION

A Few Practical Illustrations from the Room Paper Department of the Peterborough Bookstore

OUR New Designs have all been selected with direct regard to their harmonious combination. DADO, WALL SPACE, FRIEZE, BORDERS and CEILINGS have been carefully chosen with regard to their relation to each other, and therefore by the use of our different Combinations Artistic and Harmonious results are obtained. Hitherto the purchaser has been forced to search through the stock of other dealers in order to find the patterns of Wall Paper, Friese and Dado that would combine even fairly well, and it has required great skill, judgment and patience to accomplish this satisfactory. However, by the use of our Paperhangings it is possible for anyone to have rooms decorated with perfect harmony, a great improvement over the old system, under which a successful interior was possible only through a skillful decorator, or by reason of a happy accident in the selection of the necessary papers. To our customers at a distance we will be pleased to forward samples and estimates of cost.

THE VESTIBULE.

The first place of your house is the Vestibule, and decorated with our new Saracenic Patterns, the prevailing effect of which is a pale sea green and a shimmering white in Arabic Design above the low Mosaic dado of blue green, traced with white and accented with cream color and chocolate on a background of sea-green Mosaic. Surmounting this is the wide frieze of intricate interlacing tracery, singularly brilliant and effective. The ceiling is covered with closely worked arabesque in the same colors but in a different pattern. It is impossible to convey any idea of the flashing brilliance of this effect. The architectural treatment of the vestibule is very simple. Since it is only a room for transient occupancy, it follows that the ornament must be bold and striking, not delicate and intricate, for there is no time for the eye to grasp these qualities.

THE STAIRWAY.

In the decoration of a stairway three things are almost indispensable. Solidity and massiveness of form and construction, breadth and effectiveness of ornament and design and the utmost richness of color. This last consideration seems almost the most imperative of all; perhaps, because hitherto the stairways have been so bold and barren. Fortunately the period of entrance tunnels and step-ladders is gone forever, and people realise now that not only does the stairway offer the best chances for effective treatment, but that it really demands almost the richest decoration in the house. It almost always happens that a hall will be more or less dark, and the deep Indian yellow and venetian red used in our designs do the most that is possible towards lightening the room and improving its appearance. A fountain of dark green verde antique, dull green rugs and blue-green draperies give the required contrast and complete the color effect.

THE DRAWING ROOM.

At the time of the æsthetic revival some years ago, the revolution was universal and complete, and, as is always the case during time of revolution, much that was inherently good suffered disgrace with that which merited its destruction. When the world awoke to a clear sense of its artistic depravity, it resolved to turn over a new leaf, leaving nothing to remind it of its former shame. So in an instant all former modes of decoration vanished, and in their place came the rigid forms, the sombre hues, and the importunate rectitude of the new regime. The actual truth and right existing in the new covenant was very great, and to it we owe our present high artistic position. Among other errors it was supposed that there was something iniquitous in white and gold; but white and gold was and still is the very noblest and most beautiful combination of color that can be made, and almost the only one which is perfectly in harmony with the character of a drawing room. The effect of this superb paper is charming—the rich design of creamy white being relieved on a ground of coppery gold. The large, broad masses of the design and the strong flowing lines combine to produce an effect that is beyond improvement.

A MORNING ROOM.

A Smoking Room, "A Den" could be applied with equal propriety. We have a design, slightly Japanese, but not slavishly so, for nothing can be more inartistic than the dull copyism which has lately been in vogue, whereby a nineteenth century room has been transformed into some exotic apartment, distant, perhaps, three thousand miles and fifteen hundred years.

Ingrains, the general color of which is warm, with a light chocolate brown, broken by small touches of many harmonious colors. The High Dado is in rather dark chocolate, covered with carelessly arranged circles of a lighter shade, and bearing different designs. The wall is very simple. Metallic flowers conventionalized on a light terra cotta ground. The ceiling is in strong contrast, a lustrous blue green, set off here and there by crimson leaves. The design is exceedingly rich and elaborate.

THE DINING ROOM.

The "Velours" and Micas with which the Dining Room is decorated are particularly rich and elaborate, giving to this most important room the dignity and repose its character demands. The designs are in varying shades of brown and gold, with coppery and irredescent gleams. The chief section of the wall is the very broad frieze. The ground is light, warm brown, with wavering parallel lines. The whole effect is most ingenious and artistic in design, and shows to excellent advantage the rich effect obtained by our combinations of varying tones of gold and plain background of simple color

THE BED CHAMBER.

The delicacy and softness of color, and tone which the character of this room requires are qualities specially noticeable in the combination of our designs. Nothing rigid or formal is admissable in a chamber, neither are brilliant colors or marked designs to be desired. Everything should be mellow, informal, perhaps luxurious, certainly not florid or gorgeous; light soft colors in quiet combinations. Hangings with large indistinct figures, of furniture with delicate curves, soft fur rugs, and plenty of cushions. These are the things most to be sought for. A chamber should be restful in every way. The velours which cover the walls are admirably suited to their purpose. The general effect is of a luminous silvery hue. The combinations of colors is most satisfactory, rich but subdued, elaborate yet broad in effect. It would be hard to find an arrangement of papers more surely successful, than the New Designs just opened out at the Peterborough Bookstore.

DINNER

is always a subject for sighs with a housekeeper and she often wishes that the law settled the question of "What shall we have for dinner," and prescribed certain dishes for certain days. Such a law would certainly save a great deal of worry and questioning to many tired women. But it is not such a difficult problem to solve after all especially in Peterborough, where we have such a good market, besides at China Hall you can secure full Dinner Sets that will grace any table for so little money that anyone can afford the outlay.
